ARE THE RAILROADS LOSING MONEY.

St. Paul Globe.

So much is said now-a-days of the railroads losing money that it may be of interest to look at a few facts as they are. Let us see what is the actual expense of taking a train of cars loaded with wheat from Chicago to New York, a distance of 912 miles. For engineer, $4 per day; fireman, $2; conductor, $4; four brakemen at $2 each, $8; $18 per day for a five days' trip, $90. The consumption of coal, $8; oil and waste, $4; use of cars, $4 each, $120; locomotive, $20; total, $152, for five days, $760. Add to this $43.80 for interest at 10 per cent. and $43.80 for wear and tear, we have $937.60.

To find the cost per ton at twenty tons per car divide by 600 tons we have the actual cost of $1.56 and a fraction per ton, or $31.20 per car. At a schedule of 20 cents per 100 pounds for carrying we have $4 per ton or $80 per car. Substract the actual cost of $31.20 we have a net profit to the company of $48.80. On a train of thirty cars the railroad king thus receives a clear gain of $1,464. Bear in mind this is on second-class freight, while rates on first-class are over 40 cents per hundred and the profit proportionately greater.

While our merchants are struggling to secure a 20 per cent. profit in their business, the railroad magnate laughs in his sleeve as he puts away over 100 per cent. It costs the Minnesota farmer four bushels of corn for every bushel delivered in New York, while the same extortion compels him to pay three times the real value for the necessities of life. It is about time that the government took a hand in the management of our telegraphs and our railroads, whose rights of way have cost the magnates little or nothing, while the subsidies granted have more than paid the expense of construction.

The subsidies of land granted to railroads foot up the enormous sum of 181,618,766 of acres. One hundred and forty millions have not yet been certified to. At $5 per acre the sum value of the land is $908,093,830. Do you wonder that as individuals we are growing poorer, while corporate monopoly is rapidly taking possession of the nation? The masses struggling for bread while the railroad kings in their palaces plot to escape dividends and taxes, and discharge their men in order to extend their unlawful "absorption."

GRAIN PRICES---DON'T BE SCARED!

Prairie Farmer.

At this writing, on the afternoon of August 17, wheat is selling about 8 cents a bushel lower than a week ago. This means over three million dollars shrinkage in the value of the 42 million bushels "in sight." Before the ink dries, the printer's ink, it may be up anywhere from one to five cents, or it may be down a few cents more. At the moment the bears seem to have got the bulls on the run, and are having things their own way. Perhaps to-morrow the bulls may turn around and use their horns. The bears have the advantage just now, and are more likely to have for two or three months, more or less......Why? There are in the Chicago elevators over 14½ million bushels of wheat, and over 40 million bushels of "visible" wheat, that is, out of producers' hands and seeking a market at the various points east of the Rocky Mountains, including Canada—a larger amount, if our memory serves rightly, than ever before at this date. And new wheat is just ready to flow in. Unlike corn, this grain does not have to dry and cure two or three months after cutting, but can go to the elevators as soon as it is threshed. Then, the majority of the growers in the great wheat regions have no home barns or granaries in which to store their wheat. It is threshed from the shocks in the field, run from the threshers and separator into bags borrowed from buyers, and has to go to market, let the price be what it may. Under these circumstances, there must needs be, for a time, an increase in the stock "in sight," and so long as there are more sellers than buyers prices will necessarily sag. But the 42 million bushels in sight, if not added to, would only last the country some two months if not a bushel were sent abroad, as some will be any way. At 4½ bushels per person, 57 million people consume 256¼ million bushels (256,500,000 bu.) a year, at which rate the 42 million bushels in market would last only 65 days.

There is no question now that there is a large decrease in the actual winter and spring wheat grown this year, as compared with last—certainly a hundred million bushels less. We have on the market some 25 million bushels more than last year at this date; but there are at least 100 million bushels less to come in from the producers during the year. It would certainly seem that later on, next winter, and spring, and summer, this present surplus, and that which producers must market now for want of home storage, and by reason of necessity for money, must be largely decreased. The only drawback is, that foreign markets have unusually large stocks on hand, and the wheat-growing area has been widened recently. But there is not that universal abundance of good crops throughout the world that existed in 1884; and consumption is going right along, everywhere, at the regular rate—indeed, at an unusually fast rate so long as prices remain as low as at present, everywhere.

We are no prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but from the best survey of the whole field possible to be made now, it would seem to be wise for all who can do so to hold on to their grain, and let the present market stocks, and the first rush of new wheat, wear away. Of course those who have no perfectly safe storage, and those who must positively receive cash for their crop at once, will have to sell. If there were no such persons, and all could hold on, prices would jump up in a very few weeks. They may as it is. A good deal depends upon the ability and the determination of the farmers to hold the wheat back for paying rates; and also upon the weather for four weeks to come, which will decide the amount of good corn we shall have.

FARM NOTES.

Farmers' Tribune.

CHEESE MAKING.

In an essay on "Fancy Cheese Making" by T. D. Curless, of Syracuse, N. Y., occurs the following:

"Pure, whole milk from healthy cows in sweet pastures, or fed duly balanced rations in stalls, is requisite. The more directly it goes into the vat the better. If kept over night reduce the milk to 62 degrees. An agitation to keep the cream from rising, is desirable. Mix night's and morning's milk when ready to work. If cream is to be incorporated, warm it and pass it through a wine strainer. Heat the milk slowly to 84 or 86 degrees. Add your coloring matter and rennet enough to begin coagulation in ten or twenty minutes, as desired. Cut the curd as soon as it can done without waste, as fine as beechnuts. Slowly raise the temperature, gently stirring it the while, to 98 degrees. Hold it there to the end. Draw the whey as soon as there is the least sign of acid, or before. Get sufficient rennet action to expel the whey before the acid develops. This prevents the phosphate from washing out, and insures a digestible cheese when properly cured. If you chedder and grind, or not, thoroughly stir and air the curd, to get rid of bad odors and develop flavor. Put to press not above 89 degrees, and place in an even-tempered curing-room at 65 to 70 degrees. Avoid direct draughts of air and carefully turn and rub the cheese.

EGGS MORE PROFITABLE THAN CHICKENS.

We make no allusion to those large chicken establishments where raising chickens as chickens for a near city market is undoubtedly a paying business. But we address the common poultry raiser, living, perhaps a considerable distance from market, who wishes to make the most and best of his stock. And to such we say raise every pullet yous premises will accommodate. Treat them in such a manner that they will lay early and constantly through the winter, and you will make more money than you can by raising chickens to sell for broilers, unless at the fancy prices that such things bring in cities.

Most country breeders have no such market for what they chance to have to sell, and the prices they obtain at the country hotel or the house of the wealthy citizen by no means pays for the extra trouble and care that early chickens cost.

Of course, if you have a large number of fowls, there would necessarily be cockerels and old hens to fatten for sale, but do not make your business to sell dead stock, instead of making live hens give you hundreds of eggs every year of their lives.

POTATOES MIXING IN THE HILL.

There appears to be a large number of farmers who still cling to the absurd belief that wheat, oats and even timothy under certain conditions change into chess, and no amount of argument or array of facts to the countrary will convince them of their error. Of late years the theory of potatoes mixing in the hill seems to have gained almost as many converts as that relating to the transformation of wheat into chess. Quite recently we read a communication in a city paper from an old farmer near Penn Yan, N. Y., in which he expresses his surprise at the ignorance of his brother farmers, who doubt the mixing of potatoes through the influence of tubers of different varieties which may be planted in the same hill. This man and others who believe as he does, appear to have never heard of such things as "bud variations" in plants, and therefore they attribute all changes in color and form to the mixture of well known and long established varieties which may happen to be planted near each other.

PROFITS OF SHEEP RAISING.

A flock of sheep, says the Rural Canadian, "should double themselves each year, and early lambs will sell for quite as much as the sheep cost in the first place, thus leaving the parent stock and the wool to the good. In fact, sheep breeding is one of the best paying branches of mixed farming, especially in this country, with its dry climate and rich pastures. There is no country in the world where sheep thrive so well, are so free from disease, and attain such perfection as in Canada. Those farmers who are neglecting this important industry are standing in their own light, and those who have kept their flocks by careful breeding have never done so well as during the past few years." These remarks apply equally well to any part of this State.

Patents Accumulating.

At 4½ bushels per person 57 million people consume 256½ million bushels, (256,500,000 bu.) a year, at which rate the 42 million bushels in market would last only 65 days.

There is no question now that there is a large decrease in the actual winter and spring wheat grown this year, as compared with last—certainly a hundred million bushels less. We have on the market some 25 million bushels more than last year at this date, but there are at least 100 million bushels less to come in from the producers during the year. It would certainly seem that later on, next winter and spring, and summer, this present surplus, and that which producers must market now for want of home storage, and by reason of necessity for money, must be largely decreased. The only drawback is, that foreign markets have unusually large stocks on hand, and the wheat growing area has been widened recently. But there is not that universal abundance of good crops throughout the world that existed in 1884, and consumption is going right along everywhere, at the regular rate—indeed, at an unusually fast rate so long as prices remain as low as at present everywhere.

We are no prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but from the best survey of the whole field possible to be made now, it would seem to be wise for all who can do so to hold on to their grain and let the present market stocks and the first rush of new wheat wear away. Of course those who have no perfectly safe storage, and those who must positively receive cash for their crop at once, will have to sell. If there were no such persons and all could hold on, prices would jump up quite [illegible] few weeks. They may as [illegible] good deal depends upon the ability and the determination of the farmers to hold the wheat back [illegible] and also upon the [illegible] which will [illegible] the amount of good corn we shall have.

FARM NOTES.

CHEESE MAKING.

[illegible] cheese making by [illegible] in sweet pastures, or fed duly balanced rations in stalls, is requisite. The more directly it goes into the vat the better. If kept over night reduce the milk to 62 degrees. An agitation to keep the cream from rising is desirable. Mix night's and morning's milk when ready to work. If cream is to be incorporated warm it and pass it through a wire strainer. Heat the milk slowly to 84 or 86 degrees. Add your coloring matter and rennet enough to begin coagulation in ten or twenty minutes as desired. Cut the curd as soon as it can be done without waste as fine as beechnuts. Slowly raise the temperature, gently stirring it the while, to 98 degrees. Hold it there to the end. Draw the whey as soon as there is the least sign of acid, or before. Get sufficient rennet action to expel the whey before the acid develops. This prevents the phosphate from washing out, and insures a digestible cheese when properly cured. If you cheddar, and grind, or not, thoroughly stir and air the curd to get rid of bad odors and develop flavor. Put to press not above 80 degrees, and place in an even-tempered curing-room at 65 to 70 degrees. Avoid direct draughts of air and carefully turn and rub the cheese.

EGGS MORE PROFITABLE THAN CHICKENS.

We make no allusion to those large chicken establishments where raising chickens as chickens for a near city market is undoubtedly a paying business. But we address the common poultry raiser, living perhaps a considerable distance from market, who wishes to make the most and best of his stock. And to such we say, raise every pullet your premises will accommodate. Treat them in such a manner that they will lay early, and constantly through the winter, and you will make more money than you can by raising chickens to sell for broilers unless at the fancy prices that such things bring in cities.

Most country breeders have no such market for what they chance to have to sell, and the prices they obtain at the country hotel or the house of the wealthy citizen by no means pays for the extra trouble and care that early chickens cost.

Of course, if you have a large number of fowls, there would necessarily be cockerels and old hens to fatten for sale, but do not make your business to sell dead stock, instead of making live hens give you hundreds of eggs every year of their lives.

POTATOES MIXING IN THE HILL.

There appears to be a large number of farmers who still cling to the absurd belief that wheat, oats and even timothy, under certain conditions, change into chess, and no amount of argument or array of facts to the contrary will convince them of their error. Of late years the theory of potatoes mixing in the hill seems to have gained almost as many converts as that relating to the transformation of wheat into chess. Quite recently we read a communication in a city paper from an old farmer near Penn Yan, N. Y., in which he expresses his surprise at the ignorance of his brother farmers who doubt the mixing of potatoes through the influence of tubers of different varieties which may be planted in the same hill. This man and others who believe as he does, appear to have never heard of such things as "bud variations" in plants and therefore they attribute all changes in color and form to the mixture of well known and long established varieties which may happen to be planted near each other.

PROFITS OF SHEEP RAISING.

A flock of sheep, says the Rural Canadian, should double themselves each year, and early lambs will sell for quite as much as the sheep cost in the first place, thus leaving the parent stock and the wool to the good. In fact, sheep breeding is one of the best paying branches of mixed farming, especially in this country, with its dry climate and rich pastures. There is no country in the world where sheep thrive so well, are so free from disease, and attain such perfection as in Canada. Those farmers who are neglecting this important industry are standing in their own light, and those who have kept their flocks by careful breeding have never done so well as during the past few years. These remarks apply equally well to any part of this state.

All those who have patents at the U. S. Land Office in Crookston are hereby requested to bring along their receipts and get their patents. There are many patents awaiting claimants who seem to be somewhat slow in claiming them.

EVERETT will be allowed 25 cows upon the following terms: For thoroughbred Holstein cows $10. For native cows and grades of any breed $5 to insure. For other particulars call on me at the farm, or address me at Crookston.

Holstein cattle are popular because they are the greatest milk producers known; they produce the most butter and cheese; are very large, fat easily and make excellent beef. As a breed they are remarkably docile and easily managed; are very hardy and give the very best satisfaction; they make the very best family and town cows in the world. They possess more desirable qualities than any other breed.—Rural World.

Crookston, Sept. 3, 1885.

'ROUND HOME.

School and trouble commences next Monday.

Mrs. A. L. Lindsley departs for her home in Chicago this week.

The farmers are having excellent weather for stacking and threshing.

Conductor J. B. Copeland will remove his family into the H. G. Palmer house, on Broadway, this week.

Mr. Wm. Box takes possession of his handsome new residence on Jerome's addition this week. He has been plastering and fixing up generally and now has as pleasant a home as the city can boast.

The wheat market is as yet unsettled and unsatisfactory. While there is every reason why wheat should advance in the early future, it does not brighten up worth a cent.

High authority pronounces the President's proclamation, ordering all cattle removed from the Indian Reservation at once, unconstitutional. The cattlemen have retained Ben Butler and will contest the order in the courts.

Felix Fournet's new building, corner of Broadway and Robert, begins to foreshadow what it will be like. The first and second stories are up and still the good work goes merrily on. When completed it will be a credit to our city and to its enterprising builder. Would there were more like Felix in Crookston.

The new hotel on the corner of Main and Fifth is nearly ready for occupancy and is, we understand, as yet awaiting a landlord. It is intended for a farmers' hotel and its location near to elevator and stables renders it eligible for the purpose. With the right man at the helm it would be a paying institution from the start.

A funny looking kind of a straddlebug left the vicinity of Stone & Pinkerton's warehouse on Monday noon and proceeded gravely, and in a businesslike manner along up main street, forninst the hind end of a wagon. Upon inquiry our reporter learned that it was perfectly safe to have around a dairy. It was only a new fangled hayloader.

Mr. S. P. Norton, the retiring landlord of the Commercial, goes to his farm to superintend his fall work there, after which he will doubtless again return to the city to engage in business. He is too restlessly ambitious to long lie idle, and it will not be long ere he will bob up serenely again at the head of some hotel project or some other business venture.

As per announcement in our last issue the post office was moved into its new quarters on Main street on Saturday evening. Postmaster McKinnon has fixed things up in a neat and attractive manner and can boast of as neat an office as any of 'em. He seems bound to serve the public well and faithfully even though he does not accumulate wealth rapidly.

They have struck another bugbear at Duluth. It is said that the wheat looks "too pale!" That while it is hard enough and weighs enough for No. 1 Hard, it is "too white to be so graded!" Great Cæsar's ghost! Heretofore they have howled because the wheat was not clean enough, and now they say it's "too clean!" Is there any such thing as suiting a wheat dealer, anyhow?

Peter Carroll, of Grand Forks, has rented the Commercial Hotel in this city and taken possession. We learn that soon in the future the office and dining rooms are to be removed into the brick block on Broadway which will make a large, roomy hotel of the Commercial. The Grand Forks papers speak in high terms of the ability of Mr. Carroll as a landlord and the JOURNAL bids him a hearty welcome to our city.

Sheriff Vanstrum, of Kittson County, and Chief of Police Murray, of Winnipeg, arrived on the four a. m. train, Tuesday, having in charge an individual supposed to be Ed. Kelley, known as Bull dog Kelley, who is wanted at Missoula, Montana, for the murder of Robert Baird, of that place, in December last. Baird was taking a large amount of money to British Columbia and was murdered while on the way. The Montana and Canadian authorities claim to have conclusive evidence that Kelley is the man who committed the murder. Kelley will remain here in the county jail until the necessary papers can be procured for his removal to Montana. He was arrested at a hotel in St. Vincent on Monday.

A team belonging to John Clillback broke away from the driver, John Kirkman, on Monday afternoon, and at the the corner of Main street and Fletcher avenue collided with a lumber wagon in which were seated two women, upsetting the wagon in a second and landing the women with promptness and dispatch in the middle of the public highway. From this they proceeded along Main street until in front of the residence of Conductor J. B. Copeland they collided with a little wagon drawn by little Fannie, the conductor's little daughter, a little three-year-old miss. Strange to say no one was seriously hurt although the prospects in that direction were more than double first-class for a few moments. The team was stopped in the vicinity of Alderman Fontaine's residence, unhurt, but the buggy was much the worse for wear and the lumber wagon needs a new reach badly.

Pretty coolish days, these.

Jim Greenhalgh started his thresher at Chris Houston's on Monday.

S. E. Chapin has returned to take up his abode in Crookston for awhile.

Fergus Falls indulged in a $16,000 blaze last week and a first-class suicide.

Ira D. Blanchard has got a flow of water on the farm of M. R. Brown near this city.

Mr. Wm. Ross and his sister, Mrs. D. Jacobus, returned on Friday from their visit to Scotland.

A. E. Brush and D. McLennan were down from Angus on Monday in attendance at the auction sale of horses of M. R. Brown.

A camp of the order of Sons of Veterans is soon to be organized in this city. All sons of veterans are cordially invited to join.

Conductor J. B. Copeland has been at home a few days enjoying a visit from his brother Sam. He resumed his duties on Monday evening.

The fare to the State Fair will be one and one-fifth fare. A person can start on Saturday, September 5th, and remain until Monday, September 15th.

The auction sale of horses at Brown's stables on Monday was fairly well attended and the horses sold went cheap. However, Brown sold 'em all the same, just as he had advertised to do.

Grand Forks Herald: Peter Carroll has rented the Commercial Hotel at Crookston and will take possession immediately. Mr. Carroll is a first-class landlord, and Crookston is to be congratulated.

I. M. Underhill surprised his wife and friends one day last week by dropping in upon them for a visit when they supposed that he was miles and miles away. He has gone back to Ohio, accompanied by his wife and her sister, Miss Elsie Jennings.

In addition to the losses by hail we have reported, we learn that about 100 acres of wheat was totally destroyed on the farm of O. Owens, on Section 11, in Russia township. The crop was put in by Peter Cornelius and was said to have been a splendid one before the hail.

Sheriff Zwickey returned from Duluth on Monday, after having performed the duty which called him there. He secured a piece of the rope which hung Wesenan, which job, he says, was performed with neatness and dispatch, the prisoner maintaining his stoicism to the last.

A G. A. R. post will be organized at Red Red Lake Falls on Thursday and Col. Cobham post has been notified that Department Commander, R. A. Becker, and Chief Mustering Officer, H. B. Brooks, will meet with the boys at their hall in Crookston, on next Friday evening. Let there be a good turnout.

Mrs. J. N. Ives wishes us to say that she is prepared to receive a few more pupils in drawing, both in pencil and crayon; also in oil painting, in either flowers or landscape, at her rooms, corner of Main and Second streets, over W. Clements fancy store, where she will be pleased to show work or give terms. [19-20]

D. H. Fisk, the rustling lawyer from Ada, was up on legal business this week. He has faith in his railroad scheme bigger than a woodchuck, and we sincerely hope he will not be disappointed. A road from Fargo via Ada and Fertile would not be a bad thing to have in the family. Let 'er come, D. H., we are here first.

Peter Cornelius informs us that the John Owens buggy horse, that he was keeping, sickened and died on Sunday night. The horse had symptoms of poisoning and Peter thinks he had eaten some poison herb in the pasture. Though all remedies were tried that could be, it was of no avail to save the life of the horse. It was an excellent animal.

Mr. Charles Kretzschmar and wife, accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Schrieter, of Red Lake Falls, returned from a visit to Wisconsin, last week. Mr. K. looked as smiling as a June rose while he informed us that he had made arrangements to commence work at the mills at an early day. Mr. K. deserves great success on account of the indomitable pluck and energy he has displayed.

Mr. J. W. Smith of the Fargo Loan Agency of Eddy & Smith, is up to see how Christianson & Melgaard get along. No sooner had he arrived and looked over our city awhile than Christianson hitched up his fiery roadsters for a trip over the country to show Mr. S. what like Polk County is in the fall. They will interview the thriving Thirteen Towns on their trip and will be out some days.

The Breeders' Gazette, of Chicago, is one of the most valuable farm and stock papers that comes to our table. In fact, we are prepared to say that it is indispensible to the intelligent stock-raiser, containing in one issue, information worth the whole subscription price for one year. It is a large weekly paper, each issue containing not less than 36 pages of valuable information to the general farmer, and stock raiser. The subscription price is $3 per annum, but we can furnish it to our readers for $2, or we can send it from now until Jan. 1st, '86, for only FIFTY CENTS! Copies may be seen at this office where subscriptions may be paid. The offer of fifty cents is open to all. Anybody can send fifty cents to J. H. Sanders, Chicago, Ill., and receive the Gazette from the time the subscription is received until Jan. 1st, '86. Try it. It will pay you.

S. R. Norris, a Crookston old-timer was up from Otter Tail Co., this week. He is agent for the Spencer shot-gun, which is the boss gun.

C. B. Palmer is back from Tonica, Ill., looking fat and healthy. If it wasn't for making a horrid pun we should say he ought to, coming from such a place!

Grand Forks Plaindealer: P. Carroll, formerly of the Northwestern Hotel, of this city, has leased the Commercial House at Crookston, and will conduct the same in the future. Mr. Carroll's many friends in this city hope he will have such a run of patronage as he deserves, and all know that those who stop with him will be well cared for.

Duluth News: One dollar a bushel is what the bonanza farmers of the Red River Valley are waiting for, and the probabilities are that they will get it. Too much has been expected from the spring wheat crop, and when the effect of the hot spells and the Hessian flies have been fully realized a sharp upward movement will be in order. Those who can afford to hold their wheat this year will have a practical illustration of the old saying that "patient waiters are no losers."

There has been a row in Duluth already over grades. A party from Dakota shipped a number of carloads, while threshing, and the first few cars were graded No. 1 Hard, the balance No. 1 Northern. The shipper claims that the reason the wheat was graded down was that it was partly Saskatchewan Fife, and that under the inspection laws all Saskatchewan Fife will be undergraded while it is in point of fact as good as Scotch Fife. The inspectors claim that in that individual case it was as high as the wheat would bear. But there seems to be a point in the complaint which, while it may not apply in this case might in others. It is a fact that No. 1 Hard as defined by the Board must consist of a certain per cent of Scotch Fife, and no provision is made allowing No. 1 Hard for Saskatchewan Fife. If the rule is to be strictly interpreted according to the letter no one can get justice, who happens to have Saskatchewan Fife. A meeting of the Board is to be held to investigate the point which is well taken.

Ex-mayor Walsh put his nobby little black before his easy riding phaeton on Tuesday and invited us to take a seat for a ride into the country. We accepted with pleasure and rode north as far as the stock farm of Mr. J. O. Milne, on section 8, town of Crookston. En route we saw the grain stacks rising as if by magic, and if we should judge by the quantity of straw that is to be seen, we could wax very enthusiastic over the big yields of No. 1 Hard, awaiting the happy husbandman, but too well we know how deceptive are appearances, for the blight, caused by too much wet has got in its work but too surely, howbeit, what little grain there will be threshed out bids fair to be above the average. We found farmer Milne busy rigging up for stacking his wheat crop, already in the shook and he straightway forsook his rigging and took us about to examine the blooded stock. We first interviewed a pen of six half-blood Holsteins, calves, ranging from six weeks old to three months and one three-quarter blood Holstein, nine months old. These we found to be all fine, thrifty, fellows and were informed that they were all skim-milk calves. They show by their surprising growth and thrifty appearance that the Holstein does not need babying but that he is able to rustle for his living with the best of them. We next interviewed a pen of shorthorn grade calves that were not near so good nor fine in appearance as their Holstein neighbors. The ex-mayor was surprised at the fine appearance of Everett, a fine thoroughbred Holstein bull, two years past. Everett is one of the finest animals of his kind ever brought to this county and his influence will be felt in the future as many of the surrounding farmers have availed themselves of this opportunity for improving their stock. We were then taken out into an 80 acre pasture field where, among a lot of ordinary cows, the dairy stock, we found three noble Holstein cows, Marilla, a fine large cow two-past, Frisky, a fine cow two-past and Marilla 2d a fine heifer 15 months old Sept. 15th, also Jennie, a grade Holstein and shorthorn cow and Grayling a Holstein and native half-blood. Grayling had a fine two-weeks old heifer calf at her side and we found two other fine grade calves, one four weeks old, and a fine heifer calf one day old. Mr. W. expressed much surprise and pleasure at the fine display of stock made at this early day and predicted unbounded success for the enterprise. Mr. Milne intends to engage in diversified husbandry. He will raise cows, horses and hogs and will also raise each year some wheat besides the necessary grain for the stock. He has a fine crop of millet which in a few days will turn a fine swath of excellent hay. He has a patch of buckwheat which by the way, owing to the extreme wet, has not done very well this year. He will make some butter and as he uses the creamery plan, will have sweet skim-milk to feed his growing calves. From all that we saw and know of Mr. Milne's operations since he went on the place on April 1st last, we should say that he has struck the true key note, and we are prepared to say to all farmers who wish to attain the highest success, "Go thou and do likewise."

Deputy Register of Deeds, Clark Van Housen, is expected back from the east this week.

A slight sprinkle on Wednesday delayed stacking and threshing operations a bit.

Conductor Tom Stahl was taking a bit of a lay-off in the city yesterday. Tom is one of the best conductors on the line.

E. D. Childs reports cutting all done and threshing commenced. To the question as to "what will the harvest be?" he shook his head and said: "Don't mention it! Impossible to say until the threshing machine tells the story!" But we gathered from his manner that he is not sanguine of large returns this year.

Mr. John Knuppe is indefatigable in his efforts to secure a good showing for Polk County at the coming State Fair. He has been out early and late gathering them in and has a fine collection, which left for the fair grounds last night. He deserves great credit for the good work he has done.

Thirteen Towns: It is with regret that we announce the departure Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Foss for Red Wing, this State. Mr. F. established the first trading post and post office in the Thirteen Towns and has at all times taken a more or less active part in public affairs. His departure is mainly due to the fact that he has not felt safe here since the time he was shot at by some dastardly villain. Mr. and Mrs. Foss carry the best wishes of the community with them.

MINNESOTA STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The history of this excellent organization is full of interest, running as it does from the earliest days of the territory. The society was founded in 1855 as a territorial society, and in 1860 it was incorporated under its present name. This year it holds its twenty-seventh annual fair; festivals having been omitted three years during the civil war. The society has experienced many ups and downs, some years having grand success and at other seasons barely paying the expenses. During the life of the organization it has floated from the center to the southern part of the State, now meeting with reverses and again achieving grand triumphs. The first fairs were held at Fort Snelling and they were smaller than many of the county fairs of the present time. Other State fairs have been held at Saint Paul, Minneapolis, Rochester, Winona and Owatonna.

It had long been the desire of those most interested in an organization of this character to obtain some permanent location, but it was not until the fall of 1884 that anything entirely satisfactory was offered. Then the tender of the Ramsey County poor farm, situated just outside of the limits of St. Paul and exactly midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis, seemed to solve the problem, and the beautiful tract of two hundred acres was accepted. The legislature of 1885 appropriated $100,000 for improving the grounds and erecting buildings, and the Agricultural Society is now fixed forever on one of the most attractive spots it is possible to conceive of. The grounds, which are 2,425 feet east and west, and 3,025 feet north and south, are rolling and perfectly drained, and afford the best opprtunity for beautifying.

The officers of the society have most judiciously invested the fund devoted to the purpose, and the grounds of the society are now such as must gratify the pride of every citizen. The poor farm building, which is a solid brick structure, two stories in height, is used as the headquarters of the society. The main building is 806x242 feet and is in the form of a cross. It is very ornamental, being of brick and glass, and is surmounted by a massive dome. Machinery Hall is 128x64 feet, corresponding in style to the main building. Dairy Hall is 48x80 feet, and an Art Gallery of the same dimensions will be built next year. There are four cattle barns 145x69 feet, and four horse barns of the same size, all located along a broad avenue. Six stables for fast horses, placed near the new track, are each 72x24 feet, and each have fourteen box stalls. Buildings for hogs, sheep and poultry are conveniently situated and are very large. For agricultural implements three buildings, each 54x200 feet, have been erected.

The grand amphitheatre is 592x65 feet and will seat 15,000 people. It has six hundred reserved seats and ninety-six private boxes. The new track is without a peer in the United States. It is expected that very fast time will be made on it this season.

The management are preparing an exhibition that will in many particulars excel all previous ones. They offer $25,000 in premiums and $15,000 in prizes for speed trials. The stock display will be immense, and one grand and novel feature will be a public auction of fine horses and cattle, which will be held on the three last days of the fair under the management of Capt. P. C. Kidd, the famous stock auctioneer of Lexington, Ky. A host of attractive novelties have been arranged for, and vast crowds will undoubtedly visit the festival to inspect the splendid new property in which they are owners. The grounds are on the line of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway, twelve minutes ride from each city. The railroads throughout the northwest make very low rates during the fair, and the whole population, men, women and children should come to be instructed and entertained.

Farmers should make it as much a part of their business to attend these annual fairs, as merchants do their periodical visits to the markets. Such excursions are certain to prove of profit to them, as they afford them opportunities to learn of improvements in machinery, and they will find themselves in contact with their brethren of the same profession, with whom the interchange of ideas will be mutually advantageous. They will gain valuable ideas as to diversified farming, will discover new and desirable varieties of seeds and plants, and can inspect the best breeds of stock. In a hundred ways will these visits be of advantage to the farmer and stock breeder, besides the good that a trip will do him physically and mentally. There is not much expense attached to these visits, and they should not be looked upon as pleasure trips but as duties; and every farmer should aid in making these fairs successful by attending them and by contributing to the exhibitions from his farm or stock.

DIGEST OF LAND DECISIONS!

By the Commissioner of the General Land Office and Secretary of the Interior, prepared and reported semi-monthly for the Polk County Journal by Archibald Young, Attorney at Law, and late Examiner of Mining, Railroad, Homestead, Pre-emption and other contest cases in General Land Office. Office 637 F. St., Washington, D. C.

PRACTICE.

Attorneys appearing for alleged fraudulent entrymen required to file written authority from claimants. Where an entry is held for cancellation on special agents' reports 60 days will be allowed for appeal, or to show cause why entry should be sustained. (Circular of July 31st, 1885.)

2d. Where notice is given by publication it must appear that diligence has been used to obtain personal service and that copy of notice has been sent by registered mail to claimants last known address and also posted on the land. Affidavit of contest must allege continuance of default up to date of affidavit. (Parker vs. Castle. "Review." Secry. Aug. 3d, 1885.)

PREEMPTIONS.

A woman who marries after making a settlement and filing, and prior to entry forfeits her preemption right. (Chamberlin vs. Drucker. Secr'y. July 28th, 1885.)

2d. A preemptor of land in one county having become an officer in another county under a law requiring him to be an inhabitant of such county is stopped from asserting a residence on said claim during the term of office. Circular of April 22d, 1875, erroneous in requiring claimants at hearings upon their perfected entries "to submit their testimony first, subject to cross examination and rebuttal." (Exparte Burns. Secr'y. July 25th, 1885.)

HOMESTEADS.

If widow of deceased entryman remarries before final proof, the certificate should be made out in her present name and describing her as formally the widow of the deceased, naming him. (Exparte Hingst. Com'r. July 29th, 1885.)

TIMBER CULTURE.

Planting of Osage orange trees or cuttings not a compliance with the law. (Taylor vs. Hauffman. Com'r. June 20th, 1885.)

MINERALS.

A survey and application for patent not followed up by requisite notice confers no exclusive right to the claim and after due notice and proofs on a second application by another party for the same premises, all persons, including first applicant, are precluded from settling up an adverse claim. (Old America lode vs. Stevens et al. Acting Secr'y. July 20th, 1885.)

DESERT LANDS.

Land partly desert or which will produce hay or other agricultural crop cannot be entered under desert act. Entry must be of land in compact form. Contignity not compactness. (Com'r. to Special Ggent George July 22d, 1885.)

Unprofitable Cows in the Dairy.

Prairie Farmer.

An English dairy writer recently asserted that "every third cow in Great Britain is unprofitable in the dairy." This is a strong statement, but as yet seems to have gone unchallenged. Is not the same thing true in this country outside of a few of the older dairy districts? We have asked the opinion of prominent dairymen on the subject and some of them will not except even one district, though saying there are many single dairies where an unprofitable cow can hardly be found. On the other hand there are numerous herds where 33 per cent. will fall short of giving the unproductive number. The same is undoubtedly true of the family cows in beef-producing neighborhoods, where butter and cheese do not figure among the marketable farm products. How many families can one count in most grain, grass and live-stock regions to whom a half dozen cows barely furnish sufficient dairy articles for the home table? This keeping of worthless cows is one of the leaks of our farm system, as great as it is needless. A good producer of rich milk is as easily kept as an inferior cow, save perhaps the capital invested in bull service or ownership. In a dairy of a dozen, fifteen or twenty-five cows, even 25 per cent. of unprofitable animals means an unprofitable business or at least, supposing the remainder to be exceptionally good, an unsatisfactory business. When we hear a man say that dairying is played out, every time there is a period of depression in the butter and cheese markets, we feel like asking him how many cows his herd contains that do not "pay their keep," to say nothing about the labor and care they require or the interest on the "plant" upon which they should return a fair profit. The closing months of the summer dairying season are approaching, yet there is ample time remaining for every man to test the cows he is keeping. Those being cared for at a loss may be fattened for beef or disposed of to the best advantage possible. It is folly to put up hay and grain to feed inferior milk-producing cows through the long winter. No amount of care and trouble, and no amount of intelligence in the manipulation of milk or cream can make a profitable business of the keeping of 33 per cent. of profitless cows. The foundation of dairy success is the first-class cow; the rest depends on the man or woman in charge.

Sheep Raising.

It is doubtful whether the average farmer can make a more profitable investment, in a moderate way, than in keeping a few head of well-selected sheep. No well-regulated farm should be without them. Aside from the income derived from the sale of wool, early lambs or mutton sheep, it is well understood by the practical farmer, in the older settled portions of the country, that sheep are the greatest scavengers that can be placed on the farm. No matter how good or plentiful the grass may be in their range, it will be found that they have quite effectually trimmed the tender shoots of most of the indigenous weeds. An exchange says that mutton-raising seems to be attracting the attention of sheep men to an unusual extent in these days of low wool, and they are discussing through the papers the relative profitableness of this and wool-growing, with the tendency just now to make the balance appear in the favor of mutton-growing. All the time it is insisted that the sheep must be big, well-shaped, plump and fat, or the best of their kind, to make exclusive mutton-raising pay. Certainly this is right, and the same is equally true of wool-growing. To derive any profit from the growing of wool above actual expenses, the sheep must be the best of the wool-bearing breeds, and the fleece must be long and clean stapled, fine and densely fibered. Where these high standards of excellence are attained, sheep will under ordinary circumstances yield some profit, whether they be of the mutton or wool breeds, even when ordinary or low grade sheep would be grown at a positive loss.

The Northwestern Breeders Association held an auction sale of thoroughbred Shorthorns and grade Holsteins at Fargo last week. The Argus reports the results as follows:

The Ladies' Temperance Column.

PLEDGE.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the Baptist chapel, Thursday, August 20th, twenty-five ladies being present.

After the usual devotional exercises, conducted by the President, the annual reports were offered, from which the following facts are gathered: Membership of the Crookston Union at the close of the year, 24. Money received, $27.70, Paid out, $6.56. Balance in treasury, $21.14.

The President's report consisted of a review of the work of the Union during the year, a consideration of the needs of the field, and an earnest appeal to women to unite in the work. Is your sympathy with the workers? Yet you feel that you, individually, cannot do anything; that you do not know what you can do! Do the next thing. Put yourself in a position to know what the work is; what women may do; what other women have done. Encourage the workers by your presence and interest. One woman cannot work alone. We must all work and together.

The work for the coming year was outlined. Through the temperance column in the Journal we may speak to the people. At our monthly Sunday evening lecture, we have their hearing. Temperance literature is being distributed but not so systematically as is necessary. Temperance text books should be introduced in the public schools, as has been done in other places. We must secure that reading room, and just as soon as possible.

At the close of the address an opportunity was given to those present who were not members to join the Union and six new members were added to the twenty-four, making the present membership thirty.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Bates.

Vice Presidents—Mrs. Gullett, Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Bjoin.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Dufour.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss M. F. Ayers.

Treasurer—Miss Nellie Perry.

Mrs. Stanton and Mrs. Cowing were appointed delegates to the State Convention which is to be held in St. Paul, September 15th, 16th and 17th.

THE NEW OUTLET.

T. B. Walker Knows Something About the Manitoba's Duluth Extension and Talks About It.

He Explains the Connection Between the Manitoba and Duluth & Winnipeg Roads.

THE MANITOBA MOVE.

St. Paul Globe.

T. B. Walker has just returned to his Minneapolis home from Crookston, and correctly supposing him to be well informed on the railroad schemes of which Crookston is now the seat of operations, a Globe reporter called on him last evening. Ten days ago the articles of incorporation of the Crookston, Minneapolis & Duluth Railway Company were filed, the name of Mr. Walker appearing as one of the incorporators. The Globe's exposition of the Manitoba scheme yesterday morning, by which the arms of the Hill company are to stretch from Crookston to Duluth, led to the natural supposition that Mr. Walker, in the interests of his own road and his knowledge of the new territory, would know something of interest concerning the new Manitoba connection. When the question was approached Mr. Walker smiled intelligently, led the way to a large railroad map of Minnesota and said:

"You are right; I know something of the matter in the Globe. When the line of the Duluth & Winnipeg road was laid out, the projectors knew nothing of the country and committed a fatal error in the route. They laid it out to run to the northeast of Red Lake and toward Lake of the Woods, then across into the Dominion. This route was filed and secured. Afterward a portion of the error was retrieved and the line was relocated so as to run north of Leech Lake in an almost direct line to Crookston. This was error number two and was discovered too late for correction. Leech Lake is the key to the situation, as will appear. It is in the very centre of the Minnesota pinery and in location is unrivaled. Look at the chain of lakes and rivers, tributary to it, and its value as a lumber centre will be apparent. But I will come to that again, further on. The Duluth & Winnipeg people discovered their line should have run south of Leech Lake. Its route, as located, was in a sterile and unprofitable territory, difficult of penetration about Duluth, and missing the finest agricultural land in the world—that lying between Leech Lake and Crookston and stretching off into Dakota. But in the meantime the Brainerd & Northwestern steps in, and a fight to prevent a relocation of the Duluth & Winnipeg begins. But in the meantime the valuable route is untouched, and here our company stepped in. The Crookston, Minneapolis & Duluth proposed to run a line from Crookston to the lower end of Leech Lake. From there a line was to extend south to Minneapolis, and another east to Duluth, probably running in on the Superior & Mississippi tracks. Here is where Hill comes to the front. While the rest of us were counting our thumbs and calculating where we would get the money he steps in and gets his engineers to work."

"But what becomes of your road then?"

"This will probably settle us. If the Manitoba steps in and builds we will be unable to get the money to build. It cuts us out—gets there first, you understand. Now, the history of this Manitoba connecton is this: An agreement was entered into between the Milwaukee and the Manitoba in regard to territorial rights. The Milwaukee violated the agreement and is pushing into the Red River Valley, and here is where Hill comes back to them. The Milwaukee is branching out from Fargo toward Grand Forks and Crookston. Now, the Manitoba will stretch across to Duluth from Crookston and in spite of everything will beat the Milwaukee to Chicago, cutting them out of more millions than they will ever gain in their northwestern extensions. Besides this, Hill will push a line through from St. Cloud to Ortonville and then to the Missouri River."

"And about the Crookston and Duluth branch?"

"I had my first intimation of that a day or two ago and saw the engineers at Crookston. There is no doubt about it in the world, I tell you there would have been a master stroke for the Northern Pacific, but they had not money enough. Hill had, and it takes him no time to make up his mind, either. He saw at once what a grand move it was, and his engineers were at once set to work. The line will run from Crookston to a point at the south of Leech Lake and thence directly toward Duluth. I think arrangements will be made to double-track the St. Paul & Duluth into the city, as the approaches are very difficult. There will be a branch down to Minneapolis and St. Paul, as a natural sequence. That will be carried out just as the Crookston, Minneapolis & Duluth had intended."

"Will the short line to Duluth divert traffic from Minneapolis and St. Paul?"

"No, but it will be a big thing for Duluth, of course. The Manitoba, by its Ortonville and western connections, will more than compensate the twin cities for any loss by way of Duluth. Now about Leech Lake. I told you it was the very heart of the pinery of the State. The chain of rivers and lakes surrounding it are all tributary to it. The Steamboat River on one side and the Boy on the other, running down through Woman Lake, will bring in the logs from a vast amount of country as yet uncut. There at the foot of the lake is where the mills will be, and there will be an abundance of land for piling and abundance of water to carry over logs from one year to another. It is a magnificent place. The Pillsburys on Gull lake near Brainerd are doing, on a small scale, what might and will be done at Leech lake on a scale of wonderful magnitude. All of that pine timber must come down, and may see, if it was carried over to the Mississippi it would be too late in the season when it got down here, especially if the water should fall and the logs hang up. Now I think I have given you a pretty clear idea of this proposed line, as well as the country through which it passes."

"And what about Hill's visit to Duluth?"

"Terminal facilities, probably. He is in the St. Paul & Duluth and the new line will probably go over that. Duluth is very difficult of access, especially from the Northwest. Why, Vanderbilt's consulting engineer, Barnes, is up there now and has already spent $300,000 trying to get a practical route out. When it comes to winding streams and hard rocks railroading is expensive. Now that's about all. Yes, it virtually settles the Crookston, Minneapolis and Duluth road. Hill's pole was the longest and it has knocked the persimmons."

This closed Mr. Walker's talk on a subject that formed the leading topic in Minneapolis railroad and shipping circles yesterday.

Seely's Exchange.

Notwithstanding times are somewhat slack, Seely's Place still keeps up with the times. The choicest summer drinks always on hand, a nice bowl of soup for lunch, and the best lemonade in the city always on deck. Call and see me, boys. Remember Seely's place, the cosiest little place northwest of Chicago. [11-tf]

FARM NOTES.

Minneapolis Tribune.

CLOVER THE GREAT RESTORER.

A correspondent of the American Rural Home says:

In many sections of the country clover has long been considered the king of green manures—the great restorer of fertility on over-cropped worn out lands. An Ohio farmer avers that hundreds of farms—and he might truly have said thousands and myriads—that were about worthless have been rescued from dilapidation and ruin by clovering. It is an accepted truism that as long as "clover will catch," the farm can soon be restored to paying fertility, and bp a good rotation is even getting more productive and profitable; for after some years of such treatment the land will bear harder farming—that is, two or three crops may succeed a good crop of clover before laying down to clover again. Rough, new land should be subdued by the use of large clover. Nothing so effectually kills weeds and sprouts, and prepares the land for the plow and good paying crops.

Wild new lands should always have it sown on the first grain crop put down. It saves a vast amount of labor, for in a few years it so tames the ground and clears it of enemies to the plow that it works like old ground, and is good for full crops. One great error is often fallen into, and that is following the old tradition that a bushel of clover seed will do for eight acres. That may have been enough to clover land partially when it was new, but whoever aims at getting up his land in a speedy and profitable way should sow a bushel on four acres, so that his land may be thoroughly shaded.

BEANS AS A FARM CROP.

I cannot think, says a correspondent of the American Agriculturist, why the the farmers of the new cheap land of the northwest do not go into the raising of beans on a large scale. When I was in Minnesota and Dakota last fall the same idea struck me. The soil and the climate are favorable. But possibly there would be a difficulty in procuring the necessary labor to pull the beans, or, possibly, to thresh them them where they stand. We ought to raise beans enough to support the world. As matters now are, beans are grown on a comparatively circumscribed area, and any trival cause may greatly enchance prices, and thus effectually stop the foreign demand. Some years, beans are down to $1 a bushel, and then up to $3 per bushel. Of course such extreme fluctuations seriously interfere with foreign trade. But let the northwest take hold of the matter, and we should have a large area to draw from, and steadier prices and a larger trade would be the result. Beans are the most nutritous of all vegetables. They will keep from year to year. They do not need grinding into flour, like wheat, and, moreover, can be easily transported any distance. Let us have more beans—especially for export.

TO GET THE BEST SEED CORN.

Some unknown authority says that by going through the corn-field, selecting the earliest ears just after they are thoroughly glazed, tracing them up and hanging in a room where there is a fire until thoroughly dried, much better seed corn can be obtained than by permitting the corn to ripen in the field, selecting the best ears at husking time, and spreading them on the floor to dry. The early-picked kiln-dried corn will come up earlier in the spring, and the plants from such will be more vigorous than those from the other.

BITTER MILK, CAUSE AND PREVENTION.

There are several causes for bitter milk. The most prevalent is the presence of rag-weed or other bitter weeds in the hay. This is almost always the case when rowen or aftermath hay is fed, and at times when corn fodder from a weedy field is used. The flavor of rag-weed is so persistent that it appears in the cream and butter and spoils the latter for use. This is to be expected, because the flavor of rag-weed and other plants allied to it is due to an essential oil, which will naturally combine with the cream and remain in the butter. The flavor of it also affects the butter in the fall, from cows pasturing in meadows. The only remedy for this defect is to avoid the cause. Another cause in which all seem to agree is that in certain conditions the milk of farrow cows will be bitter. This peculiar flavor is perhaps caused by some change in the character of the milk which indicates that the secretion is not pure, and that milking should cease. Other opinions are to the effect that the cow is not in good health and the products of some disorder are being discharged in the milk; an occurrence which frequently happens, and which shows how necessary it is to guard against any injurious use of the milk of diseased cows. Cows suffering from tuberculosis, or consumption of the lungs will continue to give milk copiously, but its flavor is exceedingly disagreeable, and nauseous at times, being mawkish and bitter, and quite unfit for use.

It is certain that milk is made bitter by premature decomposition produced by the remains of stale milk in the crevices of the pans. In all these cases the remedies or the means of prevention are obvious. No wooden utensil should be used in milking or in setting milk. Wood absorbs the milk into its pores, and when the pail is scalded this milk becomes coagulated, ferments and decomposes, and will surely injure the milk by infecting it with a leaven of putridity. Tin pails and pans should first be washed with cold water, then with hot water and soap to remove the grease, then rinsed, and finally scalded with boiling hot water, wiped with clean dry towels, and afterwards placed out of doors to air in sunshine.

HOW BUTTER MAY BE SPOILED.

Good butter may be spoiled in churning. Over-churning ruins the texture and changes the proper waxiness to a disagreeable sticky greasiness. This is the more easily done in a churn with revolving dashers, which will press the butter against the sides of the churn and squeeze and rub it until it is spoiled. Too long churning spoils the quality by the oxidation of the butter and the premature formation of strong flavored acids in it, the full presence of which we call rancidity. It may be spoiled by churning at too high a temperature, by which it is made soft and oily, and of a greasy texture and flavor. It may be spoiled before the cream reaches the churn by keeping it too long, or what is practically the same by keeping it in too warm a place; 50 degrees is about the right temperature if cream is kept a week; if it is kept at 62 degrees, three days are long enough.

White specks are produced in butter by over-churning or by having the cream too sour. Either of these faults produces curd in the milk, and the small flakes of this cannot be washed out of the butter. Milk from a cow in ill health, and that is acid when drawn, will produce specky butter. So will the use of salt containing particles of lime, which unite with the butter and forms insoluble lime soap. White specks are covered up to a large extent by the use of good coloring, which is made of oil as the solvent. But this use of coloring, being to disguise a fault, and to add an undeserved virtue, is worthy of denunciation.

HOW TO WASH BUTTER.

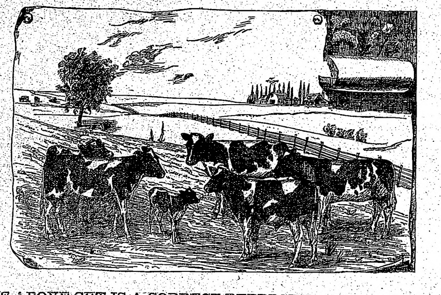
If butter is to be washed at all after salting and working, says the Boston Cultivator, it should be washed with pickle or brine, and not with ice water and fresh water. Fresh water will at once whiten the butter with which it comes in contact, take the salt out, and cause it to become strong in taste almost immediately. For this purpose the pickle should be made several days before needed for use. It must be of good strength, that is, the water must be thoroughly saturated with the salt, the result of stirring and dissolving. Washing in cold brine does not soften the butter. Salt maintains the water at low temperature. Ice water in contact with butter has an injurious effect. Even slight droppings of ice water upon a parcel of butter for twenty-four hours will whiten it, and spoil it by rendering it strong and unmerchantable as a choice product. Take a tub of butter and place upon the top of the butter a cloth saturated with fresh water, and in less than a day the upper layer will be whitened, the salt removed and the first stages of racidity induced. Many otherwise choice parcels of butter have been spoiled by the use of fresh water, and even by the use of water in which salt has been stirred about for a short time. Unless the pickle is made very strong, a work of time, it is but little better than fresh water for this purpose. The best creamery butter is salted at rate of one ounce to the pound of butter, and if washed at all, pickle only is used.

HOW TO SUCCEED AS A DAIRYMAN.

O. C. Gregg, Minnesota, says: "To succeed as a dairyman you must work continuously. The second point necessary to success is warm barns, yet some men believe that an open shed is sufficient protection for brute flesh and blood, with the thermometer twenty degrees below zero. Milking twenty-four cows, I have received close to $2,200 during the past year. I believe that with forty cows the farm will bring $2,000 for milk and butter. I cultivate 100 acres and cut hay outside of it. I figure that one man, one team, ten cows, and forty acres of ploughed land is the proper proportion for getting the best returns from farm work.

WARM WATER FOR COWS.

Some interesting experiments have been made in France on the advantages of giving water to milch cows warmed instead of in it natural cold state. At the agricultural school of St. Remy two cows were fed on the same food, but one was supplied with cold water and the other with water heated to 118 degrees Farenheit. The latter yielded one-third more milk. Veterinary Professor Cornevin has obtained similar results.



THE ABOVE CUT IS A CORRECT REPRESENTATION OF SOME

GRADE HOLSTEIN CALVES

That may now be seen on my place two miles north of Crookston, (S½ Section 8, town of Crookston.) It also shows the benefits to be derived from the use of thoroughbred sires. The thoroughbred Holstein bull, wil' be found by those who try him to be one of the best of this valuable breed.

EVERETT

PEDIGREE OF EVERETT:

Registered in the next volume of Holstein Herd Book. Calved Jan. 9th, 1883; sire, Angus, (907 H. H. B.) dam Beth, [1743 H. H. B.] Beth was calved April 9th, 1880; bred by P. S. De Boes, Oostorwierum, Friesland. Imported May, 1881, by Wm. Koch, New York City. She was one of the best cows ever imported, having a milk record of 81½ lbs per day when fresh.

EVERETT!

Is described in the herd book as follows: Evenly variegated; head fine; neck fine; horns small and fine; shoulders low and well formed; body round and long; chine medium; hips broad; quarters heavy; limbs fine; handling good; escutcheon best.

EVERETT will be allowed 25 cows upon the following terms: For thoroughbred Holstein cows $10. For native cows and grades of any breed $5 to insure. For other particulars call on me at the farm, or address me at Crookston.

Holstein cattle are popular because they are the greatest milk producers known; they produce the most butter and cheese; are very large, fat easily and make excellent beef. As a breed they are remarkably docile and easily managed; are very hardy and give the very best satisfaction; they make the very best family and town cows in the world. They possess more desirable qualities than any other breed.---Rural World.

ROUND HOME.

T. B. Walker went below on Monday.

J. W. Webb was up from Edna on Monday.

P. W. Flanders and daughter Myra are visiting his son, E. O. Flanders, for two weeks.

Don't fail to see the attractions at Berthiaume Bros., palace jewelry store on Robert St.

Henry Shephard has brought suit against John Dowling in the sum of $2,000 for assault and false imprisonment.

J. B. Berthiaume has returned from his eastern visit and expects his goods along daily. Look out for his double-track, broad gauge ad next week.

A great many of our citizens are away to the great Fair this week. From all that we are able to learn we should say that they will all have a good time.

Ladies' and children's underwear, hosiery, wraps, cloaks and dolmans at about half what they cost last year, at FONTAINE & ANGLIM'S.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Markham have been called upon to mourn the loss of their baby boy—their only boy, which died on Sunday last. It was buried on Tuesday.

Berthiaume Bros. are more than ever ready to supply all your needs in jewelry. Their display is large and fine and when the new lot arrives will be almost inexhaustible.

The State Inspectors deny that they have lowered the grade of No. 1 Hard as has been reported. Some action will doubtless be taken in the matter, at a meeting to be held soon.

The State Fair opened out on Monday with fair weather and a good display. The attendance for the opening day was good and the prospects are that the manager will score a grand success.

There is a prospect of a row between Spain and Germany over the possession of the Caroline Islands. It may take such shape as to involve the United States in the muss before they get through with it.

W. H. Standish, the Bartlett lawyer, and a former resident of Polk County, went south on Monday. He is very sanguine as to the result of his recent visit to Washington in the interest of the pine lands.

Rufus Hatch says that if farmers will stand together and demand $1 per bushel for their wheat at their market town, they will get it. He says that if one-half the wheat shipped out last year be shipped this it will create almost a wheat famine here.

Detroit Record: We are under obligations to Geo. H. Barney, of Hamden, for a jar of splendid Holstein butter upon which we have no hesitancy in passing a favorable verdict. If the milk of all Holsteins yields such butter, why we say we want a Holstein cow.

Follow the crowd and buy your goods at Fontaine & Anglim's. Their stock is always complete in domestic and imported goods, dry goods, notions, clothing, gents' furnishing goods, boots and shoes, hats and caps, groceries and crockery. Prices lower than ever before.

The Breeders' Gazette, of Sept. 3d, is a mammoth edition of 76 pages, chuck full of interesting matter relating to the interests of breeders and farmers. We know of a great many farmers who are trying to farm without an agricultural paper in their house. How they can make a living puzzles us. Of this one thing we are assured, that it is impossible for such farmers to attain the success that they would if they took some thoroughly good agricultural paper, and more especially since their cost is so slight. There is not an intelligent breeder in this county who would be without the Breeders' Gazette if he knew what it is. The opportunity is now presented for everybody to get acquainted with it. We will furnish it to all JOURNAL readers until January 1st, '86, for 50 cents, or for a year for $2. Sample copies may be seen at this office.

Detroit Record: W. A. Norcross is working up a more extensive business in Detroit than in generally known. During the past summer he has shipped many hundreds of cords of dry wood to the prairie towns in Dakota, and now that winter is so near at hand orders from wood dealers west are coming in much faster than he can fill them, notwithstanding that some days he forwards whole train loads. He has also shipped large quantities of fence posts, rails, and now has a large gang of men at work filling an order for oak piling for the Northern Pacific. He has bought the old freight depot building and fitted the same up for an office and warehouse.

Judge McConnell, the new District Judge, over in Dakota, seems to be a terror to evil-doers. He has sentenced several thieves and thugs to serve a term at the new penitentiary at Bismarck, and Miller, the Snell family murderer, to hang on October 30th. The only objection we have to make in this matter is that the execution is to be a private one. It should be made as public as possible. Such a dastardly, cold-blooded crime deserves the most severe expiation known to the law, and why they should be made private, (as though the authorities were ashamed of the act) we fail to see clearly. It should be made a public example so that all who felt so disposed could see the villain expiate his crime as far as it can be done.

Conductor Caspar Sands was in the city awhile on Saturday.

Looks like we'd have a spell o' weather now. Beautiful, lovely Indian summer weather.

E. J. Folsom, represent the Minneapolis Furniture Co., was in the city last week.

Henry Steege commenced his threshing on Monday. He has built a granary and intends to hold his wheat for a rise.

W. H. Cobban, collector for the Northwestern Manufacturing and Car Co., is skirmishing about in the upper country.

G. M. Pollard had the misfortune to hurt his hand very severely at the mill last week. It will doubtless lay him up for some time.

The Board of County Commissioners will meet on Tuesday Sept. 15th for the transaction of its regular business. Get your quill ready, doc.

E. M. Walsh, threshed his wheat last week and hauled it to the P. & H. elevator. He reports 15 bushels per acre graded No. 1 Hard. That is not a bad yield for this year.

Harvest wages have been very low this year. Heretofore a good stacker could get from $2.50 to $300 per day quick, but this year it has been up-hill business for the best of them to get above $2. This condition of things must continue until the producer can obtain for his wheat what it is justly worth.

Chris Houston finished threshing on Saturday last. He reports 17 bushels per acre and has put it in his granary to await a fair price. That is the way to do it. When a man has his own wheat in his own granary he controls it himself. When he delivers it at an elevator on storage somebody else controls it.

Deadwood, D. T. is having a streak 'o luck. Snow is reported out there and the thermometer way down cellar. Crops are reported utterly ruined and farmers totally discouraged. While this is all very bad for those directly concerned it shows us that the Red River Valley is not the worst place in the world.

The Minnesota Wheelmen have issued a neat pamphlet announcing that their third annual meet will be held on the old fair grounds at Minneapolis on Sept. 22d. An interesting program has been arranged arranged and a good time is anticipated. They propose a tour on wheels a distance of 175 miles to the important cities in the State after the meet.

Otter Tail County will indulge in a county fair. It is to be held at Fergus Falls, on Sept. 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th 1885. We have not seen their premium list but from all we can learn we should judge that it would well repay the expense of the trip to attend. It would at least do no hurt to go and see how Otter Tail compares with Polk for productions.

Becker County has invited Mr. J. B. Power, land commissioner of the St. P. M. & M. R. R., to deliver the address at their fair. From what we know of Mr. Power we should say that the address will be a good one—worth going to hear. We have not learned the dates given for their fair as yet. Becker County contains some excellent stock and can make a rattling good show if she will and she doubtless will.

Warren Sheaf: In conversation with Mr. F. W. Woodward on Tuesday, during a short call, he advanced a new idea in regard to the present wheat crop. He says that the heads of wheat this year are not filled out as well as they were last year—not because of the warm days in July or because of the dampness of the soil, but because of the showers of rain that came so often, nearly every day, and washed off much of the pollen (a substance essential to the fertility of the berry) just at a time when the berry should have been formed. The more we think of this the more we are convinced that he is correct in his suppositson. Mr. Woodward's experience in the cultivation of the grape and his observation of the effect of rain upon the grape pollen, lead him to observe the same effect on the wheat heads.

We are indebted to Bro. Osburn, of the Glyndon news, for the premium list of the Clay Co., Agricultural and Mechanical Society. Their 9th annual fair will be held on the Smyser place, a few miles east of Glyndon, on Oct. 6th, 7th and 8th 1885. They present a very attractive program and one feature of the premium list strikes us as worthy of adoption by other county societies. They offer certain sums in premiums, reserving the right to pro rata providing the receipts do not cover the amount; thus the society will not be in debt at the close of the fair. It strikes us that they have chosen an unhandy place to hold it, i. e. unhandy for us grangers in Polk Co., for of course we will all want to attend "seein as how" we are not to have a fair of our own. If the business was to be held at Glyndon we could take the morning train go down and spend the day profitably and pleasantly (will guarantee that part) and return in the evening. As it is we don't see how that can be did. What made you have it way down there, Bro. Osborn? Or if you have any arrangements by which your northern neighbors and friends can reach your grounds, why don't you say so?

STEAM THRESHERS MUTUAL INSURANCE ASSOCIATION OF MINNESOTA.

The object of this Association is Organization, Mutual Benefit and Protection, and is incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota as an

and it is the duty of every owner of a Steam Threshing Machine to become a member. It also admits, as members, engineers, firemen, and feeders of steam threshing machines.

After an Inspection of any Steam Threshing Machine Boiler by the Inspector of this Company, if the boiler is proven safe, a Certificate of Inspection is given, and if any of the above named persons are admitted to membership in this Association, no further inspection of the boiler is necessary, according to the new boiler Inspection law, which reads as follows: "This act shall not apply to boilers owned or controlled by Railroad Companies, nor shall it apply to boilers inspected by Insurance Companies and certified by their authorized Inspector to be safe."

Before commencing business, and to be sure they were right in the matter, the Board of Directors ordered the Secretary to obtain the opinions of some of the most talented attorneys of the State, and responses have been received from Hon. H. Steenerson, State Senator, Hon. Gordon E. Cole, the eminent jurist, Ex-Judge Thomas Wilson, of the Supreme Court of Minnesota. These opinions are on file in the office of the Association in Crookston, and are to the effect that the Company's certificate is all that is required by law, and cannot be interfered with by the State Inspector.

The manner of inspection by this company is the same as that of other insurance companies, and also railroad companies, by as old boiler makers say it is not a test, but an unnecessary strain. If the boiler is all right before it is put on, there is no knowing how it is when taken off. The test by water is based on a false theory. The examination by a competent boiler maker is all that is necessary. Common sense ought to teach that.

JOHN WALLACE.

Mr. Wallace is the Inspector for this company and is endorsed by the boiler makers of Minneapolis. Make your application to the Inspector or to the Secretary.

GRAIN INSPECTION.

The Grain Inspection into store for 24 hours ending at 6:00 p. m. yesterday is as follows:

GRADE OF GRAIN.	No. of Cars Received.	Same day last year.
No. 1 Hard	75	126
No. 1 Northern	18	13
No. 2 Hard		3
No. 2 Northern	5	2
No. 1
No. 2		6
No. 2	2	5
Rej.		3
Condemned or ungraded	1	0
Total	101	161

Monday, Sept. 7th.

The wheat market is quiet and steady; not much doing, opening 81c October, sold off a quarter, advanced to 74½c, closing rather firm at September 81c; October, 81¼c; December 85½c. No. 1 Northern 78¼c October. Receipts 77,000 bushels; shipments 137,000 bushels.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rufus Hatch has an interesting wheat article in the New York Sun of Monday. We give the following extracts:

"For the first time since 1881 the farmer is to-day the master of the situation, and it is his own fault if he does not make the most of it. If he will hold his wheat at $1 at the station he will get his price, and by selling half as much as he did last year he will receive more money for his sales and still have some wheat left to carry over to another year. The reason for this statement is that our wheat crop for this year is short. The winter wheat is not more than half a crop, and the spring wheat is reported as damaged one-third. The Government report for July, which does not include the damage to spring wheat (it having taken place to a large extent since the report was prepared) places the entire yield of the United States for 1885 at 357,000,000 bushels. In 1884 the government report placed the yield at 512,000,000 with 40,000,000 on hand from the crop of 1883. Add these two amounts together and we will learn the total amount of wheat that this country has had during the last two years:

Total yield of 1883	512,000,000
Total yield of 1885 (deducting nothing for spring wheat damage)	357,000,000
Total for two years	909,000,000

Deduct from this total of 909,000,000 the amount required for home consumption and for seed—namely, 700,000,000 for two years, and the 132 million exported last year, and we have remaining for export and for carrying over but 77 millions.

For home consumption 1884	300,000,000
For seed 1884	50,000,000
Exported	132,000,000
For home consumption 1885	300,000,000
For seed 1885	50,000,000
Total	832,000,000
Total am't of wheat for 1884 and 1885	909,000,000
Consumption, seed and export	832,000,000
For export and carry over, 1884	77,000,000

Therefore, if we export half as much wheat as we did last year we shall not have a bushel left at the beginning of the harvest of 1886, and should the crop of 1886 be no larger than the crop of 1884, we should be importing wheat within eighteen months and it would be selling at famine prices."

Howard (Mich.) Record: D. W. H. Moreland of Detroit, Traveling Passenger Agent of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad, made us a call the other day. He informs us that he has just returned from the "Golden Northwest," where he has been for a month—over the lines of his road, besides doing a large amount of traveling by wagon over the great wheat and stock farms there. The grain crop of the entire Red River Valley country is immense—and it has never experienced anything like a failure. The company have nearly 2,000,000 acres of fine wheat lands in Minnesota yet remaining, which they sell at from $4 to $8 per acre on easy payments and long time. There is besides 6,000,000 acres of free government lands yet remaining in the great Devil's Lake and Turtle Mountain country, open for settlement. This is a very fertile tract of fine undulating country, and is being rapidly taken up by a good class of settlers.

And These Went to the Fair.

John Knuppe and wife, G. H. Palmer, W. D. Bailey and wife, G. W. Peake and wife, W. E. McKenzie, H. A. Mason, J. B. Bailey, W. F. Zwickey, and E. M. Walsh are among the many who have gone to the State Fair this week. There is a big attendance from all over the State and the Fair will be an immense success.

EUCLID ITEMS.

EUCLID, Sept. 6, 1885.

The weather has been very pleasant during the past week.

The Keystone Farming Company reports having threshed 640 acres of wheat that yielded 20 bushels per acre.

Mr. Geo. W. Losey has left his office for a few days to assist his brother in stacking his grain.

Mr. F. B. McDonald was down to Crookston on Saturday last and brought up another blind horse to work in the elevator at this place.

Messrs. Wm. Ross, John Dowling, G. H. Holt, W. H. Jennings and E. A. Charboneau and wife, of Crookston, were registered at the Keystone House last week.

Rev. Mr. Currie preached in Mr. Sheel's place on Sunday last.

For a small place we think Euclid no slow town. No less than a dozen drunken men on the streets on Sunday last. A good temperance organization could find no better field for work.
OSCAR.

[Correspondence.]

EDITOR POLK COUNTY JOURNAL: Since arriving in Fargo I have been very much interested in the general outlook for the future of the metropolis of Dakota. Business is good among the merchants, and a sort of "we are all right" air beams from the countenances of every one you meet. At present the coming encampment, the first ever held in Dakota, is quite a feature of the conversation of the citizens and a determination exists to make everyone happy who visits the city at that time. All may be assured of a cordial welcome and lots of fun while here. The manager of the Opera House, with the co-operation of the proprietor, is arranging for first-class amusements for that auspicious week, and many others are preparing to furnish fine entertainments.

The committee of arrangements, with Major A. W. Edwards at its head, will have all things in proper shape and be enabled, by the judicious management, which always characterizes his portly highness, together with the assistance of Jourdan of the Republican, and the popular, efficient and painstaking Clement to ensure to all who may be fortunate enough to visit Fargo at that time, a season of instruction and enjoyment which will be a pleasant memory for all time to come.

The prize of $100 offered by The Argus will no doubt add to the enthusiasm of the militia in contesting for supremacy in their disciplinary contests. Hon. J. A. Johnson, the esteemed mayor of the city, is sharing no pains or labor to make this the grandest time North Dakota ever experienced. Should I remain here another week I will write again.
G. M.

CROOKSTON, Sept. 7, 1885.

As there are quite a number of persons in this vicinity waiting for the State Inspector to make his appearance, in order that they may take out license as engineers, and who are in doubt as to just what questions they will be required to answer, I will give a few of them: 1st. Which end of the smoke stack does the engine take steam at? 2d. Do you use the exhaust steam to pump up the boiler with? 3d. Do you believe in the cold water doctrine? 4th. Do you take your whiskey straight, or do you always call for water! 5th. Do you believe that Wallace has the hydrophobia? 6th? Did you read the letter from the State Inspector to Morrisey? 7th. Do you believe that Morrisey is "heap big" cold water man? If these and some other questions are properly answered your license is certain.
J. WALLACE.

Dr. Carl Schulin, a celebrated eye and ear specialist, will arrive in the city on Tuesday, June 23d, and may be consulted at the Commercial House. The doctor has an established reputation, and all who need his services will not hesitate to call upon him. When he finds a case incurable he will frankly say so, thus saving the patient needless expense.

Miss Nellie Mason has gone to Prescott, Wis., for a visit.

Our city schools started the threshing machine promptly on Monday morning and are now busily pounding out the No. 1 Hard.

The Pioneer Press reported Frank Soes and W. F. Twickey as delegates to the water-ways convention last week. Well, if the boys WON'T register IMMEDIATELY upon arrival who can blame the innocent reporters?

Mrs. J. N. Ives wishes us to say that she is prepared to receive a few more pupils in drawing, both in pencil and crayon; also in oil painting, in either flowers or landscape, at her rooms, corner of Main and Second streets, over W. Clements fancy store, where she will be pleased to show work or give terms.

MARRIED.

McDONELL—WILSON.—On Thursday, Sept. 3d, 1885, by Rev. S. Currie, Mr. George G. McDonell to Miss Georgie Wilson, all of this city.

Which is probably doubtless why George, when called upon could think of "nothing for this week!" Umpth! We should call it a pretty good item. The happy couple have the sincere congratulations of the JOURNAL and a host of friends in the city. They will settle down to housekeeping in our midst all the same like they had been married a year or so. We shall expect some locals hereafter.

DIED.

SIGMAN.—In this city, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Stuart, on Monday, Sept. 7th 1885, of cancer in the stomach, Mrs. Eliza Sigman, aged 67 years.

Deceased came to this city about June first on a visit to her children, Mrs. Stuart and A. J. Bigham and was taken sick about June 24th. Her case puzzled the physicians and the trouble was not definitely known until a post mortem examination revealed it. The funeral was largely attended on Tuesday.

"HOLD YOUR WHEAT."

That is the advice which every editor in the Northwest is gravely giving his farmer patrons, and he don't charge anything for this advice—except $1.50 per year—when he gets that. Now, we can imagine the granger, when he reads the oft-repeated legend, saying to himself: "Well, it is all very well for you fellows, sitting in your cushioned easy chairs, in your richly furnished offices to write that with your gold pens on gilt-edged copy paper, but if you will tell us now we are going to 'save our wheat' with a thousand and one creditors at our back waiting the last hum of the threshing machine, with the Sheriff ready to sell if we don't as soon as threshed, you will tell us something that will be of practical value to us!" And when you come to think it over there is a mint of wisdom in the suggestion. The advice is all well enough, but "how is it to be done?" is the serious question. We do not know that it can be done, but we think that it is a question that interests not only every farmer in the country, but every business man as well, to see whether it could or not. Every business man in the country is as much interested in the solution of this question as is the farmer, and it seems to us that if our business men should take hold of the problem in the right way it might be done. Supposing a farmer to have from 2,000 to 5,000 bushels of wheat in his granary and that he owes from $500 to $1,000, due Nov. 1st. That wheat in his granary ought to be good security on which to borrow enough money at a reasonable rate, not to exceed 10 per cent., to pay up the farmer's debt and give him the chance to "hold his wheat!" But if the farmer wants $500 and has 2,000 or 3,000 bushels of wheat to offer as security, and goes to the money lender for it, and there finds that he must pay ten per cent. interest and ten per cent bonus, he finds at once that his security is not sufficient to secure his loan, then how is he to get the money necessary to "hold his wheat?" As matters are to-day we do not know that any amount of wheat would be considered good security for loans, but we are convinced of this fact that if a way could be devised by our business men to secure loans on wheat at reasonable rates that the solution of the problem would be simple and sure. We know that if every bushel of wheat raised in this country was saved in this country until next spring, that the price of wheat would be enhanced at least one-half, and we know that as soon as this wheat goes into the elevators, whether sold or not, it goes to the markets, is used, and helps to swell the volume already on the markets and thus it helps to depress the price of wheat until the farmer is obliged to sell. We ought to look this matter squarely in the face, business men, farmers, and all interested in the welfare of this country, for it is a fact, that if the history of the past two or three years is to be repeated the country will be bankrupt before another decade. On the other hand, if there is a way by which the producer can be protected from the rapacity of the speculator and the fruits of his labor saved to the country, we shall soon be independent, business men, farmers, and all. For the past three years the buyer has made all of the profits on our wheat, and in many cases more too. Now, we all unite in saying to the farmer, "Oh, save your wheat for the rise that is sure to come!" The farmer appreciates the force of the remark and would be glad to follow the sound advice, IF HE COULD. There are thousands of dollars of money in the east to let at reasonable rates and if some business man could be found who could and would secure some of it to use in the way above suggested, he would be a veritable Moses to lead this people out of bondage and save this country from bankruptcy.

Disappointed Farmers.

A Globe special says: "It is estimated that no less than seventy-five steam threshers are at work throughout Clay County. The number is much larger than ever before, there appearing to be a universal desire to thresh out of the shock and save stacking. There is a general disappointment in the yield. The threshing machine telling the story, reduces even conservative estimates 25 to 30 per cent. On many farms where straw was heavy and twenty bushels were expected, but twelve to sixteen bushels were realized. Farmers feel well assured that prices will go up much higher and the general intention to hold wheat back is clear. Shipments and sales of new wheat will be light from this region, unless the price is considerably advanced."

As near as we can ascertain at this writing, Polk County will not go ahead of that yield, but so far the wheat is of far better quality than was expected. Now, if farmers can possibly hold their wheat in the northern counties for a few weeks, so that but little wheat will be thrown upon the market, it must have a tendency to induce an early rise in prices. That wheat will bring a good price before another harvest is as sure as fate—some even confidently predict a dollar and upwards in this market,—but what more closely concerns the northwestern farmer to-day, is not what it will be worth next year, but "what can I get for it this fall?" Now, if the wheat we have in the Northwest is all thrown upon the market in a volume, the effect will be just as it has been in the past—to depress the price to the lowest notch, and all who sell now will do so at a loss. Some are threshing out of the shock while others are stacking. Now, if all who are threshing from the shock should throw their wheat on the market, or even haul it to elevators for storage the effect would be to send the price down to the lowest ebb and to keep it there all winter, for this wheat, added to the surplus now on hand, would keep that surplus up to a respectable size, while if all of the spring wheat could be held back a few weeks the surplus now on hand would very materially decrease. For instance, if our spring wheat could be held in this country for two months it would by that time be in so great demand as to net the producer a handsome profit.

Senator Edmund's Views.

Senator Edmunds, in a recent interview in relation to the course of the administration in relation to appointments, said:

"Well, so far as that is concerned any one who knows me and my course in years past, knows that I have always been and am still a firm advocate of civil service reform. He knows, too, that I should oppose any departure from that principle in the matter of appointments, whether the person concerned be a friend or an entire stranger, whether he be from Vermont or from Texas. As to the policy of the administration in this matter I said last spring that Mr. Cleveland's intentions were good and that if he got the right kind of men about him he might be able to carry out his purposes in this regard. By right kind of men, I meant men friendly to civil service reform and with backbone to stand out against the opposition they would encounter from the democratic spoilsmen. Such opposition must necessarily be very great, for the larger part of that party still cling to the old Jacksonian principle in regard to appointments. But President Cleveland has not about him the men who would help him in adhering to civil service reform. The majority of his cabinet are unfavorable to it. Now, it is impossible for one man to investigate the details concerned in each appointment. The president cannot know himself the circumstances of one per cent. of the appointments he makes. There would not be time enough if he worked twenty-four hours a day for him to attend personally to them all. Hence the difficulty of carrying out this principle, when the president and his advisers do not agree in regard to it. Thus it is that at the present time a man's name comes up for removal, some specious charges have been prepared against him, as in the case of General Wells. The man is removed and another appointment is made without the truth or falsity of the charges being known or investigated. I think there is no doubt that that gradually these changes will continue until the policy and practice of the administration have degenerated into simply a spoils system. There is no doubt that if the senate had not been republican the change would have come already. If the senate had been democratic it would not have been adjourned when it did, but would have stayed over a month or more and then they would have made a 'clean sweep.'"

CHANGING THE GRADES.

The Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners Lower the Grade of No. 1 Hard Wheat 25 Per Cent at the Solicitation of the Dulute Grain Dealers—What the Effect Will Be.

DULUTH, Special Telegram, to Pioneer Press, Sept. 2.—Commissioner Murdock and chief Inspector Burdick arrived here yesterday, and last night held a conference with the board of trade representatives over the inspection here, and the result is that the No. 1 hard rule was changed from "75 per cent hard Scotch Fife wheat" to "shall consist mostly of hard Scotch Fife wheat." This is the old requirement of the Duluth board and will result in throwing much more wheat into the No. 1 hard grade and in giving greater satisfaction to farmers and commission men here. The No. 1 Northern grade will not be as high as under the rules first adopted by the board. The rule went went into effect to-day.

No notice of the important change in the the rules of inspection, as given in the above dispatch, had been received at St. Paul or Minneapolis last night, and grain men will doubtless be much surprised at the announcement. The change noted is one of great importance, as it lowers the quality of wheat 25 per cent. Wheat which, under the former rule, was required to contain 75 per cent of hard Scotch Fife wheat, will now pass grade if it contains only 51 per cent of that variety. When the rule requiring so large an amount of hard wheat was made by the commissioners, it was predicted by a great many grain men that as comparatively little of the crop of Minnesota and Dakota would grade No. 1 hard if the rule were strictly applied. The result of this change will not benefit the farmer in the least, as the price will be lowered as the grade is lowered. Under the new rule requiring 75 per cent of Scotch Fife wheat the grade of No. 1 hard would have become recognized as "gilt edge" among millers both at home and in the East, and would have commanded a handsome premium over ordinary milling grades. Under the new rule a larger proportion of the crop will grade No. 1 hard, but the premium of that grade will be reduced in like proportion. It has been known for some time that great dissatisfaction existed at Duluth over the new system of inspection.

LACK OF UNIFORMITY.

Receivers claimed that the inspection was much more rigid than that of last year—in fact more rigid than the Minneapolis inspection—and that wheat was being diverted from Duluth to the latter point on that account. Country shippers were not slow to discover the fact, which was proved by actual tests. Old wheat which graded No. 1 at Duluth under the old rules was shipped to Minneapolis and graded No. 2 hard, the inspection being made by the State inspectors in both cases. It is even asserted that a lot of wheat which was condemned at Duluth graded No. 2 hard on its arrival at Minneapolis. It is said that when Commissioner Murdock and Inspector Burdick went to Duluth to investigate the matter they took Mr. Clausen, the Minneapolis inspector along. To test the uniformity of grades at the two points, sixteen cars of wheat were selected, which were all graded No. 1 Northern by the Duluth inspectors. Mr. Clausen was then sent into the cars without knowing what the Duluth inspectors had done, and he graded ten cars No. 1 hard and six cars No. 1 Northern. It has been claimed that receivers at Duluth have taken advantage of the rigid inspection there by sending samples of No. 1 Northern wheat to Buffalo and other Eastern markets for which they readily obtained No. 1 hard prices, based on last years inspection. No complaints have been made at Minneapolis or St. Paul about the former inspection, and it will doubtless be a surprise to grain dealers here and at all other points in the State that the commissioners should make such a vital revision of the rules without consultation or even the slightest notice. The only sufferers by the change are those farmers who sold their wheat under the former rule requiring 75 per cent of hard wheat. Those parties who bought the wheat on that basis will be gainers to the extent of the reduction in the grade.

Peterson's Magazine for October makes us marvel more than ever how so beautiful a monthly can be published for so low a price. The principal engraving on steel, "The Star of the Night," is a portrait of one of the loveliest of women, and looks as if painted from life. There are two colored patterns in embroidery; a mammoth colored fashion-plate; a story profusely illustrated; and some fifty wood-cuts of fashions, work-table patterns, etc., etc. The powerful novelet by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, which has awakened such interest all the year, grows more absorbing as it approaches the close. "Josiah Allen's Wife" has one of her unrivaled humorous sketches; Frank Lee Benedict begins a new novelet; and there is a little sketch, "The Horrid Dress," which every lady ought to insist on her husband reading. But enough: the best thing to do is to write fro a specimen of "Peterson," which will be sent gratis, and compare it with others; when you will be certain to subscribe, or get up a club, for 1886. Now is the time for this. The price of this "lady's favorite" is but two dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Charles Forjet and wife, Tergille Forjet, Mortgagors, to John Rhodes, Mortgagee, dated the 23d day of November A. D., eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and recorded as a mortgage together with the power of sale therein contained in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of November A. D. 1882, at 10:10 o'clock a. m., in book "I" of mortgages, on pages 531 to 533, on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, the amount of six hundred and forty-one dollars, ($641.00) and also forty-one and 30-100 dollars, ($41.30,) paid by said mortgagee for taxes on said mortgaged premises, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. A Moorhead News reporter has been looking over the farm of the Hon. Chas. Canning, of Norman County, and among other things, says:

"Mr. Canning was born in Londonderry, or for short it is called Derry, in the north of Ireland. He emigrated to the United States in 1866, lived in Boston nearly two years, and in 1868 moved to Butler County, Iowa, and opened up a large farm. This farm he kept until June, 1875, at which time he sold it. In 1878 he opened up the farm in Norman County, Minn., where he now resides. This Red River Valley farm is located twenty-eight miles north of Moorhead and joins the west boundary of the townsite of Hendrum. This particular farm comprises 800 acres of as fine land as it is possible to produce in the northwest. It has two miles frontage on the Red River and slopes back in a manner which renders it self draining. Along the river is a heavy belt of timber, which in all covers 100 acres of land. This 100 acres and sixty acres of prairie land is nicely fenced in for pasture purposes. The prairie land to the east is virtually a mammoth garden which the present crops indicate, and cannot be beaten for productiveness in this, or any other county. A natural and picturesque bend of the river furnishes a building spot of more than ordinary beauty and convenience. In this bend or curve Mr. Canning has his house and farm buildings, which are nearly surrounded by fine heavy timber, which fact can be easily appreciated during the winter by its occupants. On the Dakota side of the river, Mr. Canning has 160 acres of as fine prairie land, and works on shares, or rents, another quarter section. This year, Mr. Canning has 640 acres of wheat, which will average 20 bushels to the acre of No. 1 hard; 100 acres of fine oats, and about fifteen acres of beans and root crop. The reporter took particular notice of Mr. Canning's garden, which is undoubtedly the finest in the county. To run this mammoth farm, Mr. Canning keeps about twenty head of work horses, but has several colts and spare stock in the horse flesh line. He believes in diversified farming, consequently has a nice drove of cattle, and about twenty-five head of hogs. He is increasing his stock very rapidly, and will soon fence in sixty acres additional pasture. The News does not wish to eulogize or elaborate on Mr. Canning as a farmer or business man, but it is justice to him to say that his ideas are practical, and as a farmer he is most assuredly a success. Of course it is known by every resident of Minnesota that Mr. Canning was elected in November, 1884, as a member of the State Legislature from the Forty-fifth district. About Mr. Canning's record made during the winter session of that honorable body the reporter will say nothing, as this article is not for political purposes. About 3 o'clock p. m. Mr. Canning hitched up his team again, gave the reporter a ride across the river on a ferry boat which he has for his own as well as public use, and showed him the sights. He drove through the once booming, but now nearly deserted village of Quincy, Dak., and from there over the prairie through immense wheat fields and finally came to a halt in the village of Grandin, where the scribe took the 6:18 train for Moorhead.

The writer of this article has taken a great many trips in the country by team and to towns by rail since he has been connected with the News, but was never treated more kindly than by Mr. Canning and his amiable wife. Mr. Canning took an unusual amount of pains to show the country, not only in his immediate vicinity, but further away where he had no personal interests. He had but very little to say regarding his own possessions, and what there is in this article concerning them was picked up accidentally or virtually stolen."

GENERAL NEWS.

During August the Northern Pacific sold 77,912 acres of land for $301,683. August 1884 the sales were 32,874 acres for $142,637.

A heavy white frost is reported at various points in Michigan Sept. 1st, doing considerable damage to gardens.

The Indian bureau has been informed by the man Crook that the hostile Apaches are now in Mexico, about twenty-five miles south of the boundary line and still moving south.

Commissioner Atkins, of the Indian bureau, has received advices from the southern Ute agency, in Colorado, contradicting the published statements that the Indians have assumed hostile attitude. Everything is quiet at the agency and no trouble is apprehended.

Riel's appeal case came up before the court of the queen's bench on Wednesday, Sept. 2. Prisoner's counsel objected to papers purporting to be records of the case brought from Regina. These records as shown have no seal and are not properly certified. Counsel contended that the original record of the court at Regina and the prisoner himself should be present before the appeal could be tried and the judge decided this must be done before the appeal was argued. Friday next is set for the trial of the case.

IMPORTANT PENSION DECISION.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Second Comptroller Maynard has rendered a decision in a pension case involving that clause in the statutes relating to "last sickness." In August, 1884, Mark Newman, of Leavenworth, Kansas, died with his application for a pension pending before the pension bureau. His claim was granted two months later, and the sum of $2,439 accrued pension decided as belonging to him. He left no widow or children, and there was no one who could touch the accrued pension except the person who had cared for the man in his last illness. A claimant of this kind turned up, and wanted $4,401 for expenses, etc., in caring for Newman in his "last illness." He considered that the "last illness" began when the claimant's disability was manifest. Comptroller Maynard contradicts this, and says that the "last illness" means only the sickness which is the immediate cause of death, and can never be applied to a long period of disability. He therefore allows the payment of money in accordance with this decision, covering the care of the man, his physician's fees, and the funeral expenses.

REVENUE COLLECTIONS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The total collections of internal revenue during the month of July last was $8,832,314, or $581,214 less than for the same period of 1884. There was a decrease of $893,375 in the collections for spirits and a decrease of $10,479 from miscellaneous sources. There was an increase of $184,418 on collections for tobacco, and an increase of $188,501 on fermented liquors.

Killed by the Butter Test.

Baltimore American.

The newspaper reports on the death of the valuable cow Princess II, belonging to Mrs. Shoemaker, stated to be from lung trouble, brought several gentlemen breeders and others interested in the valuable live stock of the State to consult Dr. Ward, the State veterinarian, as to the nature of the disease. He found the entire herd, with the exception of two bulls and one cow, out at pasture, and in apparent good health. The bulls looked splendid. The cow in one of the stables was suffering from garget and enlarged knee joints—a chronic case. The dairyman gave the doctor full particulars of the cow's death, which was from effects of overtaxation of the system during the late butter tests, or, in other words, as the doctor puts it, for making the cow into an extraordinary milking machine and then trying to return her to the ordinary dairy cow. Value II, the other noted cow as a butter-making creature, died three weeks ago from the same cause or causes. Dr. Ward says such severe tests must at all times undermine the constitution of robust animals, and the two splendid creatures were of that class. Princess made forty-six pounds twelve ounces of butter in seven days.

HOLSTEIN FRIESIANS.

A SUMMARY OF THEIR CASE BY EX-PRESIDENT PATTERSON

To the Breeder's Gazette.

It is not likely that I can say anything that will be new or very interesting to those who are breeders of these cattle, but I shall take it for granted that many readers of your valuable journal are not practically acquainted with the breed, and hence they may be interested in a short sketch of some of their valuable points. In giving these points I shall not "cry down" any other breed. I am a lover of thoroughbred cattle of every kind, and each breed known in this country has its value and place. Whoever breeds thoroughbred cattle as it ought to be done is a benefactor to the community in which he lives, and he will almost certainly find it a profitable occupation. In the few years these cattle have been known in this country they have probably grown more rapidly in favor than any other breed, and during the past ten years have been more widely scattered over this country than any other dairy breed. The reason for this is to be found in their real merits. Without using any superlative terms, I may say they combine more good qualities than any other breed—qualities that can be utilized by the farmer. With this breed he may make such changes in dairy products as his market or the exigencies of the case may demand, from butter, cheese, milk or cream, without selling out or changing his breed, while he always has an animal that can be turned into good beef. I may be permitted to intimate that the Holstein-Friesian lays claim to be a general-purpose animal, while I allow the champions of other breeds to boldly assert and prove their favorites to be such, even though at the same time they protest against our claim.

These cattle come from a cold, rigorous climate. They are healthy and hardy. The people of Holland and Friesland have made their living off their cattle for ages, and they have proved an entire success. They have undoubtedly been bred longer for dairy purposes than any other known breed, but probably not with as much scientific care for all this time as has been given to some other breeds in late years. In this want of scientific breeding something may have been lost, but judging by results in other breeds something may have been gained. They have certainly been bred for general purposes and their good qualities have become fixed. With such a foundation the scientific American breeder has an opportunity to work out grand results.

In size they are larger than any other dairy breed in this country. Cows at full age should weigh from 1,200 to 1,800 lbs. and bulls from 1,800 to 2,500 lbs. They are good feeders, the cows when dry take on flesh readily. As yet the demand for bulls is so great that we have not been able to prove that the steers make fine beef, but we know the grades do, and we are satisfied the thoroughbred will make first-class beef when called upon for this purpose. I have never eaten better beef than in Friesland and Holland made from these cattle. They mature moderately well. The calves are very large and make superior veal. They acclimate well, and the experience of the oldest breeders here is that they fully maintain the high standard in this country that they have attained in the old. Though but a few years here, they have become popularized in every Northern State, and they are scattered more or less in every Southern State. Throughout the Northern and Middle States they seem perfectly at home, while in the cotton States they acclimate as well as any other breed and better than some. A recent letter from Mississippi says: "The Holstein-Friesians here fully maintain their high standard for milk and butter, but whether, in our trying climate they will maintain their size is a question for the future to settle, but altogether we are highly pleased with our three years' experience with them."

In speaking of their value as dairy cattle I might give records of individual animals or herds, and well-authenticated tests both in this country and Europe, but with these the public is quite familiar. Such figures only show what individual animals or herds can be made to do, though they do not give a fair idea of what should be expected of the larger proportion of the breed. Cows that will give 90 lbs. of milk or over per day, or from 18,000 to 23,000 lbs. in a year, or those that make 100 lbs. of butter per month, or over 300 lbs. in ninety days, may be classed as exceptional or phenomenal cows, though all of this has been done. But what the beginner wants to know is, what does the breeder expect from his well-bred and well-selected herd? To give a correct idea of this I take, by permission, a few points from the rules for advanced registry, soon to be published. It is well known that until recently there were two herd books in this country recording these cattle, each doing a good work in its way; but in May last these two associations were consolidated and the new Herd-Book Association is called Holstein-Friesian. In this consolidation a wise thing has been accomplished and the breed will be greatly benefited by the united action of all interested breeders. The forming of this new association gave opportunity to formulate new rules in the light of experience. Among the most important may be classed those rules restricting importations, with a view of preventing the importation of inferior cattle cattle. But the most important of all was the adoption of a system of advanced registry. This means the establishment of a standard of excellence of the breed, as indicated by form and performance, and recording in a herd book called the Advanced Registry not only phenomenal animals, but all that come up to that standard. Such a system was first started by the Dutch-Friesian Association and worked with such satisfactory results that it has been adopted by the new association, but, with the light of experience, they have raised the standard higher than before.

These rules have been formulated by the Board of officers, and among them are some of the most extensive and successful breeders of these cattle. These rules are gotten up for the benefit of the breed, and not to boom any individual animals or families. They are made by practical men, who know what their animals can do, and who expect to place a large proportion of their cattle in this Advanced Registry, and this expectation is based upon experience and known results.

This is not the place to explain the whole scheme, but to give an idea of what these men think of their own cattle I will give a few points only. The whole object of the plan is to secure the best results in breeding at large. First, they require a bull to show his quality by his get, and he must scale at least eighty points in the one hundred. Second, a cow must scale at least seventy-five points, and come up to the standard by production of milk or butter. In giving the following figures I believe I am a little below the standard as finally adopted at the last meeting. I have not a copy of the rules before me, but what I give will approximate to the standard, and show the estimation in which these cattle are held. If calving in the two-year-old form she must be proved capable of making in ten months at least 7,200 lbs. of milk, or ten pounds of butter in seven days. If calving in the three-year-old form, at least 8,500 lbs. of milk in ten months, or 12 lbs. of butter in seven days. In the four-year-old form 10,000 lbs. of milk in ten months, or 14 lbs. of butter in seven days. In the full-age form, 11,500 lbs. of milk in ten months, or 16 lbs. of butter in seven days.

When we realize that the ordinary cow of this country will only produce from 3,000 to 4,000 lbs. of milk in a year it will be understood what value is placed on this breed for milk production, and what a margin of profit there is in handling this breed over any other. It is required of a two-year-old heifer to produce almost double what is expected of the ordinary full-age cow, while at full-age we require almost three gallons for one. Thus for the milk-seller or cheese-maker these cattle certainly head the list. We do not expect nor desire to breed for phenomenal richness in milk, but for that normal standard that makes a healthful milk for calves or children to drink, at the same time producing butter in a reasonable quantity. The results of many tests prove that from eighteen to twenty-eight pounds of milk from this breed will produce a pound of butter. These figures are subject to variation by feeding, age of calf, etc. As the ordinary standard for milk they require twenty-five pounds to one pound of butter, and their rules are based upon this standard. It will be seen by the above that an enormous quality of milk is required of the standard cow, and more butter than is required of any other breed.

These rules, adopted by practical dairymen, who have over and over again made tests of their herds, speak in stronger language than any I can use as to the practical value of this breed. It may be said that but few cattle will be recorded under these tests, but if so all the best breeders of these cattle—those who have handled them for years—are entirely mistaken as to their merits. I predict that a large proportion will be found eligible to this form of registry, and this system will prove a success and become popularized. The above should convince those who are seeking the best that they will not go wrong when they select to breed Holstein-Friesians.

As has been the case with all breeds, some inferior animals have been imported and foisted upon the public. The stringent rules of the association will no doubt prevent this for the future, and this system of advanced registry will finally weed out the inferior animals of the past speculative importations. No imported animal can be recorded here except it is registered in Europe or out of such registered stock. Besides it must pass a rigid examination here before it is accepted. Thus for the future it is hoped the public will be protected from inferior importations. If those who wish to invest in these cattle will take pains to buy only from reliable men they may be reasonably sure that they will secure herds that will give them pleasure and at the same time produce such results as no other breed can attain.

Wheat Across the River.

Grand Forks Plaindealer: A Plaindealer representative visited the fine farm of Mr. W. H. Hackney over in Minnesota yesterday, where he was threshing his wheat. Mr. Hackney has 800 acres in crop, and it is now in the shock. What he has threshed so far grades No. 1 hard, and the yield is about twenty bushels to the acre. He thinks his farm will average that figure all the way through, and some will be even better. Mr. Hackney says he had not been looking for 25 or 30 bushels, and was satisfied with what he was getting. This farm has been always noted for good crops, and 20 bushels per acre is good for this year, when other portions of the country are considered.

They Were Tempted.

St. Paul Globe: It is stated that a few days since the market price for wheat at junction points along the Northern Pacific and Manitoba roads was advanced 3 cents per bushel, providing said article was shipped by the Manitoba road. This was, of course, a blow by that road to give farmers some rebate on shipments, or fix it some other way which would be equal to an advance of 3 cents per bushel, for quotations remain still the same at those points. The Northern Pacific found out about these schemes on the part of the Manitoba, and General Freight Agent Hannaford visited those points and just outside of junction points advanced the price to that which the farmers were virtually paid by the Manitoba. An agreement exists between the two roads to maintain rates and pay equal prices for wheat, but in view of the great amount of wheat to be shipped, temptation could not be resisted.

August Crop Report.

United States Agricultural Commissioner Colman has out his report for August. The long stretch of heat we have had this summer has been accompanied with rains, and therefore been good for corn. The prospect for that great crop has not been better since 1880. In some parts of the country, notably in Illinois and North Carolina, the crop promises to be the largest ever known.

As to wheat—well, the less said about wheat the better. There will be enough to bread this great country, with not much to send over to the subjects of the effete despotisms, and the price will be very high when nobody has any to sell. The prospects for spring wheat has fallen off since July.

There will be a better crop of oats than there was last year. Cotton promises to be the best in ten years, except in 1880.

HERE YOU HAVE IT.

Hoard's Dairyman:

It takes a fearful amount of talking to get some people to see the truth and the value of knowing their cows like dairymen. The Dairyman has spoken in plain unmistakable terms, time after time, of the absolute necessity of seeing to it that the cows are kept up to a full flow of milk in the short pasturage of July and August by extra feed in order that the owner may get a profitable flow of milk later in the season when prices for butter or cheese are higher. Many farmers don't seem to see this. Because butter and cheese are low in the months above named, they will pay but little attention to the cow and let her shrink her milk merely for lack of sufficient milk-producing food. These men ought certainly to know that if they let the cow run down in milk they cannot get her back again after that. But if they keep the cow up to a certain flow in the July and August days, she will keep right along at about the same gauge when the flush feed of autumn comes. Butter is always higher in the fall and then is the time they get pay for the extra feed in the summer months. To illustrate this matter practically and further to show clearly how much is at stake in this matter, we give the following instance:

Two men in this county furnish cream to a creamery. Each have 11 cows. One of the party was advised to feed his cows extra the past few weeks, when they first began to shrink. He said he was not fool enough to throw away money in feed on cows when butter was as low as it was at that time. The other pursued a different course and kept his cows right up in their flow of milk. Last week we were given the figures at the creamery showing the returns to each of the two men. The first man who was too wise to feed his cows extra got 8¾ lbs. of butter from 11 cows in two days. The second got 18 lbs. from the same number of cows in the same length of time. There we have it as clear as day. There are hundreds of farmers who are like the first man where there is one like the second. Does not these two cases show clearly that there is yet a great deal to be learned in dairying by farmers who suppose they know fully enough to handle cows. There is not a step in the business but what is full of the necessity for study.

Economy in Feeding.

It is a common expression that a certain animal on the farm does not eat much, and this is considered as an advantage. Just the opposite should be desired. In feeding animals the desideratum is the conversion of food into meat, milk or butter, and the greater the feeding capacity of the animal the greater its usefulness, provided it assimilates its food. Like any other machine the animal is intended to manufacture the raw product into a commercial commodity, and the more of the raw product it uses the better. We must not overlook the fact, however, that some animals do not give as good results on the same quantity of food as others, and it is there the farmer must look. He will then learn that something depends upon the kind of animal he uses, exactly as any manufacturer is affected in his production by the kind of machine he uses. Some machines will perform twice as much service as others with the same power, but with a first-class machine he will not object to the power, if its capacity requires it to be great. An animal should be required to give equally as good results for its care as the machine does to the manufacturer. It is business, and does not pay unless conducted on the most economical system. Economy of feeding is that method which uses only those animals that are capable of digesting and assimilating large quantities of food—the larger the better—and the animal that eats but little and produces accordingly should be discarded.

Polk County Journal.

Crookston, Sept. 17, 1885.

ROUND HOME.

Since the rain the weather has been just too lovely for anything.

C. E. Chapman, an attorney from Fergus Falls, was in the city on business this week.

No. 1 Hard wheat in the Crookston market is quoted at 66 cents. Not much coming in yet.

Frank Sterrett was in attendance at the meeting of the Board of County Commissioners.

Quite a number of grangers are in to see our county dads this hitch. They don't lack for company.

Judge and Mrs. Reynolds have returned from their visit east. The Judge looks much improved by his trip.

Chas. Churchill came down from his suburban residence, at Woodside, for a chat with his friends this week.

The County Board got down to business on Tuesday as per announcement. All present except the doctor.

At the rate we are progressing it will not be many years before Polk County can show some of the best stock in the State and lots of it.

Seely dishes out a nice soup every morning free of cost. Pretty quick the festive oyster will be on deck and then look out for fun at Seely's.

Polk County not only made a good showing at the fair; but was well represented by an enterprising lot of farmers. This speaks well for our future.

Mr. Webster, of Prescott, Wisconsin, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Ira D. Blanchard, this week. He thinks Crookston a fine city and that's where his head is level.

It seems to be the general impression that wheat will bring a good price in this market by November 1st or thereabouts. It will be worth more next spring.

Go to M. C. Malone for furniture, bedroom setts, lounges, matresses, quilts, pillows, picture mouldings, frames, &c. Prices way down. Hardware at cost.

Mr. John Wallace has gone to Glyndon on a tour of inspection of threshing machine boilers for his company. He has been rushed with work for the past few weeks.

Tom Bjoin has cut off about four feet from his office as he was that much upon the highway. He threatens to plaster what is left and have some style about him.

Among those who were off for the fair last Saturday night were Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Markham, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. I. Fortier, D. S. Bray and Clark Van Housen.

Mat Cornelius reports a yield of 1,550 bushels of No. 1 Hard from 80 acres. It will largely overrun machine measure and will go a trifle over 20 bushels per acre. Pretty good for this year.

Most of Polk County's installment at the fair arrived at home on Saturday noon well satisfied with the results of the expedition. A great many more left on Saturday evening to be in at the death.

Among the Polk County grangers who took in the great State Fair last week was Mr. A. L. Jackson, of Edna. A. L. is one of our intelligent, enterprising farmers who do not neglect such chances to post up.

Mr. A. G. Gallasch has returned from his trip and will be followed soon by a large stock of goods which he purchased at figures that will allow closer prices than ever before. Call on Hack & Gallasch before you buy.

The wet weather did not interfere seriously with harvesting operations. A large portion of the grain was already in stack and it was only those threshing out of the shock that suffered much inconvenience. Threshing was generally resumed on Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday.

Lee & Herrick have secured the services of Mr. C. W. Riehl, an old St. Paul wheat buyer, to buy for them this fall. He will be on the market as soon as the wheat begins to come in more freely. For square dealing the boys cannot be beat, and we advise our friends to try them before selling their wheat.

Coroner H. Shephard was summoned to the Red River country to hold an inquest on the dead body of Knute Bjornson on Monday. The jury rendered the verdict "that the deceased came to his death from heart disease, hastened by the immoderate use of alcohol, drank on the 12th day of September."

Mr. John A. Flesch was in from the Thirteen Towns on Wednesday and reports wheat turning out well for this year. What they do get so far has graded No. 1 Hard. A great deal of interest is manifested in stock, and farmers will engage in stock-raising as soon as they can make the necessary arrangements.

Mr. Wm. Box bought a choice Holstein-Friesian calf from the Zumbro Valley herd of A. Harrington last week at the fair. The animal is only five months old but is bigger than any yearling in this upper country. Mr. Box intends to establish him as the leader of his herd on the farm near Warren. He has secured a choice animal to commence with.

Dr. Nelson is up from Garfield this week.

Barley starts in at 45 cents. Better than wheat.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet with Mrs. Gullette on Friday the 18th inst. at 3 p. m.

Potatoes have been selling in this market at 40 cents. At this price they are more profitable than wheat.

John Paterson, Al. Chiniquy, W. A. Lanctot, C. A. Davis and W. E. Hartshorn went down to the State fair on Saturday.

Work on the addition to the Commercial is going on at a lively rate. It will add largely to the capacity of that excellent hostelry.

The Union Gospel Temperance meeting will be held in the Methodist church next Sunday evening at half past 7 o'clock, Rev. C. E. Page deliering the lecture.

It is reported that Will Kops and Miss Lizzie Malone were married in Minneapolis recently. Their many friends in this city unite in wishing them bon voyage.

Clark Van Housen returned from his visit to Steuben Co., N. Y., last week. He reports that we know nothing about hard times here in the Valley compared with times east. Farmers are having serious trouble from wet weather, harvest help commands 75 cents per day, and farm produce is extremely low.

Mr. C. Olsen, a prominent farmer of the town of Garden gave us a pleasant call on Monday. Mr. Olsen reports crops light in yield this year but of more than average quality. Farmers are talking stock and will doubtless go into it more or less extensively this fall and next spring. This is as it should be. When we get into stock more we shall begin to prosper.

My stock is now complete with everything needed in the jewelry line. You will get the latest style, finest quality, lowest prices at C. H. Saake, the jeweler.

Owing to the rainy weather during fair week, the managers decided to hold over Monday and Tuesday of this week. The fair on all railroads was put down to one cent a mile on Saturday morning which induced many to go who did not feel like investing at one and one-fifth fare. About as many went from Crookston as had gone earlier in the week. The train left here on Saturday evening well loaded.

Please bear in mind that I am watchmaker and jeweler of many years' practical experience and so am able to sell just as represented, C. H. Saake.

A carload of hogs were bought in Chicago about August first and brought to Polk County to go on a stock farm. Shortly after arrival they commenced to die with hog cholera and about one-half the number have so died. The strangest part of it is that hogs a mile and a quarter away have taken the disease and died. The original lot have not been allowed to come in contact with any others and were all buried as soon as they died.

Great bargains in watches, clocks, jewelry, spectacles, etc., at C. H. Saake the jeweler, Main Street opposite Merchants' National Bank.

The Northwestern Breeder's Association will hold a public auction of Holstein-Friesians on the old Minneapolis fair grounds on Thursday, Oct. 8th at which time they will offer 40 head of their choice herd. This will be a grand opportunity for all who wish to secure some of this noted breed as all who have not the money to invest can get time with good security. There will be no postponement for weather as, if it should rain the sale will take place under cover. This herd contains some of the choicest milkers of the old Mooie strain as well as some noted beef animals. To all who think of buying we would recommend this opportunity as these cattle will be sold for whatever is offered and they will probably never go at such low figures again as they do this fall.

Special attention is called to a very elegant diamond ring at C. H. Saake's jewelry store, which is said to be one of the clearest and finest. Don't fail to see it.

While on the fair grounds last week we called at the Farm, Stock and Home booth where we met its veteran editor, Col. John H. Stevens and its gentlemanly managers the Messrs. Owens. We have never had occasion to change our first opinion of this paper, that it was an earnest friend of the farmer and an hour's chat with these gentlemen but confirms our opinion. Col. Stevens is too well-known to need an introduction by us having been in this State years before we were born, and always having worked faithfully for its best interests. The Messrs. Owens are comparatively new to our State but not new to the business of opposition to monopolies. They are energetic and enterprising men, fully and thoroughly identified on the side of the farmer, and have built up a large list for their excellent journal, which list, we are pleased to note, is steadily on the increase. Every farmer should have Farm, Stock and Home.

STEAM THRESHERS'

Mutual Insurance Association,

Of Minnesota.

The object of this Association is Organization, Mutual Benefit and Protection, and is incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota as an

and it is the duty of every owner of a Steam Threshing Machine to become a member. It also admits, as members, engineers, firemen, and feeders of steam threshing machines.

After an Inspection of any Steam Threshing Machine Boiler by the Inspector of this Company, if the boiler is proven safe, a Certificate of Inspection is given, and if any of the above named persons are admitted to membership in this Association, no further inspection of the boiler is necessary, according to the new boiler Inspection law, which reads as follows: "This act shall not apply to boilers owned or controlled by Railroad Companies, nor shall it apply to boilers inspected by Insurance Companies and certified by their authorized Inspector to be safe."

Before commencing business, and to be sure they were right in the matter, the Board of Directors ordered the Secretary to obtain the opinions of some of the most talented attorneys of the State, and responses have been received from Hon. H. Steenerson, State Senator, Hon. Gordon E. Cole, the eminent jurist, Ex-Judge Thomas Wilson, of the Supreme Court of Minnesota. These opinions are on file in the office of the Association in Crookston, and are to the effect that the Company's certificate is all that is required by law, and cannot be interfered with by the State Inspector.

The manner of inspection by this company is the same as that of other insurance companies, and also railroad companies, by as old boiler makers say it is not a test, but an unnecessary strain. If the boiler is all right before it is put on, there is no knowing how it is when taken off. The test by water is based on a false theory. The examination by a competent boiler maker is all that is necessary. Common sense ought to teach that. JOHN WALLACE.

Mr. Wallace is the Inspector for this company and is endorsed by the boiler makers of Minneapolis. Make your application to the Inspector or to the Secretary.

The Skating Race.

On Wednesday evening of last week, at Grand Forks, Jud Carruth met what Detroit calls the champion skater of Minnesota and Dakota and downed him so easy that he hardly realized that he was skating a "real live champion!" The Detroit Record says of the race:

"Max Nicolaus left Detroit on his skating tour last Monday evening. His first races were in Grand Forks Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Owing to a fall and a partial disablement he lost Wednesday's race by a mere scratch, but was confident of winning Thursday evening. We have not heard how this race came out."

The Grand Forks Plaindealer explains all about that "fall" and shows that it was an attempt by Nicolaus to foul Carruth; it shows also that in spite of the attempted foul, Carruth beat the "champion" too easy. The Plaindealer says:

"The announcement that Jud Carruth, who is always a favorite here, was to be matched against Max Nicolaus in a five mile skating race, drew to the rink a goodly number of people who were to applaud, as usual, the great efforts of Carruth, and deride the miserable attempt of Nicolaus, who is the poorest apology for a fast skater that we have ever had here; in fact, his efforts were more suggestive of a man who skated alone for the receipts allowed him than one who entertained the slightest idea of ever winning a race. Carruth soon gained half a lap, and as he passed Nicolaus the latter made a suspicious fall, which nearly threw Carruth; this possibly was accidental, but if so, it occurred at a time which naturally gave it a treacherous tinge. Carruth won easily in twenty-one minutes. The judges were Messrs. W. H. Topping, Martin Walsh and C. A. Hale."

The Herald corroborates the Plaindealer's statements and goes as far as to say that Carruth is a world-beater. If Mr. Nicolaus really lost by an honest fall why didn't he try it over? If he is not perfectly satisfied that Carruth can easily beat the best time he ever made his chance is good to make more money than he ever dreamed of—when he downs Carruth. There's lots of money in this country that says he can't do it.

What the Globe Calls 'em.

T. A. Hanes, A. A. Gluin, J. A. Chimequey, W. A. Lamtot, John Peterson, I. S. Breny is what the St. Paul Globe calls some of our boys who are at the fair. Do you know 'em?

The Duluth Market.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 15.—The wheat market is rather dull, opened strong with Oct. at 85½c; December, 89½c; but did not hold there long gradually dropped to closing price, September 84c, October 84½c, December 82½c. Receipts, 195,000 bushels; shipments, 44,000 bushels.

More Good Stock for Polk County.

Mr. E. M. Walsh bought a fine yearling Holstein-Friesian heifer and a five months old bull from the Zumbro herd on the fair grounds last week. These choice animals, with Mr. Box's bull calf will be sent here after the Rochester fair. Will probably be along next week some time.

W. W. McNair, a prominent Democratic lawyer of Minneapolis, died in that city on Tuesday morning at the age of 49 years and 8 months. He was born in Livingston County, N. Y., and in 1857 came to Minneapolis where he has since lived. He had acquired a large fortune being worth over $1,000,000. In 1876 he was the Democratic nominee for Congress but was defeated. He was one of the most prominent and well-known Democrats in the State. He leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn his loss.

As Usual.

About this time every year the millers begin to get impatient to have wheat more lively, and as a result the price goes up a cent, or two. So it is that for a few days wheat has been climbing up a trifle. Now, if farmers should respond and throw large quantities of wheat into the market to meet this bid, the effect would be now, as in the past, to depress the price below the cost of production. There is no hurry needed at this time for there is not one farmer in the county who cannot hold his wheat until November 1st, and if every bushel is held until that time it will make a great difference in favor of the farmer. It is the opinion of our best business men in this city that no farmer will be crowded who holds for a better price, even though his obligations mature on Oct. 1st. The price of wheat will not be as good at that time as later, but it will be better if all of the wheat remains in the country than it will if thrown upon the market at once in a volume. Every farmer should hold just as long as possible, and those who are able to carry over will be well repaid for their labors. While we have not as good an average yield as last year, the quality will average as good and the price will be far better if the wheat is properly handled. The way to handle it is to hold it until the buyers will pay what it is worth.

Steam Plows.

In England the steam plow is made successful, and the same method could be applied here, only that it is not practical from the fact that it is done there by stationery engines, by the use of long wire ropes. To be practical here on our almost endless fields the engine must draw the plows. So far the efforts have proved futile owing to soft ground. We have before us a pamphlet discriptive of a traction engine that looks like it might be practical. It is so constructed as to carry its track along with it, and its inventor claims that it will plow anywhere where a team can find sufficient footing to plow. We should like to see it tried for if it should prove a success it would open the way for raising wheat for about one-half the present cost, and that is one thing that farmers in the near future have got to figure to do. With the vast amounts of India wheat added to the balance of the world's production, the prospects are that dollar wheat is a thing of the past, save, perhaps, during extraordinary years like the present. There is an effort being made to bring one of those plows to this county and we trust it will be successful.

THE STATE FAIR.

We had the pleasure of spending Thursday and a part of Friday upon the new fair grounds, located between St. Paul and Minneapolis. It will be remembered that, last winter, the county of Ramsey offered the Ramsey County poor farm, a tract of 200 acres, to the State for a permanent fair grounds, providing the State would appropriate $100,000 to erect the necessary buildings. This offer was accepted and the appropriation made and to-day the State is the owner of the finest tract of land for this purpose in the United States. While the amount of work already accomplished with the $100,000 is surprising, and one is led to wonder how so much could be accomplished with the money, yet the impression remains that there is yet very much to be done to render the grounds complete. The tract is very rolling, which renders a great deal of grading necessary, and there should be shade trees set out at once about the grounds, while, if the first fair held is any criterion for the future, there will need to be erected more buildings, as the space this year was very inadequate to the demand. The main building, a large brick structure, was crowded, as was the others in which were miscellaneous articles, while the four large cattle barns, being found insufficient for the large display of cattle, a temporary building had to be provided. The display of dairy products was the largest and finest ever shown in the State, and attracted a good share of attention. If one has any doubts as to Minnesota as a producer of No. 1 Hard butter, as well as the best wheat in the world, he should see the magnificent display of dairy products, and then go down to the stock barns and see where it came from. Polk County made a rattling good display of her grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables, thanks to Mr. John Knuppe, who worked early and late to get up a good display. In every department the display was fine and the stranger within our gates was deeply impressed with the great resources of Minnesota. The grand stand is a mammoth three-decker, capable of accommodating at least 15,000 people.

AMONG THE CATTLE.

To say that the display of cattle was magnificent conveys but little idea. There were some of the finest specimens of cattle in the United States on exhibition, and F. A. Squiers, of Blue Earth City, exhibited the only herd of Brown Swiss cattle in the State. These cattle are new to the United States, are of medium size, small-boned, well formed and are said to be excellent milkers and equally good for beef. They resemble, somewhat, the Jerseys, and we presume to say that one-half the people who saw them and did not stop to see what they were, called them Jerseys. Our space will not permit us to give a notice of each herd in detail, suffice it to say that the display of Short-horns, Holsteins, Jerseys, Galloways, Polled Angus, Devons and Herefords was large and complete. The Holsteins, or "Holstein-Friesians" as they are now called, elicited a good share of attention and seemed to be the favorites. They have been in the State but a few years, and the fact that the number on exhibition was greater than the Shorthorns, speaks well for their growing popularity. They are destined to be the leading cattle in the State, as they are in the United States. There were many private sales of these cattle on the grounds, some for Polk County.

THE HORSES

on exhibition showed that our State is not neglecting this important industry, and she need not be ashamed of the display there made of horses of all kinds and breeds. We cannot close this article without appending an article from the Globe which shows the value of our dairy interests and what others think of it:

"Words of encouragement have been heaped upon the dairymen of Minnesota by representative dairymen and officers of dairy associations from other states for the interest they have manifested in the fair this year. To those who are in the habit of attending fairs in other states, the display in the dairy building has been very favorably commented on, and we feel that the words of praise bestowed will not be lost on our creamery men and dairy farmers. The kind words of Col. T. D. Curtis, the veteran of New York, are significant, and his remarks about breeding should be carefully heeded.

WHAT A MODEST SECRETARY SAYS.

Speaking of Minnesota as a dairy state, Secretary McGlincy, of the Northwestern Dairymen's Association, said Minnesota is destined to take high rank as a dairy state, and will cause some of her Northwestern sisters to look sharply after their laurels, or the North Star State will have them all; she now excels in the quality of her butter, as testified by the judges at the great exposition at New Orleans last winter, when the contest was so sharp that the weight of a hair might have turned the scale in favor of some other competitor. The rapid strides made in dairying in the past two years leads to the belief that she will soon equal, if not surpass them, in the quantity of butter made. In 1880 the cow population was a little over 300,000. Now there are

and they still continue to increase. Minnesota is possessed of a wonderful climate, and stock of all kinds do remarkably well; rarely do we hear of sickness among farm animals; the native grasses of the state are so luxuriant and nutritious that dairy cattle thrive on it with but little grain, and the grazing season is about as long here as it is in Illinois. Grass is the foundation for feed for all domestic stock, and if there were more of the tame grasses the right step would then be taken, but in time these will be found upon every farm. Small grains do so well here that the farmers can raise all they want. The water supply is both abundant and wholesome, and water is an absolute necessity in dairying; in fact, all the requisites for successful dairying are to be found in almost all parts of the state. Some people object to the state because of the rigors of the winter, but it is well known that farm animals can be made comfortable here in winter at a very trifling expense. With the amount of hay and straw raised on the farms, warm sheds can be made, by using a little lumber, and, by the way, we may add, lumber is cheaper in this state than feed. It is true that there is made on the farms, but that is because they have not the facilities for making it better; yet we think they should make an effort to improve it. One great cause of so much poor butter is that it is spoiled by overworking. Butter should be worked as little as possible, for the working breaks the grain, and the butter becomes salvy and loses its aromatic flavor. Then too many farmers' wives are burdened with other cares, and cannot churn at the time the cream is in the proper state. Old cream makes butter with white specks. This arises from the fact that the casine or cheese matter has become incorporated with the butter fats. Poor salt is another cause of poor butter, and it is singular that people will be willing to lose 3, 5 or 8 cents per pound on their butter, in order to save a few cents on salt. It requires only one ounce of salt for a pound of butter, and the best is none too good for use. We hope that people will consider this point. These causes of poor butter can be overcome, and the country merchant and the consumer can aid very much to improve the butter made on the farms.

THE GATHERED CREAM SYSTEM of dairying has, and will prove a blessing to the farmers. Under this system the milk is left sweet on the farm for feeding purposes. It enables the farmers to make pork and raise their calves, which cannot be done when the milk is sent to the creamery. In selling the cream the farmer gets about as much for it as he would if he made and sold the butter, and it relieves the female portion of the household of the care of the milk, cream and churning, and to the tired wife, daughter or hired girl this is quite an object.

Let the farmers be educated in this matter, arouse their pride, and Minnesota will have no cause to regret that the products of her farms are marketed in the butter tub, the cheese box or in the shape of pork, mutton or cattle.

W. D. HOARD,

president of the Northwestern Dairymen's association, says that Minnesota has reason to be proud of the progress she is making in dairy matters. Care and attention is necessary in order to secure fine goods, and as the people are recognizing that fact improvement is being made that will prove lasting.

Samuel B. Davis, of Chicago, one of the largest cheese buyers in the west, says they make good cheese in Minnesota, and the exhibit at the fair is very good indeed.

C. F. Dexter, of Chicago, of the Merchants' Dispatch line, himself an old butter and cheese dealer, says the butter and cheese on exhibition does the dairymen proud, and he commends the officers for the deep interest they have taken in matters pertaining to the dairy.

WHAT THE LADIES DO AND SAY.

The ladies are all more or less interested in dairying, and many of them have acquired considerable skill and reputation as butter makers, and their names are becoming almost as familiar as household words. Meeting Mrs. M. H. Lamb, of Alma City, and knowing she was a butter maker of considerable note, we obtained a few figures from her concerning her dairy. She says from Sept. 1, 1884, to Sept. 1, 1885, she milked fifteen cows and eight two-year-old heifers, from which she made 5,715 pounds of butter, being an average of 284½ pounds per cow. The butter sold at an average of 26 cents per pound, making a total of $1,485.90, or $62.72 per cow. She says that the feed cost $8.08 per cow, leaving $57.64 net per cow. In the herd are nine grade shorthorns, the remainder being full blood and grade Jerseys. The feed consists of equal parts of oats and corn by measure ground together, and an equal measure of bran; of course, the cows have plenty of good hay. Her butter is marketed among the private families of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and she has calls for about all she can make. A few days ago a gentleman from Little Rock, Ark., desired to arrange with her for a yearly supply of butter for his own table. Thus does the fame of the Minnesota butter makers spread through the realm.

Miss Elizabeth M. Leggitt, of the Northoaks farm, is another noted butter maker, and one who thoroughly understands the care of milk, cream and butter. She operates a De Laval cream separator on the ground, Mr. J. J. Hill of the Northoaks farm having loaned this for the occasion. She makes about 200 pounds of choice giltedge butter, which is sold to private families in St. Paul at an average of 30 cents per pound. Mr. Hill's dairy operations are carried on the year around, his cows are all thoroughbreds—Jerseys, Short-horns and Polls, and the dairy-house is a model of neatness and comfort, and supplied with all the appliances necessary to aid in making good butter.

Besides the above there are hundreds more ladies who know how to make gilt-edge butter, and they are proving good educators and stimulating others to emulate them. The dairy maids are an honor to the State and deserve credit for what they have done.

CREAMERY VS. DAIRY BUTTER.

"Why don't you give dairy butter a puff; why always creamery; ain't dairy good?" The questions come quick and fast, in a high treble key, and as we turned to behold the speaker, saw it was a lady, and we replied: "We do; we mention creamery so often because it is a leading industry; yes, dairy butter is good," and as she went away apparently satisfied we stopped to think, and as we thought we evolved the following, which we had "absorbed," and thought a good application could be made of it. In a radius containing 500 little farms, on churning day 500 women empty 500 cream jars at 500 temperatures into 500 churns, and 500 small boys are kept from school or other work to continue their hatred of the farm by 500 hours of labor at those 500 churns. Then the 500 women work the 500 lots of butter into 500 little dabs, with 500 different flavors, colored 500 different shades of yellow, and sold at groceries for 500 different prices, and yet butter-making don't pay. What is the sensible way of doing this work? Let the farmers come together and start a joint stock company put up a factory with a good butter-maker and two or three men to help him, and then let those 500 lots of milk be brought to their factory and be made up into one kind of first-class butter that sells as a uniform article at a uniform price, and then let these 500 women and 500 boys go to work at something more profitable and something they know more about. If you can't get a good butter-maker, turn the creamery into a cheese factory."

While there were some features of the fair that might be improved yet as a whole the first State fair held upon the new grounds be called a grand success. Much allowance must be made for the circumstances under which this fair was held, everything having had to be created new, lack of time and means and the thousand and one lesser details to be attended to, make the work more than usually severe and complicated. The officers have done remarkably well and the appropriation has been judiciously expended and the people of the State should be and doubtless are well satisfied with the results so far.

The Cold Water Test.

A FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.

A Steam Threshing Engine Explodes and Robert Cughan Is Instantly Killed.

Bathgate Sentinel, Sept. 10.

Yesterday afternoon occurred one of those terrible scenes that fortunately are visited but rarely upon the people of the country. Coming so unfrequently as they do all the more does the effects appall us. The result of steam when confined under pressure and then bursting its fetters is almost irresistible.

At half past two the report of a heavy detonation startled the citizens of town and the buildings rocked and swayed as if under the malign influence of some subterranean power. Rushing to the outside air, floating steam drew the attention to the street in front of F. A. Wilson's old machine office. In the street there an engineer had been assisting George West put his Minnesota Chief steamer in order, preparatory to taking the same into the country. Both Mr. West and the unfortunate victim—Cughan—were at work on the boiler and the former left for a minute to procure some oil, and was on his return to the same when the boiler exploded with terrible force and the wreck that ensued almost defies description. The main flue had given way and the entire side of the rig had been blown to pieces. The fearful force can be imagined when we say that portions of the metal weighing in the neighborhood of 600 pounds, were hurled a distance of three hundred feet. The window lights in the buildings of M. P. Fadden and I. J. Chevalier, a hundred feet off, were entirely demolished and the entire front of the Wilson building destroyed. The engineer was on the top of the boiler leaning over the engine cylinder, and of course was instantly killed. His body was thrown a distance of four hundred feet and so bruised, crushed and burned as to be almost unrecognizable. But little can be ascertained in regard to him. He had worked for Mr. West, off and on, for three years, and was considered a sober, reliable man—understanding his business. In the morning preparatory to firing up he had tested the ill-fated boiler with a pressure of 100 pounds of cold water, and supposed this equalled all the steam they would ever carry. Five minutes previous to the explosion there is known to have been 100 pounds of steam on and the glass indicated about three gauges of water. Some think the water was foaming and the water really low, exposing the flues, and on the subsidence of the foam, the overheated flues generated such a pressure that the safety valve was unable to carry it off. It is worthy of note that the boiler was blowing off at the time. Some machinists who have examined the wreck say there was a flaw in the iron which had been patched up with rivets and it was this portion that gave way. Some portions of the main flue seems to be considerable thinner than the balance and would indicate that at some time the boiler had been badly burned.

DIGEST OF LAND DECISIONS!

By the Commissioner of the General Land Office and Secretary of the Interior, prepared and reported semi-monthly for the Polk County Journal by Archibald Young, Attorney at Law and late Examiner of Mining, Railroad, Homestead, Pre-emption and other contest cases in General Land Office. Office 637 F. St., Washington, D. C.

PRACTICE.

Failure of R. and R. to give notice of decision in writing will excuse party from filing his appeal within the required 30 days. (Elliot vs. Noel, Secretary, July 28th 1885.)

2d. Office will adhere to its former practice in cancelling final entries for fraud etc. until the Supreme Court has had an opportunity to pass upon the question. (Acting Comr. concerning Judge Deady's decision. August 15th 1885.)

3d. H'd entry of a claimant whose son was a clerk in the local land office allowed, notwithstanding circular of Sept. 25th 1876. Office regulation cannot defeat statutory right. (Richardson vs. Linden, Sec'y July 22d 1885.)

MINERALS.

Proceedings to obtain patent for unsurveyed land instituted in the wrong land district must upon the discovery of the mistake, be commenced de novo in the proper local office. (Exparte Jacobs. Acting Comr. Aug. 10th 1885.)

HOMESTEADS.

A soldier can be credited on his homestead entry only for the time of actual service where he was discharged for disability existing prior to his entry into the service. (Exparte Bomgardner. Acting Comr. Aug. 22d 1885.)

PRE-EMPTIONS.

A trustee of a convict under sentence having submitted proof, showing compliance with pre-emption law by costui que trust up to date of his conviction and by himself, the trustee from that time to date of offering proof, the entry should be allowed. (Exparto Howard. Comr. July 24th 1885.)

2d. Sickness in claimant's family always taken into consideration, but it is not of itself a sufficient excuse for non-residence. (Cleaves vs. French, Review, Acting Sec'y Aug. 10th 1885.)

HOMESTEAD OR TIMBER CULTURE.

Entry is subject to contest if claimant without showing a disposition to comply with the law, or offers to sell his relinquishment or place it in the hands of an agent for sale. Acting Comr. Aug. 13th 1885.)

TIMBER CULTURE.

An application to contest received by mail prior to opening office for business should have preference over the one presented in person. Application for an extension of time, uncorroborated, no bar to a contest. (Exparte Howard, Assistant Comr. July 2d 1885.)

GENERAL NEWS.

The Spanish government officials fear that England will force Spain to a commercial treaty, by continually menacing Spain with the assertion that England can at the present, see no reason for recognizing the claims of Spain to sovereignty over the Caroline Islands.

A dispatch from Madrid to the Standard says: If Spain persists in her objection of arbitration in the Carolines dispute, Germany will endeavor to convene a conference of the European powers and the United States, either at Paris or Vienna, for the purpose of deciding the principals which shall govern the acquisition and protection of territory in the Pacific. The convention will be similar to the recent Congo conference.

Cholera is spreading in the south part of France. At Manosque there has been eighty deaths within three weeks. Many deaths have occured in other towns. Aubagne twenty-five persons died from the disease within a few days. The epidemic is decreasing at Salon.

Official returns show that 93 per cent of the deaths from small-pox at Montreal are French Canadians, who are averse to vaccination. Of the one hundred and twenty-eight deaths from small-pox in that city last week one hundred and eighteen were French Canadians. Fifty per cent of the death rate is among children from one to five years old.

A threshing machine and about one thousand bushels of wheat were burned on C. O. Jones' farm, a few miles south of this city last evening. A spark from an engine set fire to the load of wheat that was at the side of the separator. The fire went through the stubble, burning every shock of wheat in its course. The mules which were hitched to the wagon were badly burned.

Big Bear has been sentenced to a term of three years in the penitentiary. He will probably get all he wants to eat and will not have to skirmish around for it.

GOOD ADVICE.

The Messenger, at Red Lake Falls, in one item advises its farmer readers to hold their wheat by all means. In the very next item following it remarks that there are a few of those farmer readers who owe the Messenger small sums and if they do not pay up in a few days the bills will go into the hands of a lawyer for collection! How is that for consistency? If every business man takes the same attitude how is the farmer to "hold his wheat?" There is a point here that we use this illustration to call attention to and that is this: In order to enable the farmer to hold his wheat for paying prices all business men MUST help him by exercising all the patience possible. Now we well know that all of our business men need their money and would like it right now but we know that to get it the farmer must make too great a sacrifice and hence any business man who has any interest in the welfare of his country will make a great effort to aid his farmer patrons and will not make him extra trouble and costs unless to save himself from ruin. Of course there are some who don't care a continental for the country or anybody else so long as they get their money (and they don't care how they get it, either) and the farmers will be very apt in the future to remember those who help them in this pinch.

A Final Appeal for Riel's Respite.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 15.—Riel's counsel, Linnieux and Fitzpatrick, arrived here this morning to make their final appeal for a respite for their client. Court will be held this evening, to hear why sentence should not be carried out on Friday next, the date fixed for the execution. A meeting of prominent French Canadian residents of this city was held here last night, and a petition asking for a respite was unanimously signed and forwarded to the government this morning. Should Riel be hanged the breech which exists between the French Canadians and the English-speaking population will be greatly widened. The impression is this morning that the respite will be granted until an appeal can be made to the imperial privy council.

Hoard's Dairyman: Dairy farming adds one dollar per acre to the value of the land as against grain farming; this is two dollars per acre—good rent. Twenty milch cows in the country, that two men can milk in one hour and a half in the morning, and the same at evening will pay the wages of two hired men and furnish groceries for a good sized family, by selling cream at ten cents a gauge. The skim milk will raise twenty hogs that will be worth $6 each, $120, and to this may be added $300 worth of calves, as clear profit over and above the crop raised by the two hired men. Don't calculate on simply the price of the cream, but take results at the end of the year.

When a farmer takes a load of wheat to market, whatever the quality of it, he is not suspected of rascality or accused of it if the test scale shows the sample is not of standard weight. He knows before hand that the buyer will pick his bag or several bags to try from and that he can get for his wheat only what the price of the grade is worth. He should submit cheerfully to the same kind of justice when he delivers milk. If he could sell poor wheat for the price of good, there would be nothing but conscience and may be a little pride to stimulate him to do better. So long as he can sell poor milk for good there is nothing but his pride and his conscience to make him do better. What he needs is to be taught that his money is dependent on his success in producing the best milk; that it must grade to standard, and that he cannot win with that which is poor and bad.—[U. S. Dairyman.

Take Care of the Horses.

There is probably nothing on the farm that receives as little judicious care and attention to their actual wants as the horse, considering their importance.

Horses need rest, and should not be worked so steadily as some farmers do. The same work which strains the same muscles every day from the beginning of the season to the end, must grow monotonous and very tiresome for the horse, and a few days rest at different intervals would greatly benefit the horse and do him wonderful good. It would pay to keep an extra horse and change about, and not use the same horse throughout the season without any rest or change.

The rearing of draft horses is becoming a very extensive and valuable industry, and is rapidly gaining ground every year among our enterprising farmers. It is readily seen that a good horse would not eat any more than a poor one, but certainly the result accomplished when good horses are kept is far better in every respect, and is an important item which farmers should not overlook, for both the horses and their offsprings will sell for a higher price at any time, besides being a more valuable help on the farm.

Of course the importers of these superior horses make large profits on their work, but they are entitled to it, for it is a lasting benefit, and will gradually grow and increase until all the horses of this country are more or less improved by the introduction of these large, superior breeds.

The high prices which these horses command shows how popular they have already become, but even these high-priced horses are not always treated as carefully as they should be. The feed and care these horses receive has everything to do with their constitutional vigor and strength.

As a rule it is probably true that farmers feed their horses more recklessly than they do other kinds of stock. The first thing to accomplish in feeding horses, or other animals is health, and the next thing, with the horse, is to develop muscle. Do not feed too much corn, especially in summer, as it is too fattening in its effects. It furnishes heat and is excellent in winter when the horses are not working very hard. Of course it is very desirable to have the horses look nice, but looks are secondary to good health and usefulness every time, and whenever we feed for looks, and try to keep the horses sleek and fat, we are very likely neglecting the properties of utility and health.

The change from dry food to pasture should be made gradually and cautiously with brood mares in foal. The foal will be affected more than the mother by this change and it is therefore of great importance for the welfare of both. It is a good plan to allow mares in foal to have freedom of the pasture field early, and a few weeks before they drop their coalts.

The Farmers' Sheep.

F. D. Curtis, Chariton County, Missouri, in an article in the Country Gentleman, describes a crossbred sheep which he has bred, as follows: "I have a family of sheep which have been bred in Chariton for a number of years, and really have been the most profitable sheep in the town, as the lambs have sold the highest—at from $4 to $5 each, turned off in July and August, or when four or five months old. They were sold to the local butchers, and were reared without much extra food. Clover hay and clover pasture were the staple foods. These sheep, which I have named the 'farmers' sheep,' are a cross of Southdown and Cotswold upon the native blood, which was partly Merino. The crosses of Cotswold and Southdown have been so direct and the latter so often, that these sheep resemble the Southdowns more than anything else, but the fleeces are longer and heavier. These sheep I have also crossed upon the Oxford-downs, to increase the size of body and the length and weight of fleece. The body is in excellent form, square and broad, and the legs are short. I shall also try a 'dash' (as the British breeder's) of Merino, to thicken the fleece. Here is work for a lifetime, and it is just what we want to establish—a perfect farmers' sheep, combining mutton and wool in their most desirable and profitable forms; such a flock of sheep that would produce lambs that would weigh from forty to forty-five pounds, dressed, at four or five months of age, and shear, on an average, ten pounds of wool, would pay well in Vermont, or anywhere. Sheep somewhere near this standard can be bred by crossing the Cotswold or Leicester on the Merino. I have crossed the Leicester on the Merino and produced good sheep, and others have done the same thing with the Cotswolds. They will not, however, breed uniform, but revert back to the original blood.

The Ladies' Temperance Column.

PLEDGE.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

Mr. Gladstone is reported as having addressed the brewers of London as follows: "Gentlemen, I cannot permit a question of mere revenue to be considered alongside a question of morals; but give me a sober population, not wasting their earnings on strong drink, and I will know where to get my revenue."

Bad work.

"I drink to make me work," said a young man. To which an old man replied: "That's right; thee drink and it will make thee work! I was once a prosperous farmer. I had a good, loving wife and two as fine lads as ever the sun shone on. We had a comfortable home, and lived happy together. But we used to drink ale to make us work, those two lads I have laid in drunkard's graves. My wife died broken hearted, and she now lies by her two sons. I am seventy-two years of age. Had it not been for drink, I might now have been an independent gentleman; but I used to drink to make me work, and mark, it makes me work now. At seventy years of age I am obliged to work for my daily bread. Drink, drink! and it will make thee work."

The many who call themselves moderate drinkers take no interest in the matter, nor think even that they are the party that fill up the ranks when the miserable drunkard is cut off by death. I would say, beware! Those who take a glass of the stuff, have taken the first step, and it is not for man to tell what the end may be. Besides, on the supposition that moderate drinkers can keep under certain and moderate restraint the appetite for strong drink, are they not in duty bound, by example, to help others who have not such firmness of resolution? We know the old and true adage, "precept teaches but example draws." By this means alone many have been brought from a state of imminent danger into a state of safety. It is not necessary to decry the sale of intoxicating drinks. It has been denounced for many years by the greatest and best of men. A Roman Catholic Bishop, long ago, in Ireland, described a tavern as the Devil's temple, the bar-room as his altar, and that all who frequented it to drink its liquors sacrificed at the shrine of the grim prince of the infernal regions. Good John Wesley in his day called the sale of it the sum of all villainy. And the minister of religion in the present day who will encourage the use of it as a beverage, would sink himself in public opinion and be esteemed as an enemy to himself, to society, to his country and to his God. R.

Every farmer knows that land which has been filled with weeds for years, is not cleansed from them by one ploughing. The seeds are mixed with the soil and when that is turned over a new crop springs up. Yet the land can be cleansed by successive applications of the plough, harrow and cultivator. There is a good deal of similarity between the weeds and the liquor shops. Weeds are noxious to the growth of good crops; so are saloon keepers to society. Bad weeds are widely scattered; so is the liquor traffic, and the bad appetites its creates. Law may in a great measure overcome the weeds by punishing any one who lets them grow to seed; and so may law accomplish much by punishing those who diffuse the seeds of drunkenness and crime. But in both cases it is only by law, improved by experience and well enforced, that the land is to be cleansed. Weeds pop up everywhere; so do liquor sellers, and both have to be carefully eradicated—the one on every good farm, the other in every good commonwealth. The most persistent invader of the latter is the liquor traffic, just as there is no such enemy of fruitful fields as weeds, and each must be continuously stamped out by the most appropriate means.

We always like to nail an argument on moral and political questions with Scripture, and we think the story of "Elijah and the prophet of Baal," which the Sabbath schools are studying about this time, just furnishes one. The prophet, taught of the Lord, knew that idolatry was the besetting sin of His chosen people. Idolatry, in all heathen nations, was closely allied to licentiousness, just as the liquor traffic is now. Idolatry had for years full swing in Israel, being supported by that bold, bad heathen queen, Jezebel, as the liquor traffic has in New York and Chicago, under rum-selling aldermen and drinking police. To put a stop to this common enemy of Israel prohibition had to be accompanied by extinction. The priests of Baal had to go in Israel just as the saloons must go in America. To leave any of the priests would be to sanction others till the country would be again reeking with most horrible rites and filthy practices, and just so, to leave some saloons, however high the license be, would be to sanction more and more of all grades till the hideous evils of intoxicating drinks and their fruits would be restored. Elijah's policy was therefore a necessity. "Slay them all. Let not one escape," and that is the policy that sensible commonwealths must adopt. Kill off all the liquor saloons, grog shops, rum holes, bucket shops and opium joints. Let not one escape. Free the land from them and set free the men that run them, as well as their miserable customers, ere they go down together into the pit from which there is no deliverance.

THE HOLSTEIN-FRIESIAN AS A DAIRY COW.

In his speech before the eighth annual meeting of the Dutch-Friesian Association, held at Detroit, Mich., in Feb. last, Mr. T. D. Curtis, of Syracuse, N. Y., said:

"For successful dairying we must have milk. The Dutch-Friesian cow, properly reared and cared for, gives an abundance of it. It is very rich in caseine, and hence excellently adapted to cheese-making. It is fairly rich in butter, as a rule, and in some cases very rich. Average milk from the herds of the country requires about twenty-five pounds to make a pound of butter. In all of the tests I have seen recorded, the Dutch-Friesian milk has quite equaled this, and in many cases very much excelled it. Often, eighteen or twenty pounds of Dutch-Friesian milk makes a pound of butter. It is quite common for twenty-one or twenty-three pounds to make a pound of butter. But, for argument's sake, we will say it takes twenty-five pounds of milk to make a pound of butter. A good Dutch-Friesian cow will average fifty pounds of milk a day through the summer season. This means two pounds of butter a day, or fourteen pounds a week. She will, in the flush of the season, give seventy-five pounds of milk a day. This gives us three pounds of butter a day, or twenty-one pounds a week. A cow must give 10,000 pounds of milk in a year to be entitled to a place in the Main registry. This insures 400 pounds of butter a year. It is a good cow that turns out half of this in a year. There are more from which less than 200 pounds is made, than there are from which more is made. It is an uncommonly good cow that makes 300 pounds of butter a year. The latter will generally give 12,000 pounds of milk in a year. She not unfrequently reaches 14,000 or 15,000 pounds in a year. I am not speaking of phenomenal cows, some of which reach 16,000 to 18,000 pounds, and one 23,870 pounds. You can figure on these for yourselves. If it took thirty pounds of milk to make a pound of butter, there are 400 pounds of butter in 12,000 pounds of milk, and 480 pounds of butter if we allow twenty-five pounds of milk for a pound of butter. Almost any way you figure it the Dutch-Friesian cow is a famous butter maker, and the butter is of excellent quality. No better goes into the markets of London and Paris. Many who have used it in this country declare it superb.

Then think of the large amount of skim-milk there is to feed. This is just what is needed in a stock-raising country. Add linseed meal or other feed to supply the loss of fat, and calves will thrive excellently on it. If not wanted for calves, it is there for the pigs. Think of skim-milk and corn-meal in abundance for pigs. The skim-milk will supply the muscle and bone material, and the corn will supply the fat. So, for either calf or pig raising the Dutch-Friesian is just the cow.

I have barely mentioned the Dutch-Friesian cow as a cheese-maker, without considering quality. Her minimum record of 10,000 pounds of milk a year, gives us 1,000 pounds of cheese. It is conceeded on all sides that Dutch-Friesian milk is rich in caseine. So we are within limits when we allow ten pounds of milk for a pound of cheese. The average Main registry cow of this breed, gives us 12,000 pounds of milk, which is equivalent to 1,200 pounds of cheese. Grades are not quite so productive of milk, but excel those of all other breeds. It is not uncommon for them to give 6,000 to 8,000 pounds of milk in a year. This is a good deal above the average yield per cow of the herds of the country, which is rather below than above 5,000 pounds of milk. I have known instances where herds of grade Dutch-Friesians excelled all others when their milk was delivered at the cheese factory. It will be noted that 8,000 pounds of milk is good for 800 pounds of cheese.

Some of the figuers I have been using are large—very large. But who ever heard of these big records before the introduction of the Dutch-Friesians? They have been regular eye-openers. Astonished and doubting at first, we have been compelled to believe. It has set everybody to testing his cows, and materially raised the average standard. Cows that do not pay a profit are getting unpopular. But, in spite of all efforts, the Dutch-Friesian remains two or three common cows rolled into one.

Sometimes we hear that she is an excessive eater. She is a large eater, but not out of proportion to the return she makes. What do we want the cow for? Is it not to convert raw material into more valuable product? Do we complain of the spinner that uses up a large amount of cotton or wool, or find fault with the loom that uses up large quantities of yarn? Not if there is no waste. It takes a certain amount of power to overcome the friction and run the machine, which is the cow. It takes no more to run the Dutch-Friesian than any other cow. The food over and above the food of support is the material out of which we get our product. Hence the more food above her support the cow will consume and convert into milk, the better for us—the more cheese, or the more butter or skim-milk we get. Yes, the Dutch-Friesian is a great eater. She turns a larger amount of hay and grain into dairy product than any other cow. This is what makes her so valuable, something does not come of nothing. If milk or beef is made, it must be made of food eaten by the animal. We want the one that gives us the biggest return for the food eaten. I do not hesitate to say the Dutch-Friesian is that animal. She eats the most, and she gives not only the largest amount, but the largest proportionate amount, for the food consumed.

But we have not seen the Dutch-Friesian cow at her best. We are only just beginning to get acquainted with her. We have not yet learned how to breed her to the best advantage. In her I see the basis of a butter cow far superior to the Jersey. She has the constitution to bear further pushing and development. The Jersey has not. By careful selection and breeding I believe we can get all the richness of the best Jersey milk into the large flow of the Dutch-Friesian. Members of your Association ought to develop butter families of Dutch-Friesians by breeding not only from the cows giving the richest milk, but from those in whose milk the butter globule is the largest and yields the most butter to the test of the churn. There really is no other test as yet. The cream-gauge is no correct test. The amount of fat the analyst can separate from the milk is no guide. The centrifugal machine produces a cream still wider from the mark because more variable, owing to the greater or less amount of milk there may be in the cream. We have at last come to the churn—and this is more practical than scientific. We do not yet know enough about churning to produce duplicate results. We may divide a mess of cream as accurately as possible, churn it in two churns made as near alike as possible, and under precisely the same conditions, to all appearances, and yet we will not get precisely the same results. In truth we do not yet know the precise construction of the butter globule, nor how churning causes a separation of the butter from the buttermilk. We do not know whether the butter globule has a membraneous covering or not. Some recent discoveries under the microscope indicate that it has, but the same observation showed that it is not broken in churning, setting the fat free, as has been supposed. Then what is the precise effect of churning that it should set the butter free and cause it to adhere in a mass? Nobody knows. At least nobody has yet told the world. The probability is that the fat globule in milk is almost identical in construction with the soft shelled hen's egg. The hard stearine forms the centre, like the yolk, and the softer fats, according to the degrees of hardness, are arranged around this, the softest on the outside. Around the whole is a thin membrane, like that surrounding the egg and lining the shell. But this is not broken by the churn, or should not be, as a perfect separation may be had without it. Too much churning may break it, so may too much working—indeed it cannot be worked at all without rupturing some of these microscopic eggs—in which case the hard and soft fats are all mingled together, like a hen's egg beaten up so as to mix the yolk and white. This makes the butter oily and the color lighter.

Such are recent intimations, and men are at work on the problems of cream-raising and churning, and there is talk of getting the butter globules to separate from the milk so completely as to need no churning—only salting and packing. True, these are still hypothetical, but we may not be astonished at anything in this age. I expect great revolutions in dairying in the near future. Men are peeping into the secrets of Nature in all directions, and to their patient and generally unrequitted labors are we indebted for the discoveries that, like so many stairs, lie at the bottom of the world's progress.

It is generally understood—and I believe correctly so—that the butter globule in Dutch-Friesian milk is considerably smaller than in the milk of some other breeds. I do not think this is so in all cases. But small at it may be, it is not near as small as that of the Hereford, as shown by the microscopic examinations made by Prof. Brown at the Ontario Agricultural College, in Guelph, Canada. The smallness of the butter globule, however, is not always a disadvantage. It is an advantage if we want to market the milk, use it whole in the family, or make it into cheese—because, in these cases, we want to retain the butter in the milk; and the small globule does not separate so easily, nor does it appear to be so easily separated from the butter-milk by churning. Hence the large butter globule is better for the butter making, but not so good for other purposes.

But let us patiently await the developments of science. So far, it only shows us that we know very little about dairying. But when all is known that can be known, I think there need be no fear that the Dutch-Friesian will fall behind any other cow for the dairy."

FARM NOTES.

Minneapolis Tribune.

FALL PLOWING.

Every intelligent farmer, says a correspondent of the Kansas Farmer, tries to improve his methods by experience, and the experience of different methods. It is a generally admitted fact that fall plowing pays; but the evidence never becomes so plain as when two pieces of land in the same field are tested the one fall plowed, and the other not.

Last year, in July, we plowed one half of a piece of stubble ground. This spring we plowed the whole piece again, sowing in oats and spring wheat. It is evident that the oats on the fall plowed land yield at least a third more.

It pays to fall plow, especially to do it early, so as to destroy the seed before ripe. It will be well to start the plow as early as possible.

I had a little boy drop early corn in the furrow of one acre of the fall plowing above mentioned, which, though never cultivated, made good fodder.

ENGLISH OPINION OF WYANDOTTES.

The latest invention of American fanciers, says the Agricultural Gazette, is the Wyandotte. The success attained by this aspirant for favor is not a little remarkable, and from the specimens we have already seen in this country it is more than probable that they will equal in popularity the Plymouth Rock. It is most surprising, as we noted at the time, that specimens of a new breed should win first prize in the variety class at the Crystal Palace show within one year of its introduction into this country. But the Wyandotte has no prejudice to overcome. It is not so nearly allied to any other variety that one can be regarded as a part of the other. It has a distinct type of its own; its plumage is striking and very pretty, and the whole appearance of the fowl is in its favor. At one time it was called the American Seabright, and this was a very suitable title, for it more nearly resembles the silver Seabright in plumage than any other fowl. But it is larger in size and has a good deal of the Brahma shape (but with a longer neck) and clean yellow legs. The comb is rose, of the Hamburgh shape, but smaller than is seen on that breed. All these combine to make up a handsome fowl.

COARSE BONE MEAL FOR POULTRY.

As our fowls are necessarily confined in small yards, we are obliged to supply them with all the essential kinds of food that they would eat if they were running at large. But previous to the past six months a full supply of shell-forming food has always been at times neglected, and "soft-shelled" eggs or eggs without any shells have followed from the neglect. About six months ago we began to feed our fowls bones broken up to the average size of wheat kernels, and we have never seen a soft-shelled egg since. The fowls are excessively fond of this food in small quantities, and a very small quantity suffices to satisfy them, and to insure sufficient egg-shell material. This quantity we have found to be a full handful given three times a week for six hens. Pure broken bones, ready for use, are sold by all chemical fertilizer firms at $3 per bag of 200 pounds, and it will be seen that a bag will go a long way.

TEST THE COWS.

Colman's Rural World says that every owner of a herd of cows should know what they are individually worth to him. Very few herds can be found in the country but will contain cows that not only do not yield any profit to their owners, but are even kept at a loss, which loss must be made up by the profitable cows. Many cows will give a good quantity of milk while fresh, but will hold out so poorly as to be unprofitable in the end. A cow giving a smaller quantity per day but holding out nine months in the year, will often prove to be the more profitable cow. Again, a cow giving a large mess of milk but of poor quality, may not be worth her keep, especially if butter-making is the object. There are many points to consider in determining the value of a cow: the quantity of milk given in a year, its value for the purpose for which the cow is kept, the amount of food required to keep her, her disposition, ease of milking, etc. It is attention to such points that will often turn a losing business into a paying one. In these times of low prices and small profits, business men of all classes expect to watch all corners, stop all leaks and use less expense, and utilize everything. Manufacturing interests which a few years ago yielded a large profit, now often depend for profit on what was then wasted. The agriculturists in the various departments must not expect to succeed unless they use a similar policy. The dairyman then should have his scales and record book, and should weigh and record what he gives his cows, and what they give him in return, until he knows what each cow is capable of doing; then, knowing the unprofitable ones he can weed them out.

Farmers do too much guessing in their business, and trust too much to chance, luck and the moon, and do too little close figuring. Figures are wonderful eye-openers, and form mighty interesting reading sometimes.

THE WHEAT CROP AND STOCK FARMING.

The benefits conferred upon the country by the development and extension of its live stock interests, says the National Live Stock Journal, are by many person little thought of. Nevertheless, it takes but a few moments reflection to convince everyone of their importance. It is interesting to note the various causes which are tending, from year to year, to cause more people to indulge in just that much reflection necessary to such conviction. Among the most potent of these causes are, without doubt, the vicissitudes of the wheat crop. The course of the wheat crop during the past forty or fifty years can be readily traced; indeed, is familiar to a great many of our older farmers, who, having spent their youth in the eastern states and their prime in the west, have had good opportunities for observing it. They have seen the enormous development of the spring wheat area in the northwest, and vast areas in the central and western states, which they helped to settle, devoted to wheat for years, then abandoned as the result of infertility, due to reckless and persistent cropping, and, in more recent years, again restored to fertility by years of rest from cropping and the extension of stock farming, yielding once more great crops of wheat. Whoever has studied the history of the wheat crop throughout the world must, however, have observed a great increase in the sources from which the world's supply is obtainable, and a few years ago when good crops and high prices in the United States came simultaneously as the result of an unusual series of poor crops in Europe, there were not wanting those who foretold the excess of supply and consequent low prices which prevail to-day, in spite of comparatively short crops. An account of the wheat crop of India, in a recent report on growing crops, issued by the statistical division of the department of agriculture, points incontestably to a time when, in addition to gradually increasing surplus from Australia, Chili and Egypt, that from India will have reached dimensions quite formidable in competition with America. The average export from India for four years has been over 885,000 tons, and the crop yield for 1884-5 is estimated at 7,713,096 tons—a crop which is bound to increase under the fostering care of the English government, and to offer a larger proportion for export, with increasing facilities of internal transportation. The effect of these influences on our American wheat farming must become more and more manifest, even though obscured by an occasional increased demand and better prices, and the farmers will become more and more impressed with the necessity of favoring that kind of farming which shall, while preserving and increasing the fertility of the soil, concentrate the product and economize the cost of transportation and marketing. At the same time that this movement will increase the number of stock-raisers and dairymen, let it not be forgotten that this increase will sharpen competition in these departments, and that soon those who do not keep in the front rank will inevitably be badly crowded.

The finest line of confectionery in the city is at Mac's place on Second street.

Look out for Berthiaume Bros., big ad next week.

The farmers have had a week of fine weather and have improved it to the fullest extent.

Rauenbuehler's is the place to purchase your harness and everything in that line.

Don't miss seeing the Dude at Mac's place on Second street. He's a dandy—the dude, we mean.

The finest line of blank books and fancy stationery in the city at the Second Street News Depot.

Three cents a day is all that it costs you to read a book at the Second Street News Depot's Circulating Library.

"Is it alive?" is what everyone asks when they see the English Dude at the Second Street News Depot.

When you go to Mac's place to see the dude, don't forget that he has fruits, confectionery and cigars for sale.

Ole Bjoin has rented the stable of Frank Jerome, corner of Ash and Robert Street and has opened out in good shape. He will pay especial attention to stabling farmer's teams and invites his friends to call and see what he can do for them.

Mr. M. R. Brown will wield the hammer at the big auction sale on the Keystone, on October 7th, and no better auctioneer exists in the Northwest than he. He makes a specialty of this business and parties desiring the services of a good auctioneer will do well to make a note of thit.

M. Rauenbuehler announces that he is now ready for the fall trade in harnesses and everything thereunto pertaining; also whips, sachels and trunks in endless profusion, and a large assortment of blankets. By all means call on Rauenbuehler, corner of Third and Broadway, and see what bargains he offers this fall.

J. O. Milne has some fine grade calves which he will sell at reasonable rates to any desirous of improving their stock. He has one three-quarter blood bull ten months old, and four half-bloods, from four to five months old. Call at the farm, on section 8, town of Crookston and look them over. They are not easily beaten in this county.

The great auction sale of farming utensils, stock, &c., &c., which occurs on the Keystone farm, on October 7th, is the event of the season for all needing anything in that line. The sale is absolute and the articles mentioned will be sold for what you are disposed to give for them. Don't fail to get there if you need anything, for it is decidedly the event of the season.

There was a change of time last Sunday, by which there will be only one train through and from Winnipeg daily, leaving St. Paul 7:30 p. m., via. Breckenridge, Barnesville, Crookston and St. Vincent, making a day train in both directions and north of Barnesville on each side of Red River, arriving in Winnepeg at about 5:30 p. m., leaving Winnipeg about 9:30 a. m., and arriving in St. Paul 7:30 a. m.

Berthiaume Bro's furnish a ticket to every one who buys five dollars worth of goods at the Palace Jewelry store. This ticket entitles the holder to a chance at a beautiful gold watch and chain valued at $125, to be drawn on Christmas day. This is an elegant gift and the holder of the lucky ticket will have a beautiful watch and chain pretty cheap. Drop in and see what you may get besides your $5 worth of goods.

There has been several attempts made to procure a public library in this city, but although considerable talking was done the library was not forthcoming. Last week, however, Mr. W. E. McKenzie went to St. Paul and without making any splurge about it purchased quite a respectable circulating library for the Second street news stand. There are about three hundred volumes, comprising nearly all the standard works of fiction. The books, which are neatly bound in cloth, will be let out to those wishing to read them at 3 cents per day, which will make cheap reading for our citizens, and should be taken advantage of by all.

Many times the idea of a general market day, to be held by farmers in this city, has been suggested. This would be all right, provided some shelter could be had in case of a rain. We think a better idea would be to have several such days, say one or two in the fall, one in the spring and one just before harvest. To have a yard somewhere with good stable room attached, where the stock could be sheltered in case of a storm and on certain days have an auctioneer, who for a commission, would sell all the stock offered. Once such a business was well established and made permanent it would become so popular as to call in large crowds, thus enhancing business interests greatly. The only objection we can see to the scheme is that no auctioneer could afford to take out a city license, at present, for the amount of commission he would be likely to receive. In such cases as this we believe it would be policy to remit the auctioneer's license.

Ole Bang has gone out to the Thirteen Towns for a few days.

Wheat took a rise of two cents last Friday. It went to 68 cents.

Earnest Buse, of Red Lake Falls, was in the city on business on Tuesday.

Don't fail to attend the big auction, mention of which appears elsewhere.

Barley is quoted in this market at from 45 to 50 cents for No. 2 of good quality.

Riel has been respited until Oct. 18th, pending further legal foolishness. This means, doubtless, that he won't swing.

Peter Carroll takes possession of the new Commercial hotel this week—or the new portion thereof we should say.

Every evil has its compensating blessing. After a hot, wet summer we are having the lovliest fall weather on record.

We understand Rothpletz contemplates supplying a "long felt want" by starting a Democratic sheet in this city at an early day.

O. H. Lucken, O. L. Hanjery and Pete Cornelius went out to the Thirteen Towns last week to appraise State lands the notice for the sale of which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Anderson commenced a drive well on Main Street, opposite Bohn's blacksmiths shop on Saturday. It is intended for a public well and a watering trough is to be put in for the use of the public. This will supply a "long felt want."

Knute Steenerson returned from a trip to the Thirteen Towns last week. Knute thinks they have quite a country up there. Says the new survey runs near Fosston. Crops look well and while the yield will not be large the quality will be good.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings has just received a complete stock of fall and winter millinery, comprising all the latest shapes in straw and felt, also the largest assortment of birds, plumage, feathers and tinsel novelties and will continue to sell at her usual low prices. [22-23]

Postmaster McKinnon should cut down that high threshold a trifle, or else remove that picture from the frame in front of the door, otherwise some fellow will break his neck next thing we know. The post-office should be made as accessible as possible for the convenience of the public.

Lester Grey reports that during the rain, about fair time, lightning struck his barn doing considerable damage. There was some stock in it none being hurt. The most singular part of it was that he had just completed repairs caused by a stroke of lightning last summer. It was struck both times in the same place.

Postmaster McKinnon will have the new delivery stamps on Oct. 1st. Business men will find a list of the delivery offices at the post office. Letters being thus stamped will be delivered to the party to whom addressed by carrier immediately upon arrival at the post-office to which they are directed and can only be sent to cities having the carrier system.

Owing to the change in the railroad time table, the Madison Square troupe, which was to have appeared in the opera house this evening have cancelled their date here. This will be a disappointment to many who were looking forward to the event anticipating a treat. However we are told that a good troupe will be here in the near future to play a week's engagement.

We have received the 1st copy of the Fredonia Chronicle, published at Fredonia, Wilson Co., Kansas, by W. R. Dunn, formerly of the Crookston Chronicle. Bro. Dunn opens out on the Kansans in good shape and appears to have a good fair advertising patronage to start with. We trust that he will meet with a full measure of success in his new home.

Our good-looking post-master, "Sandy" McKinnon, had quite an experience in St. Paul on fair week. It seems, when he retired at the Merchants about 11:30 p. m., on Friday night, he turned the gas down and left it burning slightly. The window was up and the light was blown out after he went to sleep thus allowing the gas to escape. In some way it was discovered about 1:30 and a raid was made upon the room and he was thus rescued from an untimely fate. He is all right now though the experience was a fearful one.

E. M. Walsh and Wm. Box are expecting the arrival of the Holstein-Friesians, purchased at the fair, the latter part of this week. They are all noble animals of the best strains. The sire of Mr. Box' calf was Mooie Hartog, bred by the Unadilla Valley Breeders' Association. He is a fine, promising calf, five months old and promises to rival his noted sire. His dam is Errena, a two-year-year-old cow bred by K. A. Okkinga, Herbayum, Friesland. She is one of the most promising cows in the Harrington herd. Mr. Walsh's heifer is Trixie, 1551, 18 months old, calved March 16th, 1884, bred by C. Jorgens, Beemster, Holland. Her sire is Simon, 280, dam, Biertje, 1670. She is described as follows: Black predominating, narrow blaze, white over shoulders, white over hips and buckle, connecting upon right side. Milk record of dam at 7 years, on grass alone, 74 8 lbs. The bull calf is Goodhue, calved in March 1884, sire Mooie Twisk, 409, dam Frankette, 120, imported. She had a milk record of 66 pounds at 3 years.

Hay is plenty in this market at $5 per ton.

Potatoes hold their own at 35 and 40 cents.

Judge Montague visited the saintly city last week.

E. S. Corser came up to the farm a few days since.

The Andersons have got the public well down about 125 feet.

A number of threshing rigs have taken the field this week.

Wheat is coming in very slowly and the price is crawling upwards.

Mr. D. Cameron reports E. S. Corser's yield at 12½ bushel mostly No. 1 Hard.

Bertus Miller, a saloon keeper of St. Cloud, has been appointed deputy revenue collector vice Geo. W. Benedict, of Sauk Rapids.

The Marquis De Mores, who has been on trial at Bismarck for killing Wm. A. Luffsey, in 1883, was acquitted, the jury being out only about ten minutes.

A bottle of English stout from Charlie Seely's convinces us that some of Charlie's goods are "stout." In point of fact Charlie keeps only the best in the market.

The case of Phillip B. Reilly vs. John Stoughton, brought in Justice Palmer's court to recover wages, decided in favor of plaintiff, goes to the District Court on appeal.

T. O. Bergland brought in two veal calves, eight weeks old and sold them at $14 per head. He also brought along several hogs which brought him 6¼ cents per lb. dressed weight. He is convinced that it pays to raise some stock.

Interviewing Herb Mason, yesterday, we were told that he is too busy making sales and disposing of his goods to write up anything for this week, but look out for next week if he can get a bit of a breathing spell in the meantime.

Mr. M. R. Brown is prepared to attend to all business in Polk County in his line—auctioneer. Mr. Brown is an experienced man at the wheel and has no superior. If you intend to sell out by auction by all means get Brown to do the howling.

Ole P. Renne and his brother were up from Rindal and report that wheat will yield less than last year, though the quality is good. They report a disposition on the part of farmers to hold their wheat. If this could be general it would make a big difference in the price.

Nearly all of the grain is now in stack save a little that is being threshed out of the shock and some that by one thing or another has been delayed. This week, with fine weather will doubtless see it all secured—or should. Taken as a whole the present fall has been a most favorable one for fall work.

The Park Region fair, held at Fergus Falls last week, was a decided success, according to the Fergus Falls Journal. The display of stock, vegetables and other farm products was fine. Polk County is able to get up as fine a display of all these as any new county in the State yet we don't seem to have the gumption or something necessary.

Tom Harris has moved the old Palmer building, recently occupied by McKinnon Bro's agricultural business to Michaud's lot, east of the school house, where it will be remodelled into a dwelling house by Mr. Michaud, who has bought it. Tom is now moving the Baptist chapel out on Broadway between the First National Bank and Justice Lilly's court house, to make room for the new packing house which will be built at an early day.

John W. Fletcher was brought before Esq. Palmer, on Monday, charged with larceny. Sometime since a trunk at the Sherman house was broken open and several articles stolen, among them a pair of shoes. The shoes were found on Mr. F., by Dowling, who asked him where he had obtained them. Mr. F. at first said they were sent him by express, but later said that he had bought them of a man at the Sherman House for $1.50. He was bound over to court in $100, furnished the bondsmen and went back to his pursuit—engineer on a thresher engine.

Marshall County Leader: Miss Inez McGrew, of Crookston, came before Supt. Mattson, Thursday, for examination, with the intention of teaching our village school. Her examination proved her to be well qualified for the work, with just one exception—her age. Mr. Mattson hesitated to grant her a second-grade certificate on that account only. Miss McGrew should feel complimented by this decision, rather than discouraged. Few young ladies can show that they are educated beyond their years in the solid, useful branches, and she is scarcely blameable for not being older.

Some newspapers are finding fault because the fiend Olsen, who murdered a lonely woman in North Dakota recently, was hung by the infuriated citizens. On general principles these private hangings are not just the thing but there are times when they work in to pretty good advantage and this was one of them. The murdered lady was holding down a claim, living alone, and this fiend in human shape went to her little cabin, brutally ravished and murdered her and fled the country. Enroute to Canada, he attempted to ravish another woman but was foiled. When caught he had upon his person articles belonging to the murdered woman and his guilt was clearly proven.

Oats are selling in this market at 85 cents. Not many offered.

Wheat comes in very slowly. This is all right and just as it should be.

Miss Trambley, of Ottawa, has accepted a clerkship in our city post office.

C. W. Kimberly reports wheat 20 per cent short about Beltrami but good quality. Oats excellent in yield and quality.

Fred and E. S. Chapin have sold their Dakota farms and will now confine themselves strictly to Minnesota soil.

Dr. M. Van Dyke, who has been very sick for a few days past is convalesent. He is able to be out a little but looks like he had had a seige of Andersonville.

Conductor John Copeland and Pete Nolan have the new run from Crookston to Devil's Lake. By this arrangment Copeland can be at home long enough to get acquainted with his family. He has every other night and Sundays at home.

Grand Forks Plaindealer: John P. Bray says he saw so many fine head of stock at the Minnesota fair that he is on the lookout for good animals now, and is interested in them whenever he finds them. There are others who attended the fair who came back more than ever interested in good stock.

Felix Fournet's new brick is nearly up. It will be a fine three-story structure, the ground floor will be occupied by Bray & O'Brien, hardware and Geo. McDonell, dry goods. The second floor will be to rent for offices while the masons will occupy the third floor as a hall. It is a splendid block and a credit to our city and its public-spirited builder.

Uncle Damon Dodge was up from Liberty, on Tuesday. On the question of holding wheat he gives it as his opinion that the farmers will be greatly the gainers and if they hold for bigger prices, which, he says, are sure to come. He says that all this anxiety of buyers for the farmer to rush in his wheat shows conclusively to his mind that wheat will be higher and none know that better than the dealers. He says "urge the farmers to hold on to their wheat! Of course they must sell a little for running expenses but they should hold the bulk. It will pay!"

South Side Farm.
Near Crookston, Minnesota:
Sept. 21st, 1885.

Mr. Frank T. Haseltine,
Crookston, Minn.

Dear Sir:—In the spring of 1884 I purchased forty-five thousand young trees from you to set around my farm buildings. There were equal numbers of White Ash, Cottonwood and Box Elder. The result has been entirely satisfactory. The trees have had only fair care, and have grown finely without any considerable loss. The White Ash has given the best results, hardly a single tree having died. I am so well pleased that I shall order within a few days sixty thousand or more trees of you for the planting of 1886. My young grove is the pride of the farm.

Very truly yours,
Elwood S. Corser.

Burning Wealth.

Almost every evening the horizon, on every hand is lighted up with burning straw piles set on fire to destroy them. This is not as it should be and sooner or later the fact will be appreciated. All this straw should be saved to be returned to the soil in the shape of fertilizers and if it can not be readily utilized a sufficient amount of stock should be kept to consume it. Don't burn the straw.

He Deserves It.

Elsewhere will be found a testimonial from Elwood S. Corser to Frank T. Haseltine, which we are pleased to see, and we add our hearty approval. Mr. H. is a deserving man. He has worked hard to build up an important interest in our midst and we are pleased to see that our leading business men, like Mr. Corser, appreciate his efforts and show it by a liberal patronage. Mr. Haseltine amply deserves all that can be said of him, as he is an efficient nursery man and a conscientious business man—a man who endeavors to give his patrons value received for their money. By all means see Frank T. Haseltine before you purchase your trees and small fruits.

Proved Up on Two Claims.

Last week a settler came from St. Hilaire way to prove up. On arrival he found some hitch that prevented his obtaining the necessary funds and then what to do? He had brought along his best girl who had a pre-emption claim which she was going to turn to a homestead, he was to prove up on his and then the twain was going to be married and return happy. But now the cake was all dough. Fortunately Mr. C. W. Palmer appeared upon the scene at this critical moment and furnished the money for the man to make his proof with; the proof was duly made the pre-emption duly changed to a homestead, the pair was securely tied up by justice G. H. Palmer and the twain returned to their joint farm; and thus endeth the first chapter.

Office Rooms.

Isadore Fortier has fitted up a number of rooms in his block, corner of Robert and Broadway, which are now ready for rent. These rooms are eligible to the business portion of the city, are convenient and comfortable. Call early to choice.

WHEAT BOOMING!

Since our last issue wheat has gone from 66 to 74 cents and the tendency is still strongly upward. On Friday last it reached 68, on Monday 71, and Tuesday evening it jumped three cents, reaching 74, at which figure it was on Wednesday evening. We should not be surprised to see it reach 80 before October 1st, nor should we be surprised to see it drop away a cent or two. It depends very much upon the effect of this little boom upon farmers. If it causes a volume to be thrown upon the market it will depress the price; if, on the other hand, the farmers remain perfectly cool and grin to see the buyers squirm, wheat will take another rise and will doubtless reach 80 in a short time. It is now predicted by our best judges that wheat will go over the $ mark before another harvest.

AUCTION! AUCTION!

A special sale will be held at L. Daoust's place in Carman, on October 15th, 1885, at which time will be offered such cattle, horses, cows, hogs, sheep or farming utensils as any farmer shall then and there have for sale. Terms made known as each article is put up. The plan of this sale was suggested by the repeated demand for a general market day, and any farmer can bring in any article that he wishes to sell and it will be sold on a reasonable commission on the terms that he wishes to name. Mr. M. R. Brown, who is an experienced auctioneer, will wield the hammer, and this fact is a good guarantee of the success of the sales in the start. Should the results prove encouraging this sale will be a permanent institution.

It's Getting There!

Wheat on Monday went up one cent and on Tuesday morning took a two cent jump reaching 71 cents. "Hold your wheat" was never more sound advice than it is to-day. Should this increase call in volumes of wheat (as it is intended to) wheat would settle back into the old rut and stay there until the wheat is all out of first hands. Hold your wheat!

This Is for Farmers.

Roller Mill "A" at Red Lake Falls is now running, and farmers wanting grinding etc., done, will do well by calling there, where they will be promptly and well attended to by [22-25] Carl Kretzschmar.

[4-tf] John Cromb, Register.

The doctor has an established reputation, and all who need his services will not hesitate to call upon him. State Teachers' Institute.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
St. Paul, Minn., August 17th, 1885.

An Institute for the County of Polk will be held at Crookston, one week, commencing Monday, October 12th, 1885. This institute is for you, teachers of the county, and it is important that you should all avail yourselves of its advanages. The State has made generous provision for the expenses, which are met without charge to you. It expects all teachers to respond promptly to this call, and gives the County Superintendent authority to close all schools which may be in session at the time.

To secure much benefit you should be present at the first lesson on Monday, and stay till the close of the session Friday evening. Those who come straggling along toward the close of the week will not be likely to take much interest or receive much profit. Come for work; come with a determined purpose to give strict attention to the exercises. Hear and see all you can. Remember all you can. Take notes, that when you reach home you may recall what you have heard.

ADVANCED WORK.

It is decided that, in institutes of sixty or more members, there shall be, for the morning session, a division into two classes, in order to meet the demand for advanced work.

EVENING EXERCISES.

Evening exercises, consisting of lectures, discussions and papers will be appointed for two or three evenings of the week.

All necessary provision for the accommodation of teachers will be made by the County Superintendent, to whom all correspondence should be directed.

D. L. KIEHLE,
Supt. Public Instruction.
[22-tf] V. D. CARRUTH,
County Superintendent of Schools.

Duluth Special: Mr. McKenzie, the first assistant grain inspector, has resigned for some unexpected reason. Mr. Burdick, acting in accord with the commissioners, refused to accept the resignation, but Mr. McKenzie persisted and will soon retire from the State inspection staff here. Mr. McKenzie came from Crookston and has a high reputation as a judge of wheat. His withdrawal is regarded with regret by members of the board of trade. He was a strong advocate of careful and strict grading. The position is worth $1,800 a year and is in the gift of the three commissioners, who will doubtless be guided by Mr. Burdick, the chief inspector, in making the apointment.

Fargo Aagus: Farmers should hold their grain upon their own farms just as long as possible. The crops are short in all sections of the country, and even in Dakota the threshers are showing that the average yield is far less than expected. The hot days, while the grain was in the milk, the loss by hail, and now by fires, have all greatly reduced the yield, while the acreage was fully 25 per cent less than last year, in consequence of summer fallowing and other causes. The loss by fire alone has reached probably a million bushels of grain. If the grain is placed in the elevator and the ticket held, the actual wheat may be ground into flour and that eaten up before the wheat has really been sold, and the farmers' only needed protection is, therefore, to build their own elevators and store the wheat on their individual farms.

STEAM THRESHERS'

Mutual Insurance Association, Of Minnesota.

The object of this Association is Organization, Mutual Benefit and Protection, and is incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota as an

and it is the duty of every owner of a Steam Threshing Machine to become a member. It also admits, as members, engineers, firemen, and feeders of steam threshing machines.

After an Inspection of any Steam Threshing Machine Boiler by the Inspector of this Company, if the boiler is proven safe, a Certificate of Inspection is given, and if any of the above named persons are admitted to membership in this Association, no further inspection of the boiler is necessary, according to the new boiler Inspection law, which reads as follows: "This act shall not apply to boilers owned or controlled by Railroad Companies, nor shall it apply to boilers inspected by Insurance Companies and certified by their authorized Inspector to be safe."

Before commencing business, and to be sure they were right in the matter, the Board of Directors ordered the Secretary to obtain the opinions of some of the most talented attorneys of the State, and responses have been received from Hon. H. Steenerson, State Senator, Hon. Gordon E. Cole, the eminent jurist, Ex-Judge Thomas Wilson, of the Supreme Court of Minnesota. These opinions are on file in the office of the Association in Crookston, and are to the effect that the Company's certificate is all that is required by law, and cannot be interfered with by the State Inspector.

The manner of inspection by this company is the same as that of other insurance companies, and also railroad companies, by as old boiler makers say it is not a test, but an unnecessary strain. If the boiler is all right before it is put on, there is no knowing how it is when taken off. The test by water is based on a false theory. The examination by a competent boiler maker is all that is necessary. Common sense ought to teach that. JOHN WALLACE.

Mr. Wallace is the Inspector for this company and is endorsed by the boiler makers of Minneapolis. Make your application to the Inspector or to the Secretary.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

"Which will you take, ale or toddy? All cool and comfortable; here goes—"

Neddy stopped short, and, as say the highest Latin authorities, "his voice stuck in his jaws," owing to the not merely stern but absolutely furious expression of his Uncle Brown's usually jolly countenance.

"Ale! Toddy! Turn it out! turn it out! Who has dared send that to my hayfield? Once let me catch—"

"Why, Uncle Brown! I was only joking. Here's water, Adam's ale, you know; and here's buttermilk."

"You gave me a powerful turn," said Uncle Brown, wiping his forehead. "Wait a bit; pour me out a tin of buttermilk, and sit by me while I rest. Mind you, I don't take no practical jokes, and if you'd slung a hissing, hot coal or a lively rattlesnake in my face you couldn't have startled me more than by mention of ale and toddy. Now, here's a story, and then you can pass the milk and water to the rest."

"I'll run with it first, so they can get it cool."

"Right, my boy."

"Now, here goes for the story," said Neddy, returning from his rounds.

"Ten years ago, instead of all this wheat and hay, I grew my crops mostly barley, for the brewer in C——, and rye for the distiller in B——. I thought no harm. I did not think at all, except to get a good price for the crops. I did not drink a drop, but my harvesters liked liquor, and I let them have it. I served them out two or three rations a day of pretty strong whiskey, toddy or flip, and they and I thought I was generous in so doing. Ten years ago this summer your cousin Phil was three years old. One extra hot day the harvesters drank more than common at noon, and I think most of them were rather stupid from drink. The grain was in shocks, and some lying down along in rows all over the dry stubble of the field. I was yonder at the barn directing the unloading of a great wain, and two of the best men were with me. It seems one of the hands was really drunk, so much so that, having smoked, he knocked his burning ashes out on a wisp of dry grain and stubble, and did not even tramp it out when it blazed up. I heard a yell. I looked. A smoke rose up. A great sheet of flame was sweeping down my twenty-five acre field. The men were standing helpless, the flame licking up my fortunes! But that was not all. The wind lifted the smoke, and I saw, right in the track of the flame, running to it, in his little straw hat and cotton dress, Phil, my only child, and no one near enough nor sober enough to help him! At that same minute I saw a horse leap the nearest fence and dash down toward little Phil, and I knew nothing more, for I fell senseless from the top of the wain. That fire, Neddy, burnt on straight across my noble barley-field, and, except for two loads, ate all that crop up, and my fence too. When I came to myself I was in bed, and the doctor was setting my broken leg. I cried out for Phil, and they showed him to me in a bed, alive, but his right leg badly burnt; and my Phil will limp some all his life.

A friend, who had always reproved me for dealing liquor to my men and for the way I sold my crops, passing in the road on a fine horse, had seen Phil, and saved him at the last minute. Owing to Phil's trouble and mine, and the loss of barley, tools, fences and so on, I had that fall to go to B—— bank to borrow some money—my first and last borrowing. My friend went with me to aid me, and while at B—— he took me to see other fires, burning from ale and whiskey. He took me to grog-shops, bars, dens, where bodies and souls were being burned up with strong drink. Since then, Neddy, if any one has asked after a rabid teetotaller as a natural curiosity, folks most generally send the enquirer to take a view of your Uncle Brown, who was 'saved so as by fire.'"

Towards What is American Christianity Drifting?

Above the falls of Niagara a sleeper rested in his frail boat. Nearer and nearer the tiny bark drew to the rushing waters, and yet he slept, soothed by the pleasant motion of the water as it felt the undulations of the current, as it bore him to sure destruction. One and another pressed the edge of the stream, and cried aloud to the sleeper. But the crowd said, "Why all this ado? There is no danger." And the earnest men who gave their love and effort to avert the nearing doom, were hooted at, and called cowards and fanatics. Is not the American church to-day asleep, and at ease while floating nearer and nearer the cataract of destruction, with full sail and "Conservatism" painted on her prow? Those who see the danger and "cry aloud" are branded as troublers of Israel, disturbers of the peace. And the nation will fall with the church, unless she shall awake and cry mightily to God for strength. With seventeen or eighteen million church members in our nation, the church ought to make the strong-holds of satan tremble with the steady tread of her on-marching hosts. With the Mormon ulcer on our body politic, and imported heathenism on our Western limits, and the virus of Romanism penetrating every nerve center any fiber, is it a time for the church of God to blandly utter the Pharisee's prayer, and self-complacently take her rest in sleep? While the Triple Crowned Power already in its stealthy seekings has grasped some of the vital organs of our national life, and is softly feeling its way through every ramification of our national system, is it time for rest! While the hydra-headed power of the Secret Empire is pouring fetid poison into every artery of our national, church and home life, corrupting virtue and honor, and subverting justice by its rites and oaths, is it a time to point to our palatial temples with their regal adornments and appointments? While seventy-five thousand of our citizens are consigned, every year, to drunkard's graves, and our nation supports, patronizes and fosters two hundred thousand factories for the manufacture of drunkards, while the heavens are rent groans and cries from the desolated hearth-stones, and suffering and misery, degradation and crime are on every hand, as result of the drink curse, is it a time for the church to proudly point to her foreign missions and boast of her charities? Nay verily. But let the watchman "cry aloud and spare not, lift up thy voice as a trumpet and show my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing." "Purge out the old leaven, (decay,) that ye may be a new lump." Then shall the church be "fair as the moon clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." No more can the church expect the endowment of power, while married to the world, and affording a hiding place and screen for sin, than can the penitent expect salvation while holding to his sins. When there is no friction between the church and the world, the church has lost her power for good. Christ says, "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."

"Remember the word that I said unto you: The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me they will also persecute you."

THAT IS ALL OF OUR WATERWAYS IN THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

A Succient Statement of What May be Done for Cheap Transit, by Thos. Dowse.

The following paper was prepared to be read at the recent session of the River and Harbor Convention and contains so much of valuable information relative to the proposed Duluth and Red River canal that we publish it in full. It needs no comment but speaks for itself and will well repay careful perusal:

"MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION:—That we may clearer understand the vast extent of these avenues of the Almighty,—which the waterways of our country really are,—and therefore the better comprehend them as a whole, and by the light of such recommendations of this convention in relation to such parts of our natural system of waterways as may be actively considered by it; it will doubtless be wise to give place to these facts,

THAT A GREAT CONTINENTAL PLAIN STRETCHES

north and south between the Gulf of Mexico and the Arctic Ocean. It is bounded on its west side, throughout its whole extent, by the Rocky Mountain zone; on the eastern side in part by a less elevated region, the Appalachian zone.

This great plain occupies the whole of the continent of North America between the western and eastern mountain ranges. It is divided by its river systems into three perfect and distinct drainage basins. One drains to the south into the Gulf of Mexico, another north into Sub-Arctic waters, and the third east into the Atlantic, by the channel of the great lakes and the River St. Lawrence. Of these three great basins that of the St. Lawrence is the smallest, and the northern is fully as large as the other two put together.

The St. Lawrence basin, the boundary between the United States and Canada, occupies part of both countries. The southern basin is almost wholly in the United States. The northern basin is almost wholly in Canada, and the line of contact between the two latter basins is in part coincident with the international boundary line. It will thus be seen that the great continental plain of North America is divided naturally as well as artificially east and west through the center. It is divided naturally into three vast drainage basins, the smallest of which occupies a comparatively narrow strip along the eastern portion of the international boundary, while the other two discharge their waters in

DIAMETRICALLY OPPOSITE DIRECTIONS.

The prairie region of Canada lies in the northern drainage basin. It may be considered to extend from south to north more than a thousand miles, and nearly the same distance from east to west. It is not at all a treeless prairie; a considerable portion is thinly wooded; yet the whole is considered as partaking more or less of the prairie character. * * * This great region is estimated to measure 200,000,000 acres 160,000,000 acres of which is fit for tillage and grazing, of which 80,000,000 may be considered fit for cultivation. The extent of this Canadian prairie section is ten times the area of England. The climate of most of it is as salubrious as central Minnesota (caused by the trade winds of the Pacific,) while the spring time of the Peace River valley in the northwest corner of this prairie section is fully one month earlier than in this city, from which it is distant at least 1,500 miles in

AN AIR LINE.

It is in a spirit of harmonious action that the representatives here from the so-called smallest or eastern of these continental basins, viz., that of the great lakes and the St. Lawrence, would ask your attention to a brief review of its present usefulness in transporting from the producer to the consumer the marketable products of our peoples labors, and to still further show its connection by water can be made possible not only with our great interior, north and south basin, but also add to this combined volume of business that from over 4,000 miles of navigation in the great northern or Canadian basins, most of which is through their great and rapidly developing 1,000 miles square of prairie section heretofore alluded to.

THE OCEAN OUTLET

of this great northwestern lake, Lake Superior, is through the St. Mary's River (some sixty miles long) with Lake Huron and its connecting rivers and lake to Lake Erie, thence by the Welland Canal to Lake Ontario and by the River St. Lawrence and its canals to ocean navigation at Montreal or by the Erie Canal and Hudson River to New York.

ST. MARY'S CANAL.

A few miles down the St. Mary's River from Lake Superior there are rapids of 18 feet fall. From 1856 to 1884 these rapids were overcome by a canal some two miles long with two narrow locks containing 12 feet of water. This of course was the limit of draft for vessels running from the lower lake ports in the Lake Superior trade. Since the construction of these locks the size of lake vessels have increased nearly four fold and their depth of draft from 6 and 8 feet to 17 and 18 feet; hence a very large and the better part of the lake marine was unable to enter the Lake Superior trade.

In Sept. 1884, a new lock 500x80 feet, with 16 feet of water and overcoming the 18 feet of fall in a single lift instead of two in the old locks, was completed. Its capacity also was increased from admitting a single or two small vessels at a time to a fleet of five or six of our largest craft at a single passage thus not only saving more than half the time, but increasing its capacity four to six fold, and by deepening of the St. Mary's River where needed to an increased depth of sixteen feet, to correspond with the new lock, has Lake Superior navigation been put quite on a level with Lake Michigan, by admitting the largest lake vessels to profitably enter its trade.

THE EFFECT OF THESE IMPROVEMENTS

has been marvelous, notwithstanding the general dullness, especially of iron, one of the greatest of Lake Superior exports. Not only have freight rates fallen even more than half, but the tonnage passing these locks shows a tremendous increase over any previous year in this the first year of these completed improvements. To illustrate, if the same ratio of increase is continued through the balance of this season—and our fall shipments are always the heaviest—as has prevailed so far, there will pass through the canal going eastward alone, over 2,700,000 tons of freight, or as much as the eight trunk lines of railroads took east from Chicago last year, the same being the products of our forests, fields and mines. Do we need a more practical showing to give our general government (and it is not a single one by any means) of the great benefit of improving our waterways?

The labors of every man, of all classes, from Lake Superior westward to eastern Oregon, and southwest to Colorado, will receive increased remuneration, not only from this, but the years to come, from this single improvement.

So rapidly is the commerce of this lake increasing that within two years from now this present lock will be continually blocked unless another of at least 20 feet draw is began at once in place of the old ones and the necessary deepening of the river, were required, to correspond, for from the practical fact that the larger the single cargo the cheaper it can be moved the same distance; therefore our lake vessel builders are constantly increasing their draft, and even now there are some that can be loaded to that depth, and as such works cannot be done in a day, three years would be a reasonable time (if began at once) in which to construct it. Such an increased depth would of course require a corresponding deepening of the waterway between Lakes Huron and Erie. Where such depth is not already being made.

WELLAND CANAL

(also partially completed last year,) connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, which in its twenty-seven miles of distance overcomes 330 feet of fall with twenty-seven locks, and will give fourteen feet of water from the head of Lake Superior to Kingston at the foot of Lake Ontario, where, by means of floating elevators and large 10,000 to 20,000 bushel barges, grain is to-day put alongside the ocean steamer in Montreal at a cost of about 2 cents per bushel, which charge will be materially reduced upon the completion of the St. Lawrence River canals (now in progress of construction,) with a depth of water corresponding with the Welland. The combined length of these river canals is forty-three miles, with twenty-nine locks 275x45 feet, same as the Welland, large enough for 1,500 ton boats. These are at six different places.

Our other outlet is

THE ERIE CANAL.

This canal has eight feet of water, with locks large enough to pass a 200 ton boat. This canal being in the hands of the State government, it is but natural to believe that by the influence of the immense combination of railroads, not only in New York but other connecting States, must impare greatly its full beneficial capacity, even at its present size; hence it is natural to suppose much greater benefit would follow if it were in the hands of the general government and were to be enlarged by them. As at present the State of New York maintains it at her own expense, charging no tolls for its use, and as its present benefits are almost wholly enjoyed by the entire country as far as the Rocky Mountains, at least, if not further, it is but reasonable that the people of the single State of New York, after having built and made it what it is, and given freely of its benefits without any limit, should now be relieved of any further direct tax to maintain it.

RED RIVER AND LAKE SUPERIOR CANAL.

I have said that we wished to show how the great lakes and the waters of the other two great continental basins could be brought into harmonious connection.

As is known to most of us the Red River, that forms the boundary between this State and Dakota, runs north into Lake Winnipeg, and so on into Hudson's Bay. We also know that it is practically navigable from Breckenridge, and constantly so from Moorhead and Fargo.

By a topographical survey made some years since, it is found in going west from Lake Superior by the St. Louis River, and crossing over to the Mississippi, following that stream some 150 miles, and by intermediate lakes and streams to the Red Lake River, and so down to the Red River at Grand Forks, Dak., a waterway requiring, with dams and slack water, less than fifty miles of artificial canal, will be required. To make this a complete waterway with six feet of water, it is estimated will cost about $4,000,000—this might be reduced considerably, as the reservoir system already being carried out in the upper Mississippi by the general government would come into exact play—but to avoid question, double it and say $8,000,000; its length will be about the same as the Erie, which the State of New York built herself, when her population was less than that of our State now, with her people then poorer than ours now, and we have west of this State now a far larger population than New York then had west of her.

AT A GLANCE

one can see how this canal would not only connect the Mississippi with the lake system, but would also connect these two systems with over 4,000 miles of continuous navigation running north and west to the Rocky Mountains and within less than 400 miles of navigable waters to the Pacific—on this 4,000 miles more than 40 steamers are running to-day—clear to its extreme western limit, save some 300 miles along Lake Winnipeg—it is all through a finer wheat country than this State generally—already have thousands of bushels of wheat been brought to this State from the Saskatchewan valley, (which has 2,500 miles of this navigation) and sold at fabulous prices for seed. To illustrate the prolificness of the "Scotch Fife" wheat (our "No. 1 hard") in the Canadian prairie section I would say, that it produces on each stem in this latitude two kernels of unequal size and one false one. In our Red River valley two full sized ones and the false one, in the Saskatchewan valley, three, and the Peace River valley (the extreme northwest of their prairie section.) That a possible transportation avenue, that will double the present profits of wheat cultivation over such a large area will long remain unimproved, is not natural to believe possible, especially after the people interested become informed of its possibility. Constant agitation and extended information on this subject will sooner or later make it an accomplished fact. To say that has passed, especially when three such large systems can be thereby connected and made a complete whole, is idle talk, for according to the report of the New York Produce Exchange the Erie canal in 1884, running as it does alongside the four track New York Central and double track West Shore railways its entire length, took 9,452,404 more bushels of grain to that city than all of the railways running to that port.

These remarks would be incomplete without a few facts showing the developing and beneficial effects of the great of cheap water transportation upon the immense empire in area to the west of it.

The receipts of coal at the head of the lake have increased from 60,000 tons in 1880 to 600,000 tons in 1885. The receipts of wheat there have increased from 1,550,000 bushels in 1880 to 14,000,000 in 1884. The elevator and storage capacity increased from 510,000 bushels in the spring of 1880 to 9,400,000 bushels this year, and 3,000,000 more to be immediately built. As a wheat market it has grown from daily sales of a few car loads no longer than 1881 to a wheat market second only in the amount of its daily sales to Chicago, with everything tending to show its daily wheat transactions will equal even that "modern marvel" in the coming year. That has built up there a busy population of some 20,000 from about 4,000 in 1880.

RECEIPTS OF MONTANA SHIPMENTS

in 1884 at the head of Lake Superior for cheap water transportation east, took marine insurance of about $4,000,000, and so far this year shows a large increase over last year. Additional to this amount, last year also saw the beginning of Montana cattle shipments to the improved waterway of Lake Superior, that in a near future will exceed the value of the shipments of wheat there, be that value what it may. This improved waterway has made possible the opening of the iron deposits of this State, those of the Minnesota Iron company, opened last year, will ship from their port of Two Harbors, 28 miles east of the head of the lake, some 250,000 tons, equal to 18,000,000 bushels of wheat. This waterway has given to the hard working producers of the northwest by means of its

CHEAP WATER TRANSPORTATION.

Freight rates, from Duluth to alongside the ocean steamers or into elevators at New York, at an average rate this season of a fraction less than 6 cents per bushel, and as low as 3½ cents to alongside ocean steamers at Montreal. A good proportion of grain that has left there this season has been carried to Buffalo, 1,030 miles, for 1½ cents per bushel or less than the usual elevator charges from cars to elevators.

As giving a clearer idea of the benefits of cheap water transportation as afforded by and the present shipping facilities at the head of Lake Superior, that that prince of "Bonanza Farmers," O. Dahlrymple, Esq., shipped from his 20,000 acre wheat fields along the line of the Northern Pacific railway last year as their products some 320,000 bushels of "No. 1 hard" wheat, not equal to some single day's shipments that the celebrated "Grandin Farm," also under Mr. Dahlrymple's charge, shipped last year from its 12,000 acre wheat field, about 192,000 bushels of the same kind of wheat, or about the amount taken by a single tow through that little harbor entrance 800 feet long by 250 feet wide.

As a still further illustration of the benefits of afforded by "improved waterways" and the increased carrying capacity thereby, it might be well to say that the cost of transporting freight per ton per mile over the New York Central railway from Buffalo to New York, as per their last annual report,—and this is the cheapest operated railway in the United States by a good deal is sixty-two-one-hundredths of a cent per ton, or 6.20 cents per 1,000 miles. By the present system of large steam barges towing a sailing consort, now made possible by the enlarged St. Mary locks and that is now in general use on the lakes, if they can get sixty-five cents from the head of Lake Superior to Buffalo, 1,030 miles, it will clear the vessel, barring extra workers, and if they can get one dollar per ton tis satisfactorily remunerative. By the last annual report of the railway commissioners of the thirty-two railways of over 7,000 miles, upon the cheaply constructed railways of Iowa, averaging a cost of only $13,000 per mile, the cost of moving the same per ton was 80-100 per mile, or at the rate of $8 per 1,000 miles.

QUERY.

Are railways, or improved waterways, the real avenues of transportation for our agricultural people? Have all of our people a right to ask and not only expect but receive liberal and regular appropriations for their continued improvement until these avenues of the Almighty are made complete and harmonious over our entire country?

THAT IS ALL OF OUR WATERWAYS IN THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

A Succinct Statement of What May be Done for Cheap Transit, by Thos. Dowse.

The following paper was prepared to be read at the recent session of the River and Harbor Convention and contains so much of valuable information relative to the proposed Duluth and Red River canal that we publish it in full. It needs no comment but speaks for itself and will well repay careful perusal.

"MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION.—That we may clearer understand the vast extent of these avenues of the Almighty,—which the waterways of our country really are,—and therefore the better comprehend them as a whole, and by the light of such recommendations of this convention in relation to such parts of our natural system of waterways as may be actively considered by it, it will doubtless be wise to give place to these facts,

north and south between the Gulf of Mexico and the Arctic Ocean. It is bounded on its west side throughout its whole extent by the Rocky Mountain zone, on the eastern side in part by a less elevated region, the Appalachian zone.

This great plain occupies the whole of the continent of North America between the western and eastern mountain ranges. It is divided by its river systems into three perfect and distinct drainage basins. One drains to the south into the Gulf of Mexico, another north into Sub-Arctic waters, and the third east into the Atlantic by the channel of the great lakes and the River St. Lawrence. Of these three great basins that of the St. Lawrence is the smallest, and the northern is fully as large as the other two put together.

The St. Lawrence basin, the boundary between the United States and Canada, occupies part of both countries. The southern basin is almost wholly in the United States. The northern basin is almost wholly in Canada, and the line of contact between the two latter basins is in part coincident with the international boundary line. It will thus be seen that the great continental plain of North America is divided naturally as well as artificially east and west through the center. It is divided naturally into three vast drainage basins, the smallest of which occupies a comparatively narrow strip along the eastern portion of the international boundary, while the other two discharge their waters in

DIAMETRICALLY OPPOSITE DIRECTIONS.

The prairie region of Canada lies in the northern drainage basin. It may be considered to extend from south to north more than a thousand miles, and nearly the same distance from east to west. It is not at all a treeless prairie; a considerable portion is thinly wooded, yet the whole is considered as partaking more or less of the prairie character.

This great region is estimated to measure 200,000,000 acres, 160,000,000 acres of which is fit for tillage and grazing, of which 80,000,000 may be considered fit for cultivation. The extent of this Canadian prairie section is ten times the area of England. The climate [illegible] is salubrious, as contrasted [illegible] (caused by the trade winds of the Pacific), while the spring time in the Peace River valley in the northwest corner of this prairie section is fully one month earlier than in this city, from which it is distant at least 1,200 miles [illegible]

[illegible] nection by water can be made possible not only with our great interior, north and south basin, but also add to this combined volume of business that from over 4,000 miles of navigation in the great northern or Canadian basin, most of which is through their great and rapidly developing 1,000 miles square of prairie section heretofore alluded to.

THE OCEAN OUTLET

of this great northwestern lake, Lake Superior, is through the St. Mary's River (some sixty miles long), with Lake Huron and its connecting rivers and lake to Lake Erie, thence by the Welland Canal to Lake Ontario and by the River St. Lawrence and its canals to ocean navigation at Montreal, or by the Erie Canal and Hudson River to New York.

ST. MARY'S CANAL.

A few miles down the St. Mary's River from Lake Superior there are rapids of 18 feet fall. From 1856 to 1884 these rapids were overcome by a canal some two miles long, with two narrow locks containing 12 feet of water. This of course was the limit of draft for vessels running from the lower lake ports in the Lake Superior trade. Since the construction of these locks the size of lake vessels have increased nearly four fold and their depth of draft from 6 and 8 feet to 17 and 18 feet; hence a very large and the better part of the lake marine was unable to enter the Lake Superior trade.

In Sept. 1884 a new lock 500x80 feet with 16 feet of water and overcoming the 18 feet of fall in a single lift instead of two in the old locks, was completed. Its capacity also was increased from admitting a single or two small vessels at a time to a fleet of five or six of our largest craft at a single passage, thus not only saving more than half the time, but increasing its capacity four to six fold, and by deepening of the St. Mary's River where needed to an increased depth of sixteen feet to correspond with the new lock, has Lake Superior navigation been put quite on a level with Lake Michigan, by admitting the largest lake vessels to profitably enter its trade.

THE EFFECT OF THESE IMPROVEMENTS

has been marvelous, notwithstanding the general dullness, especially of iron, one of the greatest of Lake Superior exports. Not only have freight rates fallen even more than half, but the tonnage passing these locks shows a tremendous increase over any previous year in this the first year of these completed improvements. To illustrate, if the same ratio of increase is continued through the balance of this season—and our fall shipments are always the heaviest—as has prevailed so far, there will pass through the canal going eastward alone over 2,700,000 tons of freight, or as much as the eight trunk lines of railroads took east from Chicago last year, the same being the products of our forests, fields and mines. Do we need a more practical showing to give our general government (and it is not a single one by any means) of the great benefit of improving our waterways?

The labors of every man of all classes from Lake Superior westward to eastern Oregon, and southwest to Colorado, will receive increased remuneration not only from this, but the years to come, from this single improvement.

So rapidly is the commerce of this lake increasing that within two years from now this present lock will be continually blocked unless another of at least 20 feet draw is began at once in place of the old one, and the necessary deepening of the river were required to correspond, for from the practical [illegible] that the larger the single cargo the cheaper it can be moved the same distance, therefore our lake vessel builders are constantly increasing their draft, and even now there are some that can be loaded to that depth, and as such work cannot be done in a day, three years would be a reasonable time (to begin at once) in which to construct it. Such an increased depth would of course require a corresponding deepening of the waterway between Lake Huron and Erie. Where such depth is not already being made.

WELLAND CANAL

(also partially completed this year) connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, which in its twenty-seven miles of distance overcomes 330 feet of fall with twenty-seven locks, and will give fourteen feet of water from the head of Lake Superior to Kingston at the foot of Lake Ontario, where, by means of floating elevators and barges of 10,000 to 20,000 bushels [illegible] to alongside the ocean steamers in Montreal at a cost of about 2 cents per bushel, which charge will be materially reduced upon the completion of the St. Lawrence River [illegible] of corresponding depth of water corresponding with the Welland. The combined [illegible] forty-three miles [illegible]

[illegible] locks 270x45 feet, same as the Welland, large enough for 1,500 ton boats. There are at six different places [illegible]

THE ERIE CANAL.

This canal has eight feet of water with locks large enough to pass a 200 ton boat. This canal being in the hands of the State government, it is but natural to believe that by the influence of the immense combination of railroads not only in New York, but other connecting States, must impare greatly its full beneficial capacity, even at its present size; hence it is natural to suppose much greater benefit would follow if it were in the hands of the general government and were to be enlarged by them. As at present the State of New York maintains it at her own expense, charging no tolls for its use, and as its present benefits are almost wholly enjoyed by the entire country as far as the Rocky Mountains at least, if not further, it is but reasonable that the people of the single State of New York, after having built and made it what it is, and given freely of its benefits without any limit, should now be relieved of any further direct tax to maintain it.

RED RIVER AND LAKE SUPERIOR CANAL.

I have said that we wished to show how the great lakes and the waters of the other two great continental basins could be brought into harmonious connection.

As is known to most of us, the Red River, that forms the boundary between this State and Dakota, runs north into Lake Winnipeg, and so on into Hudson's Bay. We also know that it is practically navigable from Breckenridge, and constantly so from Moorhead and Fargo.

By a topographical survey made some years since, it is found in going west from Lake Superior by the St. Louis River, and crossing over to the Mississippi, following that stream some 150 miles, and by intermediate lakes and streams to the Red Lake River, and so down to the Red River at Grand Forks, Dak., a waterway requiring, with dams and slack water, less than fifty miles of artificial canal, will be acquired. To make this a complete waterway with six feet of water, it is estimated, will cost about $4,000,000—this might be reduced considerably, as the reservoir system already being carried out in the upper Mississippi by the general government would come into exact play—but to avoid question, double it and say $8,000,000. Its length will be about the same as the Erie, which the State of New York built herself when her population was less than that of our State now, with her people then poorer than ours now, and we have west of this State now a far larger population than New York then had west of her.

immense empire, in area, to the west of it.

The receipts of coal at the head of that lake have increased from 60,000 tons in 1880 to 600,000 tons in 1884. The receipts of wheat there have increased from 1,000,000 bushels in 1880 to 14,000,000 in 1884. The elevator and storage capacity increased from 510,000 bushels in the spring of 1880 to 9,400,000 bushels this year, and 8,000,000 more to be immediately built. As a wheat market it has grown from daily sales of a few car loads no longer than 1884 to a wheat market second only in the amount of its daily sales to Chicago, with everything tending to show its daily wheat transactions will equal, even that modern marvel, in the coming year. That has built up there a busy population of some 30,000 from about 4,000 in 1880.

RECEIPTS OF MONTANA SHIPMENTS

in 1884 at the head of Lake Superior for cheap water transportation east took marine insurance of about $4,000,000, and so far this year shows a large increase over last year. Additional to this amount last year also saw the beginning of Montana cattle shipments to the improved waterway of Lake Superior, that in a near future will exceed the value of the shipments of wheat there, be that value what it may. This improved waterway has made possible the opening of the iron deposits of this State, those of the Minnesota Iron company opened last year, will ship from their port of Two Harbors, 28 miles east of the head of the lake, some 250,000 tons, equal to 18,000,000 bushels of wheat. As a still further illustration of the benefits of

Did you catch on to Berthiaume Bro's Bulletin in this issue. You can't read it in a minute but it will pay a careful perusal nevertheless.

We have $1,000 which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus!
[23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Chas. Westerberg has rented the Norman House and instituted a general renovation, adding new furniture, new bedding and everything needed.

Pete Misgen's dog, a fine Llwecllyn setter, got a severe cut last week on a mower which may disable it permanently. Pete feels almost like he could cry if it would do any good.

Hon. B. Sampson has sold his interest in the Crookston Flouring Mills to his partners for a consideration of $10,000. He has another project of importance to this city in view and will probably be ready to divulge soon.

Miss Grasse wishes to inform the public that she will open a class in crayon and pencil drawing, water color and luster painting; a sample of her work can be seen at Potter & George's drug store. Residence at Mrs. W. H. Jennings, Broadway.

Several of the friends of Miss Inez McGrew, and members of the Congregational society, recently surprised that young lady, their organist, with the present of a handsome and valuable gold watch. She deserved watching, and thus handsomely got her just deserts.

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.
23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Hopkins surprised them on Saturday evening last, the occasion being the 20th anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. H. After a pleasant evening the party dispersed, leaving abundant testimonials of regard in the shape of elegant presents with wishes for many happy returns.

The report that S. P. Norton had skipped the country has no foundation in fact. It was a false and malicious rumor. Mr. Norton was about the streets as usual on Tuesday. It is getting to be unsafe for a man to leave town on a business trip unless he publishes his intentions a week or so in advance and the probable time of his return.

There seems to be a hitch in the bridge operations on the Sampson's Addition bridge. A committee was appointed to investigate the stability of the piling and reported them inadequate to the purpose. One good authority on such matters pronounces the piling all right if a row of piles should be driven against the bank and planked as a guard against caving. This matter should be settled at an early moment and the work resumed as the bridge is a great necessity.

On Monday morning Sheriff Zwickey received a telegram from East Grand Forks, summoning him, the Coroner and the County Attorney at once. As the Sheriff was sick and Dept. Bivins away, he sent jailer Hanson in his stead. Arriving at about 8 o'clock a. m., the party found the dead body of a young man of Grand Forks named Lauchy McLean, and John Hutchinson under arrest, charged with killing him. It seems that the night before, young McLean, in company with two others, went to a shebang kept by the notorious "Mother Hutchinson," and immediately upon arrival engaged in an altercation with her son John, who struck him a blow in the left breast with a sharp knife, severing an artery. The three men then left, McLean falling and dying about ten minutes after receiving the blow. Upon arrival Coroner Shepard proceeded to hold an inquest, with Chas. Hollinger, Michael Enright, E. J. Duffy, R. B. Sanner, L. M. Hunt and Wm. Eichel as jurors. The jury rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death from the effects of a wound inflicted by a knife in the hands of one John Hutchinson. Hutchinson and his mother were brought to Crookston where they were lodged in jail to await the next session of the District Court.

The Catholic people of our city are making preparations on a grand scale to hold a Bazaar at the Opera House on October 15th, 16th and 17th. All are expected to participate. A first-class entertainment promised. The proceeds are to be applied toward building a new Catholic church.

Bull-dog Kelley was taken to St. Vincent on Monday where the extradition question is being settled before U. S. Commissioner, Frank Ives. Her Majesty, the Queen, sent to His Majesty President Cleveland to borrow John N. Ives to act as Queen's Council on this auspicious occasion, and Hon. H. Steenerson and J. W. Cathcart appear for B. K.

On Monday, Frank Lytle's little gray got tired of standing and lay down on the sidewalk on Hack & Gallasch' corner. Doc. Watts, quit chewing gum and ran—actually RAN across the street and jumped upon the pony's head, holding him down until the bystanders could unloose the ribbons. When this was done the pony got up as demurely as though nothing had happened.

Bray & O'Brien, finding their space too limited, were obliged to cross the street and rent the old post office building in which they have a fine display of the celebrated Acorn stoves, of every kind and variety. There are excellent cook stoves, elegant parlor stoves, box stoves, heating stoves, coal stoves, wood stoves and stoves till you can't rest until the old post office building has the appearance of being pretty well stove up as it were. Having interviewed their mammoth stock of stoves our reporter departed impressed with the idea that if a person could not find anything in the line of a stove that could be desired he must be hard to suit indeed. The prices on these stoves will be found to be in accord with the times.

A New Firm.

Holmboe, Swenson & Larson is the name of the new firm that have this week taken possession of the building on Robert Street recently occupied by Peter Lorge as a bakery. Holmboe & Swenson have been in business on Sampson's Addition and Mr. Larson is well known as Bigham & Olafson's genial clerk. Success to the new firm.

More Thoroughbreds.

P. J. McGuire did not tell us of it until recently but the twins, a fine bouncing boy and a lovely little lassie, are two weeks old or more. Mac says they are rustlers—both eligible to registry. (Hence this notice.)

Hog Cholera.

Upon this topic, Andrew Kimbal writes the Courier that he has found charcoal to be a perfect preventative. He gives his hogs about a bushel a week and has never lost a pig. To this we would add that there is nothing better to aid digestion for any animal. It would be found very beneficial for fattening hogs.

We Have a Foundry.

Perhaps the fact that Crookston has an iron foundry capable of turning out most any kind of castings is not generally appreciated but it is a fact all the same. The pillars for Fournet's new block were cast by the Morrissey Brothers, at the Crookston Foundry and the boys need not be ashamed to compare their worth with and imported work to be found in this city (or any other.) The boys have worked hard to build up and sustain a business that is a credit to the city and they deserve the patronage of our citizens, especially as they are able to compete with foreign work in every way. Never send abroad for work until you see what the boys can do for you.

Look Out for Prairie Fires.

The season of the year is at hand when this advice comes in play, and it is all the more emphatic owing to the fearful fires that have been raging all about us, in Dakota and in the north, by which thousands of dollars worth of property have been destroyed in the shape of grain stacks, houses, barns and machinery. This should serve as a sufficient warning to our farmers who are situated in like manner to prepare in time. It is evident that we have not had as much frost as they have in Dakota and Manitoba, consequently the grass is not so dry and would not burn as readily now but it will soon and all grain in stacks and all buildings should be well protected by plowing and double fire lines. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure!"

Progressive Hen Parties.

The latest thing out, (since progressive euchre parties are on the wane) is progressive hen parties, yelept "5 o'clock teas."

AUCTION SALE.

At Daoust's stables in Carman, Oct. 15th 1885 there will be held an auction sale of horses, cows, young cattle and such other articles as may be brought in. This is a sale for everybody. If you have any horses, hogs, cattle, machinery or anything whatever to dispose of bring it along and auctioneer M. R. Brown will dispose of it for you. There has already been secured a number of young cattle, cows and horses, enough to make an interesting sale and by the day of sale a large collection will be ready. Terms will be made known on day of sale. Among the attractions presented will be a number of grade Holsteins, grade Jerseys and grade Galloways, we are informed. Now is your chance to secure good stock at your own prices.

Dr. Carl Schulin, a celebrated eye and ear specialist, will arrive in the city on Tuesday, June 23d, and may be consulted at the Commercial House. The doctor has an established reputation, and all who need his services will not hesitate to call upon him. When he finds a case incurable he will frankly say so, thus saving the patient needless expense. [7-tf]

BERTHIAUME BROTHERS BULLETIN.

HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY.

THIS is a maxim which should apply to all classes of trade, but especially to the Jewelry business, where there are so many opportunities for misrepresenting the value and quality of goods. There is no class of goods that people know so little about as watches, diamonds and jewelry. In making purchases they must rely almost entirely upon the integrity of the person they are buying from. If he has a desire to deal honestly with his customers the goods purchased will be as represented, and the customer, finding this to be a fact, will be sure to return when he requires anything else in that line.

This is the principle upon which we have always conducted our business, and it is to this fact that we attribute a large share of our success. WE WARRANT EVERY ARTICLE WE SELL! We never make a statement that we are not prepared to back, and we now say that we have the Largest and Most Complete Stock of Watches, Diamonds, Jewelry and Silverware west of Chicago. These goods, which are fresh and new, of the most stylish designs, and in every way first-class, were purchased in New York at very low prices. For this reason WE WILL GUARANTEE OUR PRICES TO BE AS LOW AS ANY EASTERN HOUSE, no matter where it is located. Among the many bargains which we offer our customers are the following, which we think will be conclusive evidence that what we say is true.

A Strong Ticket.

A Steuben County Boy Gets to the Front.

The Republican State Convention of New York placed in nomination the following excellent ticket, viz:

For Governor..............IRA DAVENPORT.
For Lieut. Governor..........GEN. CARR.
For Secretary of State...ANSON S. WOOD.
For Comptroller.........W. WADSWORTH.
For State Treasurer.......CHAS. ULRICH.
For Attorney General.....E. B. THOMAS.
State Engineer, W. P. VAN RENSSELEAR.

It is considered by well posted politicians to be a very strong ticket. The head, Mr. Ira Davenport, was born in Hornellsville, June 28, 1841. His father was Col Ira Davenport, the founder and endower of the Davenport home for orphan girls. He was educated at Haverling academy in Bath, and at Dr. Russell's collegiate school in New Haven. In 1876 he was active in the prospect for a soldiers' home, to which he contributed $5,000. In 1877 he was elected state senator over George B. Bradley by a plurality of 1,701. Two years previously Mr. Bradley had received 2,570 plurality. In 1879 he was re-elected by a plurality of 5,778. In 1881 the state convention nominated him for comptroller. He led all other candidates on the Republican state ticket, receiving 13,084 majority. Last year Mr. Davenport was elected to congress from the district composed of Steuben, Yates and Ontario, by a plurality of 3,610. Blaine, in the same counties, had 2,094. Mr. Davenport is a batchelor. His father made a fortune in the settlement of southern New York, and founded one of those wealthy and influential families which play so considerable a part in the life of the state. The money which the older Davenport made in selling groceries and shipping produce down the Tioga and Susquehanna was invested in Iowa lands, on which a city named after him now stands. The money left by his father has been increased by the conservative investments of the son, who has founded an orphan asylum, endowed a soldiers' home, and came to be known as a liberal, clear-headed public-spirited citizen. His education never went beyond the Goodrich grammar school in New Haven. His winters have been for some time spent in New York city.

The Minneapolis papers are just now lauding the C. A. Pillsbury & Co., milling company to the skies. They report that the said company have just distributed the sum of $27,000 among their employees, that being a portion of the profits of their last year's business. How long ago was it that the saintly Pillsbury came through this country with a long array of figures calculated to prove to the farmers of the Red River Valley that they were actually doing their business at a loss? This $27,000 is said to be only of the profits of one milling concern! Is it any wonder that the farmers who raised the wheat for the Pillsburys have not made a cent for the past two years? For two years the farmers have toiled early and late to raise their little crop of wheat and in the fall they have been told by the shark monopoly "there is too much wheat in the country for millers to make any money grinding it!"—and on the heels of these statements comes the Minneapolis papers with their brags of what great things C. A. Pillsbury Co., is doing for the laboring man! Is it STEALINGS they have thus divided? When a combination is made that forces the producer to sell the wheat at less than cost is that a fair business transaction or is it down right robbery! Do we live in a FREE country and suffer such damnable outrages? Are we men or mice to suffer such things again and again? Two years ago, No. 1 Hard wheat of extra quality was STOLEN upon the plea that it was "frosted!" Last year the plea was "over-production!" and yet the Minneapolis papers are bragging that one company distributed $27,000 (a PART of its profits) among its employes! If they could do that on last year's wheat what must their surplus have been for the year previous? Will the time ever come when the wheat raiser can obtain evenhanded justice in this country? If the farmers would only band together that time would soon come. If they would only remember the actions of these vampires who have fattened on the vitals of the producing classes they would never ship a bushel of wheat to Minneapolis until they could obtain what it is worth. Every farmer should ship to Duluth this fall, and forever after until these Minneapolis vampires are starving for our wheat and are willing to dole out a portion of those $27,000 to the producer.

Horses' Tails.

A little skill and training on the part of the driver, will prevent annoyance and danger from the horse getting his tail over reins; and every horse should be especially broken to feel the rein beneath his tail, without any exhibition of nervousness. So sensitive is the tail, that if a horse has not been accustomed to feeling a rein under it, when it occurs for the first time, if spirited, prove fractious, and eved unmanageable. As it is an occurrence likely to happen at any time, every horse should be broken to it; that is, not only not to mind it, but not to turn his head, when he feels the pull upon one rein, which is intended to disengage it. In general, this is easily accomplished, and as this is the only inconvenience to the driver arising from long tails, we are particular in showing how both the annoyance and trouble from it may be avoided. The annoyance, which sometimes comes from mud or grit being splashed upon the tail, and then being flirted about by its switching, is avoided by tying the switch up in muddy weather. —American Agriculturist.

BUTTER MAKING.

The Iowa Homestead says: "Notwithstanding all that has been written in agricultural papers on the subject of butter making, farmers and their wives will insist on retaining the dash churn, and thus giving themselves extra trouble and damaging the quality of the butter. Once more we say, fire out every kind and quality of churn that has a dasher, or paddle, or anything inside. Use a box or barrel churn only. Use a thermometer, and learn by experience to use it right. Don't let your cream get too cold. Churn until the butter begins to come, about thirty-five minutes if you have everything right, and then put in cold water to reduce the temperature, then turn very slowly till the butter gathers, then run off your buttermilk and wash your butter in the churn. It should not be in a great mass, but in granules, like mustard seed or small wheat grains. After you have thus washed it take it out on a lever butter worker, salt to suit your taste and put away in a cool, clean place until you are ready to market it. Then work enough to incorporate the salt evenly without any streaks, and no more. By doing this you will be able to command full prices and save yourself lots of grief and mortification.

BUTTER AND CREAM.

There are 650 butter and cream factories in Iowa, 407 in Illinois, 180 in Wisconsin, 100 in Kansas, 100 in Minnesota, 61 in Missouri, 50 in Indiana and 40 in Nebraska—a total of 1,788 in eight States. The value of the dairy product of Iowa alone in 1884 was $50,000,000 and that of the United States was over $500,000,000. The value of the milch cows of the United States is estimated to be $700,000,000, which is more than the entire capital stock of all the national banks and trust companies in the whole country.

Our Leading Industry.

Sauk Center Tribune: The State of Minnesota is already a great stock and dairy producer, and the day has come when the rough native cattle must give place to the high bred. There is no use to talk about the matter, the man who does not take the hint, give up wheat raising and go into stock raising with a view to introduce good blood, will be left hopelessly behind. This State in ten years will be at the head of the list as a stock raiser, and there is wealth and satisfaction in store for those who give their attention to this great leading industry.

The American Agriculturist for Oct. 1885.

State Teachers' Institute.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
St. Paul, Minn., August 17th, 1885.

An Institute for the County of Polk will be held at Crookston, one week, commencing Monday, October 12th, 1885. This institute is for you, teachers of the county, and it is important that you should all avail yourselves of its advantages. The State has made generous provision for the expenses, which are met without charge to you. It expects all teachers to respond promptly to this call, and gives the County Superintendent authority to close all schools which may be in session at the time.

To secure much benefit you should be present at the first lesson on Monday, and stay till the close of the session Friday evening. Those who come straggling along toward the close of the week will not be likely to take much interest or receive much profit. Come for work; come with a determined purpose to give strict attention to the exercises. Hear and see all you can. Remember all you can. Take notes, that when you reach home you may recall what you have heard.

ADVANCED WORK.

It is decided that, in institutes of sixty or more members, there shall be, for the morning session, a division into two classes, in order to meet the demand for advanced work.

EVENING EXERCISES.

Evening exercises, consisting of lectures, discussions and papers will be appointed for two or three evenings of the week.

All necessary provision for the accommodation of teachers will be made by the County Superintendent; to whom all correspondence should be directed.

The Fiendish Flames.

Grand Forks Herald: Mark Williams, a farmer of Bartlett, returned home today with a sad and heavy heart. Forty-eight hours ago he was a wealthy man. His broad and fertile acres had produced abundantly and he harvested about 9,000 bushels of wheat upon which he looked and rejoiced. He had a home, machinery, stock and all the adjuncts of a prosperous farm, and had just paid out $500 for a steam thresher. The fierce prairie fires came and swept it all away in a few hours. Everything lies in ruins, and he returns sadly to begin again at the bottom round. It is estimated that the fires in the past week have swept away a million bushels of wheat in Dakota.

Curing Corn Fodder.

A correspondent of the Elmira Husbandman says that many a farmer whose heart has been glad over a handsome crop of corn fodder, has later found grief in discovering mould and decay unexpectedly, as a result of bad curing. But the curing can be done so thoroughly as to avoid this. The best way is to bind the bundles when it is cut, and place these in shocks of seven each. Here they may stand for three weeks, when they should be put in shape for wintering. A large mass of fodder either in a stack or mow is almost sure to heat and spoil. Let the shocks be brought to some high and dry grass spot, near the stock barn, and be set two together, here to remain until they are cut up or fed. On grass the butts will not freeze fast. The double shocks should be kept together with willow or straw bands, and if closely tied will stand until wanted. In hauling to this wintering ground, the shocks can be handled whole and in an upright position usually.

Applying Manure.

The best way to apply barn manure to corn, says the Country Gentleman, is to spread it evenly on the grass sod the previous autumn, or else draw it out and spread it as fast as it is formed in winter. Then turn it under with the sod before planting. The autumn and winter rains carry the soluble and enriching portions down among the grass roots, diffuse them through the soil, and when inverted, the young corn derives full benefit from them. If not applied till spring for any crop, it is most effective on plowed land; the manure is then thoroughly broken up and intermixed with the soil by repeated harrowings. This treatment does well for oats. A moderate manuring for wheat is given with well rotten manure, well broken up; spread the surface after the last plowing, and then harrow it well. Commercial fertilizers are best when applied in the spring to spring crops, and in nearly all cases are most beneficial used broadcast. For wheat they are applied at sowing.

Shrunken Grain.

Boston Cultivator: A larger proportion than usual of wheat grown this year has a shrunken berry, which detracts largely from its flouring value. This shrunken grain has a proportionally heavier hull, and more of the gluten, with less starch in its composition. Much of the extra hard wheat grown in the northwest has so shrunken a berry that an eastern farmer would be ashamed to offer in the market. It has, however, sold higher than the softer, starchy wheats, and is preferred by millers for making the best new process flour, though it will not make so many pounds per bushel. It seems now that most of our eastern wheats have a shrunken berry, which looks very like the northwestern spring wheats. Let us see whether millers and other buyers will stand by their decisions of two or three years ago, that these shrunken grains make the best flour.

We have $1,000 which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus.

'ROUND HOME.

If you want to buy cheap go to Hack & Gallasch'.

The little folks enjoyed a pleasant dance at I. U. Jennings' on Saturday evening of last week.

Will Carlton was down from Angus on Tuesday and reports crops of first quality in that vicinity.

Stanton & Co. are making a big showing on the packing house. It will soon be ready for business,

The public well, corner of Fletcher and Main streets, is about completed and will soon be ready for business.

NO OUTRAGEOUS COMMISSION CHARGED, but we can make you a good loan on GOOD security.
[23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

While other localities have been having snow, Polk County enjoyed a warm, refreshing shower on Tuesday night.

Snow was reported at Glyndon and Barnesville on Monday. Who would live in such a cold country anyhow?

One large and one small second hand parlor coal stove can be bought of I. U. Jennings very cheap. [24-25]

Largest stock of Blankets, Quilts and Flannels, at Hack & Gallasch'.

A. R. Jones has gone to Duluth where he will remain for awhile and perhaps permanently, if he finds it to his advantage.

Flanders & Arnold have commenced work on the new masonic hall. They will fit it up for occupancy at an early day.

$500 to loan on a good farm. No bonus! STEENERSON & McMANUS.

No delay in getting a loan from Christianson & Melgaard, if the security is first-class. Terms not better, but EQUAL to the best.

Chas. Truax took a slice out of his knee with a hand-ax on Wednesday, while at work on the new packing house. He will doubtless go on the dry decks for repairs awhile.

Wood for sale, by Hack & Gallasch.

Tollef Farden, the Tilden boomer, was in the city on a boom on Monday. Tollef says the quality of wheat is A No. 1 out there, but the quantity not so great as in former years.

Ed Smith is off for a furlough of a few weeks duration. He is "going back to Georgia"—not exactly, but to Kankakee, Ill., to see the old folks at home. May he have a pleasant visit.

I. U. Jennings has houses and room to rent at all times. [23-24]

Mrs. John Hack, Sr., and her sister, Miss Jennie Gallasch, of Red Wing, are in the city visiting with the members of the firm of Hack & Gallasch. (And the boys sell goods just as cheaply.)

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.
23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

C. E. Sawyer and Geo. Tunnell having purchased the Favorite Rink, gave a grand opening last week. It will be open occasionally until cold weather, then probably every evening except Sunday.

If you have a good farm and want a loan, without waiting for eastern parties to pass on your application, apply to CHRISTIANSON & MELGAARD.

If you hear a wild goose talking pretty loud out on the street, don't get excited, grab your gun, go out and—make a fool of yourself. It may be only Andrew Eiken talking turkey through a goose quill.

John McKenzie returned from Duluth last week and will make his headquarters hereafter in this city. He will buy wheat for a Duluth firm and farmers will do well to see him before consummating sales.

M. Gjerberg, Main Street, opposte Cowing Bros., do all kinds of chemical cleaning, fitting, pressing, in the best manner at the lowest prices. I guarantee satisfaction, and invite the same patronage that I had at my former place on Broadway. [23-24]

Mrs. John Cromb and Mrs. J. Bunnell came near being the victims of a serious accident last Wednesday. They were crossing the bridge to Sampson's Addition and met a number of cattle on the bridge. In the jam the horse and carriage was nearly crowded off the bridge and but for the commendable pluck and presence of mind of Mrs. Cromb would have been. She kept perfect control of her wits and the horse and made him keep on the bridge and pull them out in safety. Since then a good railing has been put on either side of the bridge.

Hack & Gallasch' Cheap Store is on the corner of Main and Second Streets.

An accident occurred to Robinson's circus, on Sunday morning, about seven miles west of Fergus Falls, by which five men were killed and several more seriously injured. The circus train was traveling in sections, when, while going up a grade, four cars broke loose and on running back collided with the rear train. The wreck was cleared and the circus arrived at Fergus Falls about 8 a. m. It is said that Robinson will bring suit against the N. P. company for heavy damages.

All subscribers to Farm, Stock and Home will find it to their advantage to renew through us.

Conductor Dunn's wife and little daughter have arrived for a visit with friends in the city.

Ye festive wild goose has been winging his way southward during the past week in quest of overcoat and mittens.

The Sherman house, at Fargo, was totally destroyed by fire last week. The Argus building had a close call but missed fire.

Wm. Wylia was in from Black River last week. He reports active operations commenced on the new sidetrack. An elevator is to be erected at once.

August Walters has the boss business in the shape of a faucet which is warranted to draw the stuffin out of a beer barrel just too quick for any use. Rather too handy we should say.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Davidson returned to their home, on Monday, after a brief but pleasant visit visit in our city. They were much pleased with what they saw of Crookston and its society.

Wheat at Grand Forks was selling at $1 per bushel on Friday and Saturday last, owing to a bit of competition between buyers. Let the good work go on until there is not a bushel to be had short of $1.

Conductor J. B. Copeland, A. N. Davidson and Fred Durand took a hunt last week in the Devil's Lake country, returning Saturday evening laden with the spoils of the chase! Query: Did they?

Fred Boisvert was brought before Esq. Palmer on Monday charged with appropriating $90 unto his own use which $90 belonged to the other fellow. Failing to substantiate the charge the prisoner was discharged.

The Baptist sociable at Carman last Friday evening was a very enjoyable affair. The pastor Mr. Roberts, is making arrangements to leave soon. Mr. R. is one of the oldest pastors in the city and everybody will be sorry to see him go—Democrats and all.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it, with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

A number of our friends have recently called and left substantial tokens of their regards in the form of paid up subscriptions. Thanks. We do not want our farmer friends to sell all their wheat to pay up subscriptions to the JOURNAL but when they have the change handy we will appreciate it if they will drop in and square up.

Mine host Hiligros was in from Fosston on Tuesday. He says the Thirteen is booming in anticipation of the coming of Jim Hill's road which they think is a dead sure thing. Well, one thing is sure. A road is the one thing needful for them. They have the country fast enough and only need a road to develop its immense resources.

Farmers should be sure that their wheat has passed safely through the sweat before they thresh otherwise they will miss it largely. Three or four weeks at least should be allowed for this process. One can easily ascertain whether his wheat has passed through the sweat by running a rake handle or a fork handle into the stack and leaving it there for half or three-quarters of an hour. If upon withdrawal the handle is found to be perfectly dry the wheat is ready to thresh but if it be damp or wet it is not yet through the sweating process and should have more time. Great losses may be sustained by too great haste in this particular.

Meat Coming Down.

We don't know as this will affect the price any, but the fact that Steege has lowered his floor two feet brings his meat down that much, anyhow.

ATTENTION, FARMERS!

Hack & Gallasch are receiving goods daily. It will pay you to get their prices before buying elsewhere, Try us for luck!

The following action was taken at a meeting of the Directors of the First National Bank of this city, held on the 5th of October.

WHEREAS we have been pained to learn of the sudden death at Folkstone, England, of Mr. John Tapley who was one of the principal stock-holders and a Director of this bank.

RESOLVED that it becomes our duty to bear testimony to the many sterling qualities possessed by him, and also to express our realization of the great loss which his death will occasion among all of his acquaintances and associates both in his social and business relations. Always active in whatever he undertook, his presence and aid in any undertaking was a very desirable object, and greatly added to the chances of success. For all his life until the last few months he was seldom found idle, and it was his nature to be always on the alert and to be vigorously pushing toward whatever end he might have in view. Suffering from the heart difficulty, which finally caused his death, he was obliged to take a rest from business the past spring, and while absent among his old relatives and friends, and near his birthplace, with the hope of regaining his health, his life work ceased.

RESOLVED, that we hereby desire to express to his wife and family our sincere sympathy in their great bereavment, and for this purpose desire that a copy of this action be forwarded to Mrs. Tapley and that it also be published in the Crookston papers.

His Name was Dennis.—But the Proof was Lacking.

Dennis Lebay was arrested at Beltrami on Saturday by special constable, Ed. Strader, charged with stealing a shot gun and brought before Justice Palmer for examination. Owing to the "dryness of the atmosphere"—(doubtless) the case was postponed and Dennis was placed in durance vile—or as some call it, the county jail—the meanwhile. On Monday morning, BRIGHT and early he was brought into the temple of justice, where the fact was developed that the gun had been found in his possession but as no one had seen him take it the charge missed fire and Dennis went off half cocked. (P. S. It is said that he remedied this latter defect before he left the city.)

CROOKSTON CITY MARKETS.

Wheat No. 1 Hard 71 cents.

No. 1 Northern 67. A little spurt was caused by 74 cent wheat which has fallen off as soon as wheat began to decline. There has been quite an increase in delivery this week but very few are selling. Farmers are very evidently determined to hold for better prices which is as it should be. As soon as the fact becomes known buyers will offer up. We look for a rise before the 15th.

GRAHAM—$2.50.

BRAN—$10 per ton. Shorts $11.

ONIONS—$1 per bushel.

OATS—Slow at 35 cents.

CROOKSTON, Oct. 1, 1885.

EDITOR JOURNAL: One year ago I unfortunately identified a man whom I had not known but a few weeks, and by request signed a draft of one thousand dollars, which, rather than go to law, I paid. Since that time a number of such men as Mr. McGrew, editor of the Crookston Chronicle, have taken pains, by libelous representations, to financially damage me. In his last issue he makes a groundless and FALSE charge. He does not even take pains to inquire if what he is telling is true or not. On the very day he published his sketch I saw him on Broadway, in Crookston, and I believe he saw me, also. I have paid my debts so far and satisfactorily, I think, as any man, and still have means to settle all my accounts; at least I hope so, as it will so put my enemies to shame, should they have any left. I feel they lack shame as much as I do funds, at any rate. I hope Mr. McGrew will have candor enough to retract any false statements he has made; and should I make up my mind to go away from home, or move away, and he wishes to know where I am going, if he will take the trouble to inquire of me I will give him the desired information, and make no reflections on himself, family or brother.

SEWALL P. NORTON.

Vaccination for Lumbermen.

RED WING, Minn., Sept. 23, 1885.

EDITOR POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:

Will you permit me to use your columns to call the attention of all firms sending men into the woods this fall or winter to the imperative necessity of insisting upon vaccination and re-vaccination as preventative of small pox. The disease is in Canada, and even nearer, and among the classes from whom many of the men who work in the camps come. So far as possible every firm will be written from this office. The matter is so important as to justify us in asking that the greatest publicity be given to this request.

Yours Truly,
CHARLES N. HEWITT, M. D.,
Sec'y and Ex-Officio, State Board of Health.

BURT'S SHOES,
AT
FONTAINE & ANGLIM'S

Times are brightening up in the Northwest. There is nothing surer than this, and all should take courage in this fact, and confidently look for a new era, the dawn of which is at hand. There is not a farmer in this county with any energy whatever so deeply involved that he cannot relieve himself. Last fall it was impossible for a farmer to make a loan sufficient to tide him over without having to pay an exhorbitant bonus—so heavy that no man of common business sense would attempt it. This fall money is seeking investment on good security with no bonus at all, and while the interest is pretty steep, ten per cent—yet a farmer can pay that and live, and when the farming community is prosperous, business flourishes and the business man prospers. However, because times are brightening, is no reason why farmers should rush recklessly into an extravagant style of living, and the wise man will not do it. He will go slow until he is entirely out of debt and is in shape to hold his wheat or sell, just as the market is to suit him, or otherwise. This time is coming and coming soon, and when it does come we shall hear no more of these stealings in wheat-buying, for the farmer will be—as he should be, INDEPENDENT. We could help matters in this particular this fall if every farmer would hold his wheat. If you must borrow a little money to meet running expenses, do so, and hold the wheat until the buyers begin to bid up for it. Wheat last week went up to one dollar, and it seems to have started a big stream. It is now settling back and farmers should shut off the stream. It is but a question of time when one dollar per bushel will be the regular price in this market, and that time will come very soon if no wheat comes in. Last fall no kind of a combination of circumstances could have raised wheat to the dollar mark. And there is another feature of better times. We think that wheat raising for a few years will be a good thing, and that we shall see more prosperous times within the next few years than we ever have before.

BERTHIAUME BROTHERS BULLETIN.

HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY.

THIS is a maxim which should apply to all classes of trade, but especially to the Jewelry business, where there are so many opportunities for misrepresenting the value and quality of goods. There is no class of goods that people know so little about as watches, diamonds and jewelry. In making purchases they must rely almost entirely upon the integrity of the person they are buying from. If he has a desire to deal honestly with his customers the goods purchased will be as represented, and the customer, finding this to be a fact, will be sure to return when he requires anything else in that line.

This is the principle upon which we have always conducted our business, and it is to this fact that we attribute a large share of our success. WE WARRANT EVERY ARTICLE WE SELL! We never make a statement that we are not prepared to back, and we now say that we have the Largest and Most Complete Stock of Watches, Diamonds, Jewelry and Silverware northwest of Chicago. These goods, which are fresh and new, of the most stylish designs, and in every way first-class, were purchased in New York at very low prices. For this reason WE WILL GUARANTEE OUR PRICES TO BE AS LOW AS ANY EASTERN HOUSE, no matter where it is located. Among the many bargains which we offer our customers are the following, which we think will be conclusive evidence that what we say is true.

DIGEST OF LAND DECISIONS!

By the Commissioner of the General Land Office and Secretary of the Interior, prepared and reported semi-monthly for the Polk County Journal by Archibald Young, Attorney at Law and late Examiner of Mining, Railroad, Homestead, Pre-emption and other contest cases in General Land Office. Office 637 F St., Washington, D. C.

PRACTICE.

Contest sustained against a party who had purchased relinquishment of entry and instituted a contest against the same, with a view of holding land until he could at some future time, enter it for speculative purposes. (Hawkey vs. Schlick. Acting Secretary. Sept. 3d, 1885.)

HOMESTEADS.

Claimant having voted in a distant town during his alleged residence on land and testified before a Court of Justice that his home was there, his entry should be cancelled, especially in view of the fact that he only made occasional visits to the land. (Fagan vs. Jaran. Acting Secretary. Sept. 2d, 1885.)

2d. Settlement upon land within the exterior boundaries of a private land claim made prior to final approval of a survey excluding such land is illegal. Entries inadvertantly allowed upon such lands reserve the tracts from other appropriation. (Murphy et. al., vs. Howe. Acting Secretary. Aug. 24th, 1885.)

INDIAN HOMESTEADS.

Technicel objections should not be permitted to deprive Indians of Michigan of treaty rights. (Acting Secretary. August 24th, 1885.)

TIMBER CULTURE.

A party will not be allowed to make second entry upon showing that he made his first entry without examining the land and upon false representations of an agent. (Exparte Duncan. Acting Secretary. August 31st, 1885.)

MINERALS.

Land department is not estopped from inquiring into the validity of a mining claim by a decision of the courts on an adverse claim in favor of the applicant for patent. (Becharts et. al., vs. Sizer. Acting Com'r. Sept. 1st, 1885.)

2d. Issuance of patent may be proceeded with by land office upon failing of waver of adverse claim without inquiring whether the suit instituted thereon has been dismissed. Inacuracies in surveys may be corrected by examinations through office of Surveyor General. (St. Lawrence Mf'g Co. vs. Albion Mf'g Co. Sec'y. Aug. 27, 1885.)

PRE-EMPTIONS.

A party who presents a relinquishment of entry with application to make a homestead entry has a superior right to a settler, being a tresspasser at date of relinquishment. (Fulton vs. Price. Secretary. Aug. 28th, 1885.)

2d. Sale of land after final proof no evidence of fraud. (Mosley vs. Barrows. Acting Sec'y. Sept. 1st, 1885.)

Holsteins in the West.

It pays farmers and dairymen to breed Holstein cattle, says a writer in the Farmers' Call.

I am personally acquainted with many farmers and dairymen in the Eastern States, also in the west, and I have taken pains to inquire as to the profits compared with raising other breeds of cattle. Every breeder of Holstein cattle assures me that he made more profit from his investment in this breed than he did from any other. Farmers and dairymen who buy good registered bulls, claim a profit every year on the investment—from two to three hundred per cent. This may seem unreasonable, but it is true. For example, every practical dairyman who keeps a registered bull soon procures a set of grade Holstein cows, and with such cows he is in shape to make money, as they will produce a large flow of milk and he will have an unusual amount of dairy products to sell. Then, again, if he has more grade cows than he cares to keep, he can sell them readily, and at good paying prices, as grade Holsteins milk nearly as well as full bloods, and they make the best family or town cow in the world.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication October 8th, 1885.]

WHEREAS, DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Helge Olson, mortgagor, to The Trustees of Beloit College, mortgagee, dated the first day of September A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty one, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the first day of September A. D. 1881, at 1:05 o'clock p. m., in book "K" of mortgages, on pages 249 and 250 on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the amount of five hundred and sixty and 68-100 dollars ($560.68) and also twenty-nine and 26-100 dollars ($29.26) paid by said mortgagee for taxes on said mortgaged premises with $2.98 interest from date of payment to the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default and the non-institution of action, the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become and is operative and under the authority in said mortgage contained, the said Trustees of Beloit College elect to declare and claim that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid, is due and payable.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 21st day of November A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-five at one o'clock in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, including amount paid for taxes with interest thereon and fifty dollars attorney's fees, being the lawful fees for attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit: The southeast (se¼) of Section six (6,) Township one hundred and forty-seven (147) north, of Range forty-five (45) west, containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres according to the government survey thereof.

State Teachers' Institute.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
St. Paul, Minn., August 17th, 1885.

An Institute for the County of Polk will be held at Crookston, one week, commencing Monday, October 12th, 1885. This institute is for you, teachers of the county, and it is important that you should all avail yourselves of its advantages. The State has made generous provision for the expenses, which are met without charge to you. It expects all teachers to respond promptly to this call, and gives the County Superintendent authority to close all schools which may be in session at the time.

To secure much benefit you should be present at the first lesson on Monday, and stay till the close of the session Friday evening. Those who come straggling along toward the close of the week will not be likely to take much interest or receive much profit. Come for work; come with a determined purpose to give strict attention to the exercises. Hear and see all you can. Remember all you can. Take notes, that when you reach home you may recall what you have heard.

ADVANCED WORK.

It is decided that, in institutes of sixty or more members, there shall be, for the morning session, a division into two classes, in order to meet the demand for advanced work.

EVENING EXERCISES.

Evening exercises, consisting of lectures, discussions and papers will be appointed for two or three evenings of the week.

All necessary provision for the accommodation of teachers will be made by the County Superintendent, to whom all correspondence should be directed.

D. L. KIEHLE,
Supt. Public Instruction.

[22-tf] V. D. CARRUTH,
County Superintendent of Schools.

This is for Farmers.

Roller Mill "A" at Red Lake Falls is now running, and farmers wanting grinding etc., done, will do well by calling there, where they will be promptly and well attended to by

Winter Dairying.

It is most profitable to be doing business when most other people are idle. This applies especially to dairying. So few dairymen can make first-class butter, and so few can, or will take the pains to pack it perfectly, that the demand for fine butter during the winter, is greater than can be supplied. The winter dairyman is now about beginning business. His cows have been resting during the hot weather, in the shade of a wood-lot, while he has been busy with his crops, and now that he has these all secured, his late fodder and roots prepared, and his fall pastures in the finest order, he is ready to begin butter making, with every advantage in his favor. The summer dairyman has been worrying through the heat, consuming ice at great cost, and has succeeded only in getting a second quality of butter, which will sell twenty-five or fifty per cent less than that fresh-made in winter. The necessities for winter dairying are few, and are easily provided. They are: fresh cows, coming in about September; plenty of good hay and fodder, with roots and supplementary food, which is cheaper now than at any other time, because it is in season, and is abundant; an airy dairy house, warmed to an even temperature by a stove, avoids every difficulty, and the dairyman is in full control of everything needed for the best management of his business, instead of fighting flies, torrid heats, dry weather, and every other difficulty, as in summer.—[American Agriculturist.

Why Some Farmers Harvest Poorly.

The Forest, Forge and Farm says: "They hug the 'special farming' heresy. They depend mainly on one crop, and when that fails the year's ware is practically lost.

In stock breeding they don't begin with pure-bred animals, and at the end of say four or five years, find they have sunk money, time and effort in raising a lot of trash for which no adequate return can be obtained. Or, if they do not engage in stock-raising as a feature of their business, they hang on to a lot of dry cows or crippled horses which live only to consume feed and rob the useful ones.

They engage in farming with no capital except the land they occupy. Buildings, machinery, tools and other improvements have to be secured out of the proceeds of crop raising, in addition to supporting their families. A convenient loan supplies temporary relief. Debt, however, is a remorseless tyrant, and leads directly to mortgages, default in interest, payments, foreclosure and financial ruin.

They have not aptitude for the business. They are not fore-sighted, prompt, skillful, thoughtful, observing, persevering or industrious.

They fail to drain that swamp meadow which could, with a little effort, be made the most productive portion of the farm.

They do not have a thorough system about their work. They fail to regard their business as a piece of clock-work, which should be wound up and regulated.

They do not read and study enough.

They harvest their crop with hand tools instead of using labor-saving machinery.

They save $2 a month on the hired man' wages, and pay $2 per day for an extra harvest hand in consequence.

They buy inferior seeds because they are a little cheaper than others, and sell the best their own raising because there is an apparent money gain in the operation.

They buy more land than they can take care of.

They follow in all the old ruts which were "good enough" for their forefathers.

They jog along without any definite ideas as to what crops are most profitable upon each particular field, what they cost to raise, and the balance of profit or loss may be in each case.

They sneer at agricultural books and papers, and at farmers' clubs and institutes.

They take everything they can get from the soil and put back—nothing.

They engage in farming without previous training and rely on their wits to pull them safely through.

The Value of Different Breeds.

United States Dairyman: In giving, as we sometimes do, the majority opinion, so far as canvassed, of the value of the milk of the Holstein breed as compared with the milk of other breeds, and no breeds, but our native stock, we do not forget there have been, and still are, phenomenal cows of that breed, that it would seem would be satisfactory to the producers of butter and cheese, provided they can stand what is and must be, the crucial test—the most available solids from a given amount of cow food, judiciously fed. We have no doubt the struggle for supremacy by the devotees of the respective breeds will develop phenomenal results from a few of our breeds. Let the rich men who have a taste for it, develop the capabilities of their respective pets, and give the facts to the world; but let the quiet farmer who must make his money from neither brag or bluster, keep his eye open for performance at the prosy business of producing the solids of butter and cheese; see which breed leads for the amount of food expended, and which is most likely to transmit its qualities to the cow of the future. This is the safe way, for those who do the hard work of coining money and fair profits out of the dairy business; because if a man should attempt to make up his mind from a consideration of the authenticated reports of the phenominal cows, he would have a few of all breeds, perhaps, and no unity of purpose in his business.

THE LIEN ON THE CROP.

Of all the means yet invented for obtaining money we consider that mentioned in the title the most pernicious. It is customary for our farmers, to tide over present difficulties by putting a lien upon their growing crops in the spring time, and while this for the time being affords a sort of relief the effects of the system are baneful in the extreme. Not only to the individual but to the whole community. Many are so constituted that they cannot learn a lesson save by a painful and costly experience but happy he who can learn in the light of others' experience to avoid the shoals and quicksands. Upon this topic the St. Paul Globe says:

The New Orleans Times-Democrat congratulates the Southern section of the Union that the ruinous crop lien system is diminishing. This system, which was made compulsory upon southern farmers and planters by the changes which the war wrought, has been a great drawback to Southern agriculture. Consequently the whole country will rejoice with the South that a point has been reached where the Southern planter is no longer compelled to mortgage his crop in advance in order to get money with which to cultivate it. It is a matter of regret, however, just as the South is beginning to congratulate itself upon an exemption from this curse, that the farmers of the Northwest are showing an inclination to burden themselves with the crop lien system. It is apt to prove a ruinous system to agriculture. Whatever other industry may be benefited by credit, of all classes the farmer should keep out of debt. Our Northwestern farmers would do themselves a service by squeezing through a season or two rather than to encumber themselves with a debt in order that they may branch out extensively in their farm operations. A little farm well tilled and its expense kept within the limit of the owner's exchequer, however small it may be, will be of vastly more profit than a large domain farmed on borrowed capital. When the farmer has to rely on his own resources and operates with his own means he has every incentive for economy, while the farmer who at the beginning of the season has mortgaged his prospective crop and finds himself with ample credit at his disposal, is extremely apt to rush into many extravagances which he would otherwise avoid. The experience of many farmers of the Northwest has already taught them this lesson. It is to be hoped that our Northwestern farmers will follow the example of our Southern friends and will at once discard the crop lien system. The best system of farming is that which keeps a clean balance sheet throughout the season.

THE HOME OF THE HOLSTEIN.

Texas Live Stock Journal.

To those who have been across the Atlantic, and still another ocean, the German or North Sea, one of the most striking features of the landscape, after landing on the wonderfully industrious country called Holland or the Netherlands, is the large and beautiful black and white cattle grazing along the banks of their numerous canals and their lowlands. Here in this moist country grow the very finest of succulent grasses. The lowness of the country topographically, necessitates the building of interminable levees to protect their lands being covered with water and save their crops and grasses. It has been a continuous struggle with the German Ocean for six centuries to stop its encroachments. Its moist and damp atmosphere has nourished the finest of pastures. Here in this land of dykes have flourished one of the hardiest and most industrious people of the world, the Dutch, and here they have raised one of the finest breeds of cattle that is known. We may term Holland the dairy house of Europe. They have supplied dairy products, not only entirely to their own country, but largely to neighboring nations. Dutch milk in London, Brussels, Paris, and many other cities and Dutch cheese all over the world. A cow in that country that does not give over five gallons of milk per day is considered only fit to fatten for the butcher, and an animal that gives ten gallons per day is not unusual. They have bred for quantity of milk as well as size. Their rule is to select the finest bull calf from the largest and finest milking family, and it stands for the district. They believe in "the survival of the fittest," and the balance goes to the shambles. Under this system a breed of cattle has grown beyond all others in perfection as a milk stock. In passing along in the railway car through Holland, Freisland, Holstein, and the Baltic provinces, the appearance of these grand black and white cattle with their immense udders is a truly interesting sight, and no American traveling in that country should fail to avail himself of visiting the dairy farms of that country, the source of so much wealth to that historical people.

HOUSING STOCK IN WINTER.

We are aware that we are but repeating what has been published many times in urging our readers, says the American Rural Home, to prepare early for the comfort of their stock during the inclemencies of next winter, yet we are at the same time well aware that a great many farmers still depend upon sheds, open on one side, and with large cracks in the siding upon the others, or upon straw stacks, to shelter and protect from storms and fierce winds, a large proportion of their stock. This is not economy, it is wastefulness. They not only waste the extra amount of feed required to supply the requisite animal heat, but they also waste the flesh and vitality of the animal.

It is very poor policy to defer preparing suitable shelter until winter comes, with the thought that there will be more time after the fall's work is done, for, before that time stock will have suffered a great deal from cold storms and frosty nights. We know that mankind is about as susceptible to the first cold days of autumn as to the much lower temperature of winter, which the system is gradually prepared to endure.

Although a farmstead looks a great deal more attractive with fine, clapboarded, painted barns, with warm, dry basements for stabling the stock, or warm sheds on solid walls, and these are undoubtedly more economical in the long run, yet if a farmer's pecuniary circumstances will not warrant the outlay, cheaper substitutes can be put up for temporary use. We have known very comfortable sheds made by stacking straw upon strong poles supported by posts. If the sheds are protected on three sides by straw with the open side near the barn, they may be quite warm. In such a shed stock should be tied up or a few of the stronger will take possession and drive out the weaker.

Quite a passable cattle stable may be built with rough boards, by boarding up inside also and filling in between with straw. To save lumber, quite large spaces may be left between the inside boards. If boards are used for the roof, considerable care is necessary in battening the joints to prevent leakage. In all cases where the earth forms the floor straw should be liberally used for litter. The warmth of such a shed will be greatly increased by banking up the outside with earth, leaving a shallow ditch to carry off the drippings from the roof.

A farmer, with ordinary skill and a few tools and a small outlay for rough lumber, can build very good buildings for other stock besides cattle. He can make a good pigsty for his swine, a shed for his sheep and a house for his poultry. Although these home made our-houses may not be very ornamental in themselves, yet their manifest adaptation to their purposes makes a farmstead look a great deal more comfortable, and, consequently, more attractive.

Peterson's Magazine for November is on our table—ahead, as usual, of all the other lady's books. It has a charming steel plate, "A Feather in her Cap," a mammoth colored fashion plate, some fifty other illustrations, and several original stories of unusual power, written by Mrs. A. S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, etc. How the publisher can afford to keep improving the magazine as he does, is a standing wonder. With the present number, appears the prospectus for next year. It promises even better things, and "Peterson" always keeps his promises. There will be over 1,200 printed pages, 14 steel engravings, 12 mammoth colored steel fashion plates, from 800 to 900 wood cuts, six copyright novelets, one hundred smaller original stories, etc. In short, the magazine will continue to be, as heretofore, the cheapest and best for ladies. The terms are only Two Dollars a year. To clubs it is cheaper still, viz.: four copies for six dollars and a half, with an extra copy to the person getting up the club. Or five copies for eight dollars, with both an extra copy and the "Forget-Me-Not," a beautifully illustrated album, or a large steel engraving, "The Angel of Paradise." Everybody should take this magazine. Now is the time to subscribe. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Specimens are sent, gratis, if written for, to get up clubs with.

HARD TIMES.

We all pretty well know what that means, and now that the times are brighter it behooves us to prepare for the future, so as to prevent, as far as possible, a recurrence of the scenes of last year and the year before. The main reason why farmers have been affected has been that heretofore they have made their obligations due on October or November 1st. This has prevented their ability to handle their crops, and wheat buyers, taking advantage by this, have always managed to depress the price of wheat about the time these obligations have matured, thus being enabled to buy it at their own price. The way to avoid this in the future is, if you must borrow money to tide over, to make the payment due, say 1st of May or 1st of June. This gives plenty of time to handle the wheat and farmers can sell or hold, as they choose. This fall the farmers have held their wheat pretty generally and the consequence is—a better price. Could it all have been held in the farmers' granaries, wheat would now be better yet.

"Deacon Pillsbury."

Anent the story of C. A. Pillsbury's playing a big game of poker in Chicago the Listener, in the Pioneer Press, says that C. A. denies the story; says he don't know how to play poker and commenting, ays that "it would not be compatible with Pilsbury's long standing as a deacon in the church!" We would like the "Listener" to tell us how "deacon Pillsbury's" peculiar methods of wheat-buying will compat with his deaconship? When Pillsbury is accused of gambling with cards, he kicks, but did he never gamble in wheat? Did he ever steal any wheat? Was the putting up of jobs that compels the poor man to sell his wheat at less than cost, stealing? Was any portion of that $27,000 divey wrung from the tiller of the soil at starvation rates? Wheat-raising for two years has been a losing game to the producer and many a man has been ruined by it, while "deacon Pillsbury" seems to have been growing immensely wealthy grinding it. But it's too bad to say SUCH A MAN GAMBLES!

"Hard Times!"

Who says that of this country? A country capable of having a auction sale! Well, that is just what happened at the Keystone sale, near Euclid, last Wednesday, (7th inst.) The property sold went at good figures and the total amount of cash realized was $40,000. That don't look like the country was on the verge of bankruptcy! That our farmers were all too spring poor to skin! And that the whole bilin' was on the verge of going to the "demnition bow-wows," head-foremost. No indeed. The country that can afford a $40,000 auction is on a good foundation because its got "the rocks!"

FORTY THOUSAND DOLLAR CASH

The New York Lyceum Theatre,

Mr. Filiatrault has succeeded in securing the above company for three nights, commencing next Monday, when they will appear in Denman Thompson's famous comedy "Joshua Whitcomb," a play so laughable that it has been presented twelve consecutive years with undiminished success.

Tuesday evening the great border play, "My Partner," which has been pronounced by the press of the country to be the finest border play ever written. It is the work of America's Sardon, Mr. Bartley Campbell.

Wednesday evening the beautiful society play, "The Banker's Daughter," will be presented. This is without question the most successful society play ever written and one of the social drama. With this very versatile repertoire of interesting plays and the excellence of this company, our Opera House will no doubt be crowded.

One commendable feature of this engagement is the popular prices announced, viz: Reserved seats 50 cents and gallery 35 cents, a move that should have been made long ago.

Said to be a Manitoba Extension.

From the Pioneer Press.

ADA, Minn., Special Telegram, Oct. 7.—A corps of surveyors is engaged this week in staking out a line running in a northwesterly direction through Twin Valley, in Norman County, about sixteen miles east of Ada. The surveyors would not disclose the name of the proposed road or the parties for whom the survey is being made. They state, however, that work on the grade will be commenced this fall. The line crosses the Northern Pacific one mile east of Hawley. The general impression hereabouts is that it is a branch line of the Manitoba from Pelican Rapids to strike Red Lake Falls. The mystery and hurry of the survey is being generally spoken of here. It is claimed that on account of recent agitation the Manitoba is making itself solid in its own territory. A road of any kind, however, would be welcomed as a great relief to the thick settlements along the western boundary of White Earth reservation.

EDITOR JOURNAL: I suppose that some of your readers are asking "where is the State Inspector?" Well, I think they will find out soon, for, as near as I can learn, he has nearly finished inspecting as far up as Barnsville, and as I have inspected most of the boilers in Norman County, he ought to be in Crookston soon. There are still several townships southwest of Barnesville which have not been visited by the Inspector, and as I shall be on hand to assist in inspecting the boilers in those townships, it will take but a few days to complete the job. I expect to get my share. I have made some inquiries of the threshing machine men how they like the cold water test, and here is a specimen of the answers I have received, not in the exact language used, for that would not be suitable for publication. One said "we lost half a day with the humbug;" another said "our boiler was all right before they came, now we have to fill it up with buckets every morning." I have the names and post office address of these men, which I can produce if doubted in what I say. The fact is they think it all right when they come, and think it all wrong when they go away. All admit that it is a humbug. This don't correspond with Morrisey's letter from the Inspector, where he said that they were received with open arms and tears of mingled joy and gratitude flowing down their dusty cheeks, like dew drops falling from the mountain cliffs after the morning's mist. J. WALLACE.

P. S. I met State Inspector Seeley at Breckenridge and he acted like a gentleman, accepting all my steam thresher certificates as legal. J. W.

As It Should Be.

From the Grand Forks Herald.

A well-known and responsible gentleman who has been traveling all along the lines of railroad where the M. & N. or Pillsbury elevators are planted, assures the Herald that at every point, with possibly one or two exceptions, the people give them the go by. This is particularly noticeable whereever there are Duluth or home competitors. It is significant of the wrongs which the people suffered in the past and a fact that goes further than the affidavits of a hundred witnesses, to prove all and more than was alleged in past years, when the Pillsburies had a monopoly of the business and could by their tyrannical edict regulate grades and prices in the Northwest. The people naturally seek their friends and they have the power to patronize independent buyers at nearly every point. This should make no difference to the railroad company. If it has sagacity, it will recognize the fact that the people are powerful and will eventually rule. Instead, therefore of standing in with this monopoly, whose millions represent so many scalding tears and untold privation in the past, a wise policy on the part of Mr. Hill and his assistants would be to encourage competition wherever it exists. The railroad by such a course would gain a thousand friends where it now has but one. The hearts of the people are right and their very instinct teaches them that the independent buyer who is not labeled "M. & N." when you go in and "Pillsbury & Co." when you are in, is his benefactor and should have all the wheat of the valley.

The New York Evening Post offers its semi-weekly edition to new readers for the last three months of this year for 25 cents. Its make-up includes, besides the news of the half-week, the leading editorials of the daily edition, foreign and domestic correspondence, personal, political and religious notes, book reviews, musical and dramatic criticism, farm, household and fashion hints, selections from the best current foreign literature, etc. Owing to its thoroughly independent attitude upon all political questions, the views of the Evening Post are more eagerly sought and more widely copied than those of almost any other newspaper in the country. This was the case in the last presidential campaign, when, for reasons which it gave in advance of the nomination, it found itself unable to support the Republican candidate. This had been the case also since the election, for the paper has again demonstrated its independence by promptly denouncing all departures of the new administration from the reform pledges upon which it was intrusted with power.

SALE OF HOLSTEIN CATTLE.

Thirty-Six Valuable Animals Disposed of by the Northwestern Breeders' Association.

The annual sale of Holstein-Friesian cattle by the Northwestern Breeders' Association took place at the Minneapolis fair grounds on Thursday, October 8th under the direction of Col. Liggett, manager of the Grand View Stock Farm. While the attendance was not as large as had been expected, it was composed of men actively engaged in the stock business, and the bidding was quite spirited. The prices realized, though not quite up to the average of last spring, were fairly satisfactory. FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultry-men, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

The October Babyhood gives its usual variety of topics interesting to parents, by its well-known editors, Marion Harland and Dr. Leroy M. Yale, and a corps of able contributors. Among the principal subjects are "The Precocious Baby," "Nursery Cookery," "The Care of Baby's Eyes," "Contagion in Throat Troubles," "Art in the Nursery," "Thoughts on Home Training," "The Diet of Nursing Mothers," "Systematic Weaning," "Autumn Styles for Baby's Wardrobe," etc. A letter from Vienna on Austrian baby matters in general, and another from an American mother in Japan, will be read with interest 15 cents a number, $1.50 a year. 18 Spruce Street, New York.

DIGEST OF LAND DECISIONS!

By the Commissioner of the General Land Office and Secretary of the Interior, prepared and reported semi-monthly for the Polk County Journal by Archibald Young, Attorney at Law and late Examiner of Mining, Railroad, Homestead, Pre-emption and other contest cases in General Land Office. Office 637 F St., Washington, D. C.

PRACTICE.

A motion to review a decision a second time cannot be entertained. Review not allowed simply for reargument. (Parker vs. Castle, Secretary, September 17th 1885.)

2d. Second affidavit of contest should be received and filed to await decision on pending contest. (Cowen Sec'y Sept. 12th 1885.)

PREEMPTIONS.

Guardian of minor heir may file D. S. and make proof for land upon which the deceased had, during his life time, made a peaceable settlement prior to survey, although the tract was at that date claimed and occupied by a party who was not a qualified preemptor. (Bell vs. Ward Acting Sec'y. Sept. 1st, 1885.)

2d. Department will not permit itself to be made an instrument to further the unlawful designs of an individual to acquire title to public lands. (Johnson vs. Johnson. Acting Sec'y. Sept. 19th 1885.)

HOMESTEADS.

Law not complied with unless party has resided upon tract covered by entry. (Barrier vs. Brown. Sec'y. Sept. 17th, 1885.)

2d. Temporary absence for the purpose of earning a living not an abandonment of claim. (Kennedy vs. Jayne. Sec'y. Sept. 14th 1885.)

MINERALS.

Full opportunity should be given to furnish any additional proof before cancellation of entry. (Pell et. al. Acting Secretary September 21st, 1885.)

RIGHT OF WAY RAILROADS.

Timber and material can only be taken under act of March 3d 1875 for use in construction of the road and from such lands as lie in the immediate vicinity thereof. The cutting must be done by agent of company, and the sale or exportation of timber, or its use for fuel or for the repair or improvement of a completed road not authorized. Circular of Aug. 29th 1885.

STOP. Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents; or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.75. [25-tf]

A THOROUGH MUSICAL EDUCATION.

Parents paying out money to music teachers to have their children instructed in the art of music either as piano, organ or violin players, singers in church or professionally, should know whether the teacher receiving the money is competent to teach vocal or instrumental music, and is thoroughly honest and reliable in all respects. Every parent having a child instructed in music should know whether the teacher is competent or not just as every man going to law should know what kind of a lawyer he is seeking or a patient what kind of a physician he has. It is a well known fact that a child taking lessons from an incompetent music teacher is lost forever to the art of music. All parents who desire to be posted in this subject, should read, each week, the New York Musical Courier. It costs but four dollars per annum, and will save many times that amount if its advice is followed.

Also remember that the Musical Courier posts you on the manner of selecting a piano, organ or violin, and tells you all about the dishonesty in that line of business. Many persons believe that a name on a piano or organ is always that of the manufacturer, but such is not the case, and when you are about to spend $200, $300 or $500 for a piano or organ you ought to be thoroughly posted on the value of pianos and organs generally, and not depend upon an outsider who may or may not make a commission out of you and help to put a worthless instrument into your parlor. By subscribing to the Musical Courier, 25 East Fourteenth St., New York, you can save at least $100 in the purchase of a piano and nearly half as much in the purchase of an organ. After reading that paper for awhile, no one can fool you on that subject.

A GOOD RECORD.

De Vries, a Holstein-Friesian cow, belonging to J. W. Stilwell, of Troy, Ohio, made in a recent trial 121 lbs. and 12 oz. of unsalted butter in 30 days. The trial began on June 22d and ended July 21st 1885. She gave 2,404 lbs. of milk, making 19 lbs. for one of butter. This is the best record yet made by any cow of any breed.

BERTHIAUME BROTHERS BULLETIN.

HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY.

THIS is a maxim which should apply to all classes of trade, but especially to the Jewelry business, where there are so many opportunities for misrepresenting the value and quality of goods. There is no class of goods that people know so little about as watches, diamonds and jewelry. In making purchases they must rely almost entirely upon the integrity of the person they are buying from. If he has a desire to deal honestly with his customers the goods purchased will be as represented, and the customer, finding this to be a fact, will be sure to return when he requires anything else in that line.

This is the principle upon which we have always conducted our business, and it is to this fact that we attribute a large share of our success. WE WARRANT EVERY ARTICLE WE SELL! We never make a statement that we are not prepared to back, and we now say that we have the Largest and Most Complete Stock of Watches, Diamonds, Jewelry and Silverware northwest of Chicago. These goods, which are fresh and new, of the most stylish designs, and in every way first-class, were purchased in New York at very low prices. For this reason WE WILL GUARANTEE OUR PRICES TO BE AS LOW AS ANY EASTERN HOUSE, no matter where it is located. Among the many bargains which we offer our customers are the following, which we think will be conclusive evidence that what we say is true.

HERD NOTES.

In calling attention to some of the most notable of the cattle exhibits at the recent Morrison County fair, the Little Falls Sun—the home paper—has this to say of a Holstein-Friesian calf, shown by Mr. J. H. Rhodes: "But what drew the most attention and called forth the greatest wonder, were the calves. And such calves! It hardly seemed possible that they were only calves. The largest was Sir Jones, as trim, square and smooth formed, as could be desired by the most fastidious Parsian butcher. And such size, too. Although fed only from the pail, he weighed 750 pounds. 'What a veal was there my countrymen.' While looking at Sir Jones, Gen. Baker, who is acknowledged to be an authority on cattle, himself the owner of one of the finest Short-horn herds in the State, said: 'This is the finest calf I ever saw. He is a model. I am glad that Morrison County can produce a grade capable of eliciting such praise.' And near Sir Jones were other calves almost if not quite as good, and among them was a little heifer only four months old with an udder like a two year old."

Quite a successful sale of Short-horn cattle and high grades was made in Freeborn County week before last. The stock belonged to the Spicer estate and M. W. Dodd. Col. Judy, the well-known stock auctioneer did the talking. There were fifteen head of Short-horns of the Spicer herd sold, the lowest price paid being $50, and the highest $130—the average being $92. Besides the thoroughbreds, there were twelve high grades of the Spicer herd sold for $501, making the aggregate for the Spicer cattle, $1,871. Of the Dodd herd fourteen were sold for $860—an average of $61.42 and a fraction. Several grades of this herd sold made the aggregate $1049, a total for the two herds of $3,025.

Thos. B. Wales, Jr., Iowa, secretary of the Holstein-Friesian association, furnishes the Breeders' Gazette with a detailed record of a seven days' butter test of his Holstein-Friesian cow Armlander 6523. In explanation of the test and report Mr. Wales says: "The test was made without any previous preparation whatever; she run in a herd of over eighty milking cows, all purebred Holstein-Friesians. Her last calf was dropped Aug. 24, 1885. Each milking was set by itself, and the cream from each days' milk churned separately. The butter was very thoroughly worked before weighing, and was nearly free from butter-milk—as free as it is possible to get it." During the test the cow was milked three times a day, morning, noon and night, that at morning and night varying but little throughout the test, while the yield at the noon milking fell off from 24 lbs. 7 ounces the first day, to 17 lbs. and 6 ounces the last. The total milk yield for the seven days was 472 lbs. 2 ounces, from which there was produced 20 lbs. of butter. The greatest milk and butter yield on any one day was 71 lbs. 1 ounce of milk, and 3 lbs. 4 ounces of butter, and the smallest 65 lbs. 6 ounces of milk, and 2 lbs. 8 ounces of butter, the first and last days of the test respectively.

Among the recent sales of registered Holstein-Friesian cattle by the Northwestern Importers' and Breeders' association, are the following: Bulls—The Chancellor 300, to S. Bedleman, Sauk Center; 3d Mooie Kleip 254, to Samuel Leavitt, Minneapolis. Cows—Oneides Cora 3d 869, Winnjia Wommels 570, Kuperus Namkje 861, to A. P. & W. R. F. Moorhead; Andrieski 2d 223, Lady Blom 2d 222, to S. Beidleman, Sauk Center. Other sales to Minnesotians were that of the bull Douglas 2d 562, by T. W. Laramy to McMaster & Sons, St. Peter, for the State Hospital for the Insane; bull El Paso 136, by Samuel Chapman, Jr. to A. V. Ellis, Austin; bull Climax, Jr. 1263, by Stephen H. Muncy to J. H. Rhodes, Little Falls.

Kansas City Live Stock Record: Kansas has long been noted for big things. This year she comes forward to our fair with a mammoth ox. He is entered by Peter F. Holden, of Pittsburg, who has certainly a monster of this kind. It is a grade Short-horn, seven years old; weight 3,010 lbs., eleven feet in length, six feet four inches in height. He girths nine feet and seven inches and measures five feet from the top of withers to the bottom of his brisket. His heft comes, as will be observed, not so much from surplus flesh but unusual size.

The September receipts of live stock at the Chicago yards amounted to about 171,000 cattle, 15,500 calves, 376,000 hogs, and 73,000 sheep, against 167,801 cattle, 9,894 calves, 254,023 hogs, and 56,184 sheep for September, 1884, showing an increase of about 3,200 cattle, 5,600 calves, 122,400 hogs, and 16,500 sheep. For the nine months of the present year the receipts were 1,892,600 cattle, 41,300 calves, 4,322,000 hogs, and 698,500 sheep, or 107,200 cattle, 8,300 calves, 1,092,000 hogs, 109,000 sheep more than for the same time last year.

Johnston's Journal, an Illustrated Magazine for the people, is the comprehensive title by which the journal formerly called "The Operator" will hereafter be known. The paper was established in 1874, and its success in a limited sphere has encouraged the publisher and editors to make a radical change in its size and style, and transform it into a high-class but low-priced illustrated literary journal, of 16 pages, appealing to the general reader. It is promised that in its contents the paper under its new name will aim to combine recreation and amusement with instruction and information—that is to say, while the articles will be short, bright and readable, they at the same time will be of an "informational" character—and that it will be a magazine for the home and the family—pure, clean, wholesome and elevating. It is issued from the same publishing house as are the well known and successful popular scientific journals, Industrial American and The Electrical World. October 3d is the first number under the new name. Published every other Saturday. $1 a year; 5 cents a copy. May be ordered of any newsdealer. W. J. Use the Best Stock for the Dairy.

St. Paul Globe.

In conversation in the office of the Farmers' Review a few days since with a dairyman who produces milk for the Chicago market, on inquiry as to the kind of stock he kept, he said his cows were all grade Holsteins. Formerly he, as is the practice with many dairymen yet, bought his cows wherever he could get them. A few years since he was induced by a relative farming in the same neighborhood to join him in the purchase of a Holstein bull calf, at a cost of $150. Since then he has raised the heifer calves till he has an entire dairy herd of half and three-quarter Holstein grades, whose yearly product is at the least 25 per cent. over that formerly realized from the same number of common cows, and with no additional expense of keeping. This is what the introduction of pure blood has done for him, and it will do as much for any dairy farmer who pursues the same course. We do not say that the Holstein is the breed that should in all cases be selected. The breed should be determined by the product sought, whether milk for market, butter or cheese. We have improved breeds of dairy stock which will meet all these requirements, and any intelligent farmer can easily determine which will be best for him. That the female of any of these dairy breeds will far surpass the common cow in the amount and value of their products each year, is too well established a fact to need either argument or assertion. The best remedy for low prices is to increase the amount of product for sale without proportionate increased cost, or improve its quality or selling value. The first of these ends is within the reach of every dairy farmer who has not already availed himself of it, by breeding up and improving the quality of his dairy stock, and not a few can compass the other by greater care in the manipulation of their product.

PLEDGE.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

WHO WILL BE PUNISHED?

In a struggle between right and wrong there must be some who are doing right and some who are doing wrong; and, as a consequence, some are to be rewarded, while others will be punished. If this is true, how careful ought we to be about being on the right side.

Mr. Lincoln, in 1858, while addressing an audience in Illinois, said:

"If slavery is right and a just God reigns in Heaven, some men will be punished for trying to upset the institution of slavery. But, if slavery is wrong, and a just God rules, the punishment must fall on those who are upholding it!"

The above sentence startled his hearers with its uncommon commonsense. It was one of those plain-put statements that always carry conviction.

Now, I want to put two questions to every reader of this paper, with the hope that they will think them over, and answer in such a way that their consciences will never disapprove of the conclusion arrived at. Here are the questions:

1. If the liquor-traffic is right, and a just God reins in Heaven, will not Mr. St. John, Mr. John B. Finch, Miss Frances E. Willard, Mrs. Lathrop, and others, be punished for the way they are talking about that business, and agitating the public to wipe it out at any cost? [Answer this one frankly before you read the next.]

2. If the liquor-traffic is wrong, and a God of justice reigns in Heaven, will the above mentioned persons be punished for striving to abolish it, or will the wrath of Almighty God be visited on the men who are trying to put down those who are fighting against the giant evil? [A careful answer to this question is also desired.]

This way of putting it boils the subject down to what is right and what is wrong.

Now, in the language of Mr. Wm. Twead, I ask you, "What are you going to do about it?"

He tried to solve the problem for the citizens of New York city by fleeing the country and living a dog's life abroad. But justice crossed the waters and laid hands upon him. The result you are familiar with.

But a man who does wrong cannot run away from his conscience; and if he has no conscience he cannot escape the result that wrong-doing is certain to entail upon him and his.

No political party (as such) will ever be punished for its misdemeanors, for it exists only in name. A party, like a corporation, has no soul. But the individuals who make up the party will be punished if they do wrong. This being true, each voter is the responsible party in the matter of deciding what is right and what is wrong.

Honest men in Illinois broke down before Mr. Lincoln, as he put the question to them in the plain manner just related. Why? Because there was but one answer, and that was in favor of the cause he championed.

Tell me, which has been the greatest curse to America—slavery or strong drink?

Both are dark spots on the page of history; but the former only held the body in charge for a few years, and only of one race, while the latter destroys both soul and body forever, and is quite impartial as to the race of its victims.

Some may say, "That's stale argument to us;" but the question is, Is it the truth?

Every man who has the gift of reason, and whose heart has not been altogether deserted by the Spirit, will admit that the fruit of the liquor-traffic is evil and only evil. In fact, the worst evils of slavery itself were usually the effect of liquor.

Can good men afford to stand in the way of radical reform measures? Granting the right to differ as to how to do it, that does not license the right to abuse those who have nothing in view but the removal of an evil.

If those who do wrong are punished, is it not important that all should do right?

Finally: Is the abolishment of the liquor-traffic by the voting citizens of this country a crime, or is it what God and good men and women desire, and therefore what all should vote and pray for?

It is a simple question which we all should answer conscientiously, and the proper place to deposit the decision is in the ballot-box, where the great battle between wrong and right is to be decided.

We have $1,000 which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus.

THINK OF THESE THINGS.

Hoard's Dairyman.

Western dairymen can realize something of the difference between their condition and that of the English dairymen by the following:

One of the prize dairy farms in England consists of 81 acres. The tenant pays $1,400 a year rent besides purchased food costing over $3,000, and paying $300 a year for fertilizers. Forty-six cows are kept besides fifteen are bought and sold annually. The farm being in the town of Preston, most of the milk is sold to city consumers. The butter is most generally made from such whole-milk as is not sold, and brings from 26 cents a pound in summer to 43 cents in winter. The revenue from butter and milk amounts to $150 to $175 a week, besides what is made by other marketing. "The work of the farm," says the Agricultural Gazette, "begins early every day and lasts long. Everybody helps."

There are several sharp points that stand out from this recital. 1. The rental on the land is $17.28 an acre. 2. There must be good brains and never ceasing industry behind all that. You couldn't entrust a dairyman to manage that farm who thinks he can't afford even a dollar a year for a good dairy paper; who has starved his head until it is the weakest part of the man. 3. Look at the number of cows per acre that are kept on that farm and moreover look at the amount paid for extra food. No doubt nine out of ten of our readers shake their heads dubiously at such a state of things. Well, no wonder. It takes from 7 to 15 acres to keep a cow summer and winter in most of the western dairies. Get out your pencil and figure up the interest account that cow has to earn on that land. Then what can you expect when you do not give her thorough care and attention at that. Our most advanced dairymen, in one respect, are working on the line indicated in that English dairy farm. Hiram Smith says he is going to keep 100 dairy cows on the produce of 200 acres. He has set his mark there and we believe he will reach it. They see clearly the loose notions of farming that prevail make lazy acres and unprofitable cows. They want no waste land or waste cows around them, to pay taxes on. Let us think of these things. There is money in them.

THE DAIRY.

A FILTHY CREAMERY.

Not long ago I visited a clever town in Iowa, says a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead, where the square was well kept, the business houses and dwellings were orderly and well arranged, the streets graded and in fine order, the school house was in keeping with the rest, and the farms about the town were neat and well managed. As is my habit, I sought out the creamery and found it a filthy den. I have visited far more than a score of factories in Iowa, and this is by far the sourest, meanest of them all, so that I think such factories in Iowa must be scarce. I was told that they made as high as 1,600 pounds of butter per day during June? They were paying 10 cents for cream while other factories were paying 11 and 12 cents. The reason, no doubt, was that they did not produce good goods and could not get a price for them. It is a slander on the creamery trade to keep such a shop. The floor was slimy and sour, the churn was moulded; well, the fact is, an educated nose wanted clean air immediately, if not sooner. The upper story was worse than the lower, and the wash room was "awful, terrible, mighty bad,"—and altogether uninviting. The carrying cans were washed in a common wash tub half full of thick, sour water. The work was done by a boy, not over 12 years old. The floor had fine bits of coal and other trash strewn about, and the floats as they were washed, (!) were set in the filth to drain. But this is enough. If my part of it were untrue it were too much; but it is true to the letter. The lesson simply is, we must keep clean factories if we would make fine butter. A traveling man only yesterday told the writer that he had always visited the factory, and, if it was not well kept, he discouraged his house in handling the goods. It all rests with the creamery men whether their butter shall stand high in the world's market or not. Create the idea that it is always clean and it will forever sell well. Let every man who is operating a dairy look about him and see that every part of the work is run free of filth, else his goods cannot be "gilt edge."

SET DEEP FOR GOOD BUTTER.

P. S. Dorland, of Saratoga County, N. Y., writes the Prairie Farmer that he began the deep setting of milk some fifteen years ago, when dairymen first began discussing the subject. Since then he has had no difficulty about the "coming" of butter, and nothing could induce him to go back to the old way. He constructed his milk room after a plan of his own, which he described as follows: "It is a lean-to on the north side of the house. It is 8 by 11 feet inside, with two doors, one entering from a working room, the other, at the opposite end, opening into a passage way connecting with the house cellar. Each end of the milk room has a hinged window, to supply light and air. The windows are curtained, so as to darken the room when desired. An opening at the bottom of the door, leading to the cellar gives a circulation of air, one of the most important points in a room where milk is kept. The floor is made by putting down small stones to the depth of one foot, then one foot of coarse gravel, covered with eight inches of coarse sand, on which is laid a floor of hard, smooth brick; the whole slightly inclining to one side. This floor can be washed with water and be kept sweet and clean at all times. The water supplying the rooms comes 100 rods, in lead pipe, and in the heat of summer stands 62 degrees in the tank. Improper temperature of the cream previous to churning no doubt is the cause of its foaming. Deep setting, other things being right, will bring the best of butter."

WINTER DAIRYING.

The United States Dairyman has the following on this subject: "While the mass of dairy farmers are still skeptical in regard to the profitableness of winter dairying, and will be for the next half century or more, we find, in talking with those who have tried it for years, they think they cannot afford to practice any other system. They find not only that they are getting far better average prices—that there is least production of milk when butter and cheese are the cheapest—their greatest when prices are stiffest; but the system naturally leads to better care and feeding, and that involves more, and better manure, which in turn leads to better crops and more cow food, more mouths to consume it, and ultimately to more wealth in the bank or the farm, and more cash in the purse. But it takes faith, founded on intelligence, to begin, and perseverence to adhere to it, and also needs a herd large enough to make the results enough to be worthy the attention of a man who has the brains, capital and perseverence of one who can make it a success, before the real ambition to do many of the difficulties vanish. We know men who work twice as hard and endure more hardships of storm and bad weather to earn a few dollars in winter than they would need to earn twice the money by taking care of a dozen good milch cows.

SUCCESSFUL DAIRYING.

O. C. Gregg, of Marshall, this State, says: "To succeed as a dairyman you must work continuously. The second point necessary to success is warm barns, yet some men believe that an open shed is sufficient protection for brute flesh and blood, with the thermometer 20 degrees below zero. Milking twenty-four cows, I have received close to $2,200 the past year. I believe that with forty cows the farm will bring $2,000 for milk and butter. I cultivate 100 acres and cut hay outside of it. I figure that one man, one team, ten cows and forty acres of plowed land is the proper proportion for getting the best returns from farm work."

THE BENEFITS OF DAIRY FARMING.

Dairy farming adds $1 per acre to the value of land, says the Rural World, while it saves $1 per acre to the value of land as against grain farming. This is $2 per acre—good rent. Twenty of the poorest milch cows in the country that two men can milk in one hour and a half in the morning and an hour and a half in the evening, will pay the wages of the two hired hands and furnish groceries for a good sized family, selling cream at 10 cents a gauge. The skim milk will raise 20 hogs that will be worth $6 each, $120, and to this may be added $300 worth of calves, over and above the crop raised by the two hired men. Don't calculate simply on the price of cream, but take results at the end of the year.

Success on the Farm.

Success on the farm does not necessarily involve high prices for the produce. Success in every department of life involves thrift, industry and good sense in the minutest of business affairs, and in making the most of what we have. A few acres well and skillfully cultivated will pay better than many handled in a slovenly manner. It will take a good man with an intelligent and thrifty wife and family of working children all he can do to make the most and best of a quarter section of land; but he can do it and profitably. If he has a head to plan and experience to guide him; such an one will make more of it than another would with three times that much land and help.

Ventilate the Grain Bins.

Elmira Husbandman: No bin is complete if unventilated from the bottom. One of the best and most simple ventilators consists of a galvanized iron cone, about six inches across at the base and a foot high, punched full of holes over the entire surface like a colander. To construct this contrivance, saw a circular hole five inches across in the bin floor, over which place the cone, securing it by a few nails. This ventilator is cheap, convenient and effective. To aid circulation there are required also small windows in the sides of the granary near the ceiling. These should be covered with coarse wire netting to keep out vermin.

Beef or Butter.

A correspondent to the Spirit of the Farm, writing of the cheapest factor for converting vegetable matter into human food, says: "And this question has to be considered in nearly all our agricultural industries. And prominent among these, is the cattle interest. And the question which suggests itself as to this industry is, whether the beef strain or the butter strain of cattle is the cheapest factor for the conversion of vegetable matter into human food? And that strain is preferable and more profitable, and consequently will be in greater demand, which will most cheaply attain this end. And the champions of either strain are requested to present their arguments pro and con. A cow of the butter strain that will produce a pound of butter a day, or 365 pounds of butter a year, and at 20 cents a pound, will bring $73; that is the value of her product for one year, the buttermilk and her calf not taken into the estimate. Charge grazing, hay and meal; what will this be worth? and deduct from gross profit. A steer of the beef strain at 3 years of age is worth $90. Charge grazing, hay, corn, etc., for three years, and deduct price of these from the $90, and the remainder will be the net profit. Not being familiar with the amount of food consumed by either strain, or the value of either, I make no statement as to this point. But I should like to see a statement by some person familiar with the cost of both productions, and then we would be near the solution of the question as to which is the cheaper factor for the convertion of vegetable matter into human food.

Deceptive Frauds.

As soon as it becomes apparent that Moses King, the young publisher, of Harvard square, at Cambridge, Mass., had met an unprecedented success with his book called "Students' Songs"—the sale already reaching nearly fifty thousand copies—several publishers brought out collections of so-called student or college songs. Some of them are legitimate competitors; but some appear so similar in shape, in title, in design or general make-up, as to mislead a casual buyer who may be intending to get a copy of the original, "Students' Songs," which was edited by Wm. H. Hills, of the Harvard class of 1880, and published by Moses King of the Harvard class of 1881, the names of both appearing on the title page of the genuine collection only. The success of this collection is due chiefly to the freshness of its sixty copyrighted songs, comprising those jolly and melodious tunes and peculiar phrases which, within the past ten years, have arisen and become generally popular among the students of all American colleges. The low price, too—fifty cents—and the attractive appearance, also, have had their influence in making "Students' Songs" the most successful book of its class ever published in this country.

DAIRY RECORDS.

National Stockman: It is self evident that these tests of dairy cows, which are so common now, and which have resulted in the death of so many valuable cows, are practically valueless to the practical dairyman. It is not what a cow can be made to yield under enormous pressure, but what she will yield under ordinary feeds and care, that determines her value. If a test was conducted with the cows allowed nothing but good pasture, then it would be of some practical value to the ordinary farmer and dairyman, and they could compare the results obtained with their own usual figures, and thus learn something about the relative merits of the different breeds for dairy cattle. But where the cows are stimulated and pampered on pea meal, and on their own milk, etc., until their physical organization can stand no more, and they are numbered with the cows that were fed to death, without giving any adequate return, either to the owner or to the general public for their untimely sacrifice, the test is of no practical benefit to any one.

Winter Reading.

It appears to be a notable fact that the best farmers, and the best stockmen are the very best friends of the newspapers. It is generally the old foggy and the ne'er-do-wells, that scoff at "book and newspaper larnin," and if they are induced to take their home county paper, they never read it. The progressive farmers, those that get 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, and own fine, fat, sleek cattle and horses, are invariably men whose sitting room table will be generously supplied with, not only the local newspapers, but agricultural journals, books relating to stock, to feeding animals, which contain the thoughts and experiments of able men, who devote their time and energies to advance the cause of agriculture and to learn how to produce more abundant crops, as well as to surround their stock with the best conditions for raising them successfully and profitably.

Every farmer in the Northwest will be benefitted greatly by subscribing to one or more good agricultural papers, and if one is published near by it certainly should be a regular visitor in the family.

The Northwestern Farmer, published at Fargo, Dakota, is doing a good work throughout the Northwest, and we have decided to offer it to every old subscriber, as well as to all new subscribers, as a free gift, on the payment of one year's subscription to THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, paid in advance.

Sample copies of The Farmer will be sent free by addressing Edward A. Webb Fargo, Dakota. [26-29]

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultrymen, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

THINK OF THESE THINGS.

Hoard's Dairyman.

Western dairymen can realize something of the difference between their condition and that of the English dairymen by the following:

One of the prize dairy farms in England consists of 81 acres. The tenant pays $1,400 a year rent besides purchased food costing over $3,000, and paying $800 a year for fertilizers. Forty-six cows are kept besides fifteen are bought and sold annually. The farm being in the town of Preston, most of the milk is sold to city consumers. The butter is most generally made from such whole-milk as is not sold, and brings from 26 cents a pound in summer to 48 cents in winter. The revenue from butter and milk amounts to $150 to $175 a week, besides what is made by other marketing. The work of the farm, says the Agricultural Gazette, begins early every day and lasts long. Everybody helps.

There are several sharp points that stand out from this recital. 1. The rental on the land is $17.28 an acre. 2. There must be good brains and never ceasing industry behind all that. You couldn't entrust a dairyman to manage that farm, who thinks he can't afford even a dollar a year for a good dairy paper; who has starved his head until it is the weakest part of the man. 3. Look at the number of cows per acre that are kept on that farm and moreover look at the amount paid for extra food. No doubt nine out of ten of our readers shake their heads dubiously at such a state of things. Well, no wonder. It takes from 7 to 15 acres to keep a cow summer and winter in most of the western dairies. Get out your pencil and figure up the interest account that cow has to earn on that land. Then, what can you expect when you do not give her thorough care and attention at that. Our most advanced dairymen, in one respect, are working on the line indicated in that English dairy farm. Hiram Smith says he is going to keep 100 dairy cows on the produce of 200 acres. He has set his mark there and we believe he will reach it. They see clearly the loose notions of farming that prevail make lazy soils and unprofitable cows. They want no waste and or waste cows around them to pay taxes on. Let us think of these things. There is money in them.

THE DAIRY.

A FILTHY CREAMERY.

Not long ago I visited a clever town in Iowa, says a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead, where the square was well kept, the business houses and dwellings were orderly and well arranged, the streets graded and in fine order, the school house was in keeping with the rest, and the farms about the town were neat and well managed. As is my habit, I sought out the creamery and found it a filthy den. I have visited more than a score of factories in Iowa, and this is by far the sourest, meanest of them all, so that I think such factories in Iowa must be scarce. I was told that they made as high as 1600 pounds of butter per day during June. They were paying 10 cents for cream while other factories were paying 11 and 12 cents. The reason, no doubt, was that they did not produce good goods and could not get a price for them. [illegible] on the creamery trade to keep such a shop. The floor was slimy and sour, the churn was mouldy, well, the fact is, an educated nose wants to leave immediately, if not sooner. The upper story was worse than the lower, and the wash room was awful, terrible, mighty bad, and altogether unlivable. The carrying cans were washed in a common wash tub, half full of filthy, sour water. The work was done by a boy about 18 years old. [illegible] clean factories, if we would make fine butter. A traveling man only yesterday told the writer that he had always visited the factory, and if it was not well kept, he discouraged his house in handling the goods. It all rests with the creamery men whether their butter shall stand high in the world's market or not. Create the idea that it is always clean and it will forever sell well. Let every man who is operating a dairy look about him and see that every part of the work is run free of filth, else his goods cannot be gilt edge.

SET DEEP FOR GOOD BUTTER.

P. S. Dorland, of Saratoga County, N. Y., writes the Prairie Farmer that he began the deep setting of milk some fifteen years ago, when dairymen first began discussing the subject. Since then he has had no difficulty about the coming of butter, and nothing could induce him to go back to the old way. He constructed his milk room after a plan of his own, which he described as follows: It is a lean-to on the north side of the house. It is 8 by 11 feet inside, with two doors, one entering from a working room, the other at the opposite end, opening into a passage way connecting with the house cellar. Each end of the milk room has a hinged window, to supply light and air. The windows are curtained, so as to darken the room when desired. An opening at the bottom of the door leading to the cellar gives a circulation of air, one of the most important points in a room where milk is kept. The floor is made by putting down small stones to the depth of one foot, then one foot of coarse gravel, covered with eight inches of coarse sand, on which is laid a floor of hard, smooth brick, the whole slightly inclining to one side. This floor can be washed with water, and be kept sweet and clean at all times. The water supplying the rooms comes 100 rods, in lead pipe, and in the heat of summer stands 62 degrees in the tank. Improper temperature of the cream previous to churning no doubt is the cause of its foaming. Deep setting, other things being right, will bring the best of butter.

WINTER DAIRYING.

The United States Dairyman has the following on this subject: "While the mass of dairy farmers are still skeptical in regard to the profitableness of winter dairying, and will be for the next half century or more, we find in talking with those who have tried it for years, they think they cannot afford to practice any other system. They find not only that they are getting far better average prices—that there is least production of milk when butter and cheese are the cheapest—their greatest when prices are highest—but the system naturally leads to better care and feeding, and that involves more and better manure, which in turn leads to better crops and more cow food, more mouths to consume it, and ultimately to more wealth in the bank or the farm and more cash in the purse. But it takes faith founded on intelligence to begin and perseverance to adhere to it, and also needs a herd large enough to make the results enough to be worthy the attention of a man who has the brains, capital and perseverance of one who can make it a success, before the real ambition to do many of the difficulties vanish. We know men who work twice as hard and endure more hardships of storm and bad weather to earn a few dollars in winter than they would need to earn twice the money by taking care of a dozen good milch cows."

SUCCESSFUL DAIRYING.

O. C. Gregg, of Marshall, this State, says: "To succeed as a dairyman you must work continuously. The second point necessary to success is warm barns, yet some men believe that an open shed is sufficient protection for brute flesh and blood, with the thermometer 20 degrees below zero. Milking twenty-four cows, I have received close to $2,200 the past year. I believe that with forty cows the farm will bring $2,000 for milk and butter. I cultivate 100 acres and cut hay outside of it. I figure that one man, one team, ten cows and forty acres of plowed land is the proper proportion for getting the best returns from farm work."

THE PROFITS OF DAIRY FARMING.

Dairy farming adds 11 per cent to the value of land, says the Rural World, while it saves 4 per acre to the value of land as against grain farming. [illegible] the poorest milch cows in the country [illegible] two men can milk in one hour [illegible] the morning and [illegible] in the evening, will pay the [illegible] for a good sized family [illegible] the skim milk [illegible] worth [illegible] the calves [illegible] the year.

Success on the Farm.

Success on the farm does not necessarily involve high prices for the produce. Success in every department of life involves thrift, industry and good sense in the management of business affairs, and in making the most of what we have. A few acres well and skillfully cultivated will pay better than many handled in a slovenly manner. It will take a good man with an intelligent and thrifty wife and family of working children all he can do to make the most and best of a quarter section of land, but he can do it, and profitably. If he has a head to plan and experience to guide him, such an one will make more of it than another would with three times that much land and help.

Ventilate the Grain Bins.

Elmira Husbandman: No bin is complete if unventilated from the bottom. One of the best and most simple ventilators consists of a galvanized iron cone about six inches across at the base and a foot high, punched full of holes over the entire surface like a colander. To construct this contrivance, saw a circular hole five inches across in the bin floor, over which place the cone, securing it by a few nails. This ventilator is cheap, convenient and effective. To aid circulation there are required also small windows in the sides of the granary near the ceiling. These should be covered with coarse wire netting to keep out vermin.

Beef or Butter.

A correspondent to the Spirit of the Farm, writing of the cheapest factor for converting vegetable matter into human food, says: And this question has to be considered in nearly all our agricultural industries. And prominent among these is the cattle interest. And the question which suggests itself as to this industry is, whether the beef strain or the butter strain of cattle is the cheapest factor for the conversion of vegetable matter into human food? And that strain is preferable and more profitable, and consequently will be in greater demand, which will most cheaply attain this end. And the champions of either strain are requested to present their arguments pro and con. A cow of the butter strain that will produce a pound of butter a day, or 365 pounds of butter a year, and at 20 cents a pound, will bring $73; that is the value of her product for one year, the buttermilk and her calf not taken into the estimate. Charge grazing, hay and meal, what will this be worth? and deduct from gross profit. A steer of the beef strain at 3 years of age is worth $60. Charge grazing, hay, corn, etc., for three years and deduct price of these from the $60 and the remainder will be the net profit. Not being familiar with the amount of food consumed by either strain, or the value of either, I make no statement as to this point. But I should like to see a statement by some person familiar with the cost of both productions, and then we would be near the solution of the question as to which is the cheaper factor for the convertion of vegetable matter into human food.

Deceptive Frauds.

As soon as it became apparent that Moses King, the young publisher, of Harvard square, at Cambridge, Mass., had met an unprecedented success with his book called "Student Songs"—the sale already reaching nearly fifty thousand copies—several publishers brought out collections of so-called student or college songs; some of them are legitimate competitors, but some appear so similar in shape, in title, in design or general make-up, as to mislead a casual buyer who may be intending to get a copy of the original "Student Songs," which was edited by Wm. H. Hills, of the Harvard class of 1880, and published by Moses King, of the Harvard class of 1881, the names of both appearing on the title page of the genuine collection only. The success of this collection is due chiefly to the freshness of its many copyrighted songs, comprising the jolly and melodious tunes and popular phrases which, within the past ten years, have arisen and become generally popular among the students of all American colleges. The low price—fifty cents—and the attractive appearance, also, have had their influence in making "Student Songs" the most successful book of its kind ever published in this country.

DAIRY RECORDS.

National Stockman: It is a lamentable fact that the tests of dairy cows which are so common now, and which have resulted in the discovery of so many valuable cows, are [illegible] the practical dairyman. [illegible] conducted with the cows allowed nothing but good pasture, then it would be of some practical value to the ordinary farmer and dairyman, and they could compare the results obtained with their own usual figures, and thus learn something about the relative merits of the different breeds for dairy cattle. But where the cows are stimulated and pampered on oil meal, and on their own milk, etc., until their physical organization can stand no more, and they are numbered with the cows that were fed to death, without giving any adequate return, either to the owner or to the general public for their untimely sacrifice, the test is of no practical benefit to any one.

Winter Reading.

It appears to be a notable fact that the best farmers, and the best stock men are the very best friends of the newspapers. It is generally the old foggy and the ne'er-do-wells that scoff at "book and newspaper larnin," and if they are induced to take their home county paper they never read it. The progressive farmers, those that get 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, and own fine, fat, sleek cattle and horses, are invariably men whose sitting room table will be generously supplied with, not only the local newspapers, but agricultural journals, books relating to stock, to feeding animals, which contain the thoughts and experiments of able men who devote their time and energies to advance the cause of agriculture and to learn how to produce more abundant crops, as well as to surround their stock with the best conditions for raising them successfully and profitably.

Every farmer in the Northwest will be benefitted greatly by subscribing to one or more good agricultural papers, and if one is published near by it certainly should be a regular visitor in the family.

The Northwestern Farmer, published at Fargo, Dakota, is doing a good work throughout the Northwest, and we have decided to offer it to every old subscriber, as well as to all new subscribers, as a free gift, on the payment of one year's subscription to THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL paid in advance.

Sample copies of The Farmer will be sent free by addressing Edward A. Webb Fargo, Dakota. [26-29]

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultrymen, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support, yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and is sued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

I. U. and W. H. Jennings and A. N. Hopkins went forth for to slay wild geese one day last week and, while digging a pit wherein to hide, the better to slaughter the innocents, I. U. and A. N. came near having a bit of experience. There was a healthy prairie fire raging in the vicinity, and fearing least it might skip in and burn out their pond they set a bit of a back-fire. Lucky thought. For while they were busy digging, the fire swept upon them so rapidly that they were obliged to flee for their lives. They reached their back-fire ground all out of breath but by a scratch. The country round about (and the pond) was so completely all burned up that they could get no geese that trip. 'Twas a narrow and brilliant escape.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

Warren Sheaf: Billy Box has placed upon his farm west of town a fine young bull, of the Friesian breed of cattle from Unadilla Stock Farm, N. Y. This young animal is a beauty and has already taken several premiums. The Friesian cattle are fast coming to the front, and give splendid satisfaction wherever introduced. The introduction of such high bred stock we hope to see an increased interest in stock raising in Marshall County.

Wheat has been flowing in for the past week at a lively rate, though there is but little sold, the majority preferring to hold for a rise, which seems bound to come, although wheat has been steadily declining a little every day. It is the opinion of the shrewdest dealers that it must in the near future take a substantial advance and hold it. The surplus is fast dwindling away, and the almost sure prospect of an European war, it is thought, will send it booming before spring. Be that as it may, the farmer has an opportunity of drawing a certain amount on his wheat and holding for the rise, if it comes, a chance that he has not had of late years and many are availing themselves of the privilege.

You can procure a Lady's Gold Pin a Lady's Gold Bracelet, or a Lady's Gold Chain, with the Minneapolis Weekly Tribune. Send for sample copies.

The farmers' sale at Carman last Thursday was reasonably well attended, considering that farmers are generally very busy plowing, and considerable property changed hands. But little was sold at auction, however, the evident disposition being to swap 'round or buy at private sale. There were horses, cows, steers, hogs and pigs, farm machinery, household goods, and every conceivable article on deck and the occasion proved very interesting, and, to some, not unprofitable. There will, probably, be another day appointed in the near future, doubtless soon after the first freeze-up, when farmers can have more leisure time to attend. They seem to be appreciated and will prove a grand success, without doubt.

Any farmer desiring a Pocket Knife, made of the best material, which retails at from seventy-five cents to one dollar and a quarter, can procure the same as a premium with the Minneapolis Weekly Tribune. Send for sample copy.

On Tuesday evening the New York Lyceum Theatre Company presented "Bessie's Burglar" and "Joshua Whitcomb," to a fair audience. George Clark did excellently in the title role, keeping his hearers on a constant grin, while Wm. Fredrick as the Dude was immense and just too utterly utter for anything. Chas. Spratt, as "John Martin" and Harry Brunson as "Bill Johnson" sustained their parts excellently as did the balance of the troupe in their respective parts. Little Tot won our heart when she warbled her little song to "Uncle Josh." Her voice is very clear and sweet and it is no effort at all for her to use it in song. The only fault to be found is that that part was altogether too brief. We trust that this troupe will favor our city again in the near future, which is probable.

If you want a Standard Dictionary that will cost you one dollar at retail; or if you want to understand "Fancy Needle Work," or if you want to understand "Law Without Lawyers," subscribe for the Minneapolis Weekly Tribune. Send for sample copies.

Our thanks are due to those of our patrons who have, within the past week, dropped in and set their subscriptions ahead a year or so. One worthy granger came in, and finding his subscription two years in arrears paid up in full for four years, remarking that "turn about is fair play. The JOURNAL has carried me for two years, and now it is my turn." Rest assured, friends, that we do heartily appreciate of such acts of kindness, and it is these very little things that furnish the sinews necessary for the successful publication of a paper. We do not expect every one to do as did our kind friend, but if all would drop in and settle up to date and set their subscriptions only one year ahead, it would help us very materially in our efforts to make THE JOURNAL invaluable to its readers. We are thankful for the favors already received and trust that all will be like minded.

CROOKSTON CITY MARKETS.

Wheat has taken a bit of a tumble and is now down to 78 for No. 1 Hard. The price last week called in floods of wheat which doubtless causes this depression. We do not look for any substantial advance before the latter part of December or first of January.

GRAHAM—$2.50.
BRAN—$10 per ton. Shorts $11.

OATS—Slow at 25 cents.

The Banker's daughter was presented last evening to a delighted audience. This troupe won golden opinions here.

Herb expects one hundred baskets of Concord grapes to arrive to-morrow morning—probably the last of the season.

A special meeting of the Board of Steam Threshers is called for on Saturday at 2 o'clock p. m. Important business to be transacted.

Attorney P. C. Schmidt, whose card appears in this issue has come among us to reside. P. C. ranks among the leading attorneys in our county and will doubtless do well here as he deserves.

Commissioner Goodrich was in from Woodside this week after a young man who had made a mistake and gone off with a yoke of cattle belonging to Mr. G. The man had vamoosed the ranch but had sold the cattle here in Crookston. The case will be heard in the courts.

FARMERS' DAY.

Crookston should encourage this idea and arrange the auctioneer's license so that it would be practicable to have several market days during the year. The idea is for farmers and all others having goods and chattels to dispose of to meet at a given place on certain days to exchange their goods and to have an auctioneer on hand to dispose of such goods as have not been disposed of at private sale at public sale. The license, as fixed at present, is so high as to render the services of an auctioneer impracticable. We need not mention the advantage to our city to be derived on these occasions, as they are too obvious to need comment. The only point is will the city take the steps necessary to secure them?

East Grand Forks Courier, Oct. 16th.

A number of Bohemians, living in the Bohemian settlement, some 12 miles from this city, for weeks past have been busily engaged in perfecting arrangements to hold a monster picnic. The date set for the jollification accidentally fell on last Sunday, and the gathering was intended as a peace offering for the many blessings which have been bestowed on the little community during the past season. The invitations had been extended with a lavish hand, and on the afternoon set apart for the inauguration of the festivities young and old of both sexes from miles around gathered at the home of Frank Kovar. Now, a Bohemian picnic without beer would be even more a dismal failure, from a Bohemian standpoint, than a dance without music; hence, several kegs of beer were on hand, and the staff of life flowed continually. The afternoon, we learn, passed so pleasantly that the committee on arrangements decided to continue the picnic into the night. About 8 o'clock, Anton Kluzak, a resident of the settlement, and who had been engaged during the day in digging potatoes, reached the picnic. His two brothers, Frank and John, had preceded him by several hours. Soon after Anton's arrival, and really before he had time to get well "beered up," if we are to believe his story, he was set upon by several of the "early comers," who playfully commenced to tear off his clothing. He objected, of course, as the night was chilly and the room comfortably filled with ladies. In fact he vigorously protested, backed by his two brothers, all powerful young men, and during the tumult which followed Jas. Ellpes was hit on the head with a club. Now, Ellpes, who is a likely young man, was doing nothing, and when Jamie's mother saw him fall she naturally felt hurt, and it is our opinion that out of the sympathy which centered on the old lady grew much of the trouble which followed. A terrific onslaught was made on each other, and after "time" was called and the debris had been cleared away, John Klusak was picked up with a badly shattered head, his left jaw broken and the symmetry of his face destroyed. The instrument used was a club, such as a Sampson would carry, and the general verdict of those present was that the blow had been dealt by his own brother, Anton, who was taken into custody. The County Attorney was telegraphed for, and his deputy, Ed. George, of Crookston, responded. The prisoner was brought to this city late Monday night and lodged in the Hotel de Wyer, where he was interviewed by a reporter. On Tuesday evening he was taken to the Castle de Zwic, in Crookston, to await the result of his brother's mishap and the pleasure of the Grand Jury. This little fracas will cost the taxpayers hundreds of dollars, the parties concerned much trouble and time, and perhaps one life, while the lesson it teaches will go unheeded.

The Premium Engraving issued by "Peterson's Magazine," for 1886, is of rare excellence and beauty. It is a first-class line-and-stipple engraving, executed in the highest style of art. The artists are Illman Brothers, and they have engraved it—size, 21 inches by 27—for "Peterson's Magazine," in their best and most brilliant manner. The picture is called "The Angel of Paradise," and is a companion to the "Not Lost, But Gone Before," published by "Peterson's Magazine" some years ago, and which was so popular. In artistic merit, it is, we think, one of the finest "Peterson" has ever issued, and will go to every mother's heart, especially if she has lost one of her "darlings." Another of the premiums is the "Forget-Me-Not," an illustrated album, a book of very great beauty. Another is an extra copy of the magazine, etc., etc. You can get any of them, gratis, by raising a club for "Petersons" for 1886. This is a rare chance. Specimens of the magazine sent, gratis, with full particulars, to those wishing to get up clubs, if written for. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The signal service apparatus is being put in place on the bell tower, as we go to press. The office will be at Herb's place and hereafter it want be possible for any weather to escape Herb without his knowledge.

A Good All-Around Cow.

Farm and Home.

In March 1884, I bought the imported Holstein cow Eleanor—a straight, square good-looking two-year-old, weighing 1200 lbs. with a record of 7800 lbs. of milk in seven days. April 9 she dropped a heifer calf which never saw new milk after two weeks and weighed over 900 lbs. at 16 month old. That summer Eleanor was kept in a rough dry pasture with other cows, having the run of the mowing fields after haying and six quarts middlings a day. In December, seeming large with calf she was dried; her weight was 1400 lbs., her milk record 9280 lbs. While dry, she was fed hay and twice a week roots. March 9, 1885, she dropped a bull calf weighing 105 lbs. at birth, and 570 lbs. when five months old. No new milk was given this calf after eight weeks. Eleanor has had short pasture all summer and the summer has been so dry she has been fed eight quarts of middlings. Sept. 1 she had given 8712 lbs. and will probably give 12 to 13,000 lbs by January. Her best day is 70 lbs. —for one week 470 and for one month 1950 lbs. As her cream is sold only occasional butter tests have been made, but enough to show she can easily make 16 lbs. a week of a very yellow color. From spring to fall she is out day and night in all weather and is perfectly healthy and hearty. She has never been fed for a record, but purposely to see if a Holstein under such treatment would show any superiority over ordinary stock.

HOLSTEINS IN THE WEST.

It pays farmers and dairymen to breed Holstein cattle, says a writer in the Farmers' Call.

I am personally acquainted with many farmers and dairymen in the Eastern States, also in the west, and I have taken pains to inquire as to the profits compared with raising other breeds of cattle. Every breeder of Holstein cattle assures me that he made more profit from his investment in this breed than he did from any other. Farmers and dairymen who buy good registered bulls, claim a profit every year on the investment—from two to three hundred per cent. This may seem unreasonable, but it is true. For example, every practical dairyman who keeps a registered bull soon procures a set of grade Holstein cows, and with such cows he is in shape to make money, as they will produce a large flow of milk and he will have an unusual amount of dairy products to sell. Then, again, if he has more grade cows than he cares to keep, he can sell them readily, and at good paying prices, as grade Holsteins milk nearly as well as full bloods, and they make the best family or town cow in the world.

AN INFAMOUS DISCRIMINATION.

Farm, Stock and Home.

On Sept. 10th the rail rates on grain from Chicago to New York, about a thousand miles, was ten cents per hundred pounds. On the same day, for hundreds of previous days, and presumably for all the days to come, the rates in Minnesota and Dakota were about an average of twenty cents per hundred for a 200 mile haul. In other words, the farmer, the man who tills the soil, produces the crop and is satisfied if he gets an interest of six per cent on the value of his farm, over the bare cost of his living, is charged one cent per hundred pounds for every ten miles his wheat is carried; but when his wheat gets into the hands of the capitalist, the wealthy speculator, the man who already possesses more money than he knows what to do with, the men who never heard the rattle of a harvester and don't know whether wheat grows on trees or is made out of basswood, then the poor farmer's wheat (his no longer,) is carried a hundred miles for one cent per hundred pounds! The men who need the money most, they who deserve to reap some reward for their labors and privations, are charged ten times more for the same service than the dropsical pocket-booked gentry who don't know a wheat field from a spring freshet.

This is one of the results of the combination of gigantic monopolies which now own this country and dictate to all of our people just what shall be the measure of their prosperity. "The railroads have done so much for this country!" Yes, altogether too much. Sometime we may ask them to do a little less, and give the rest of us a chance.

A NEW ATTACK ON WILD MUSTARD.

Farm, Stock and Home.

We had begun to feel warranted in believing that what our readers did not know about wild mustard by this time was scarcely worth the time required to learn it, but we have now got a new lesson to present to our wild mustard scientists, and begin to think the subject is an exhaustless one.

Editor Farm, Stock and Home.

I have watched the arguments on the subject of the destruction of wild mustard for some time. I am much surprised to see many, who seem to be well posted farmers, advocate the ways suggested to rid their farms of this weed. Now I want to give my way, which has proven very satisfactory to me. Seed your land in the spring without any grain, mow about the first of June close to the ground. You may want to save what you mow, but it is much more profitable to rake the grass in winrows and burn it. Mow again about the first of August and dispose of the grass the same way. I had a piece where mustard was just as thick as it could stand, I mowed as stated, close to the ground, three years ago, and now I would give a nice present to any one who can find a stalk of mustard on the land.

Turner Co., Dak. MARTIN SHANK.

The Food of Dairy Cattle.

Speaking before an assemblage of dairymen in Central New York recently Mr. Daniel Batchelor thus expressed himself on the food of dairy cattle: "That the flavor and savor of the food on which animals are fed permeates the flesh, the fats, and the lacteals is not to be questioned any more than that the rich flavors of the butter and cheese of some localities owe their good qualities as much to the herbage on which the cattle are fed as to any manipulation in the dairy, be it ever skillful and careful. The farmers in eastern Pennsylvania are famous for the fine butter they produce from their excellent grass lands. Most of the richest butter of that region is sold in Philadelphia and Baltimore and the best of it commands high prices. The Darlingtons, of Pennsylvania, send their entire make to New York, where it sells a $1 per pound. As I have ventured to say that the grass lands of Central New York ought to be improved, I may add that our severe winters will not permit the perennial growth of many kinds of herbage on which the European cattle feed. Yet there is no good sandy loam in our region but what will grow that prince of fodder plants, the alfalfa, of Lucerne, which ought to be grown wherever the land is right for it. More roots, too should be grown and fed. Oil meal and cake, if only for its fertilizing qualities, should be part of the daily ration, at any rate in winter."

Barefoot Horses on the Farm.

Coleman's Rural World: Whether horses should go, at all times and under all conditions, unshod, has been long and widely, if not always wisely discussed. This point we leave at rest for the present, but enter a claim in behalf of the horse's health and enjoyment. Everyone knows that the wearing of shoes is cramping, confining and the cause of much suffering, is a consequent of our civilization, and that an effort should be put forth to mitigate the evil as far as possible. On the farm there is not much heavy hauling on the hard roads; there is plenty of grass and soft ground, and the thoughtful, merciful farmer will at least have alternate portions of his stock barefoot. In the plow or mower, in the meadow, pasture or corn field, the shoe can be dispensed with; and this alone promotes health, sound conditions and fatness.

The users of horses in the city find it profitable to send their animals to grass barefoot during some period of the summer. Beauty, strength, gait and health are gained by it. The farmer can do it with much greater advantage, thus reducing the smith's bill and corn feed, and gains in health, beauty and comfort. The horse in the paddock is the personification of ease, beauty, agility, independence and power, and the farmer can have that fine picture seen from his window or door, in its frame of grain and grass, tree and stream with sky and cloud and golden sun rays. Let the horses have holiday on the farm when at all practicable.

Foreign-Bred Stock Not the Best.

So long as American farmers allow themselves to be fooled with the idea that they must have stock bred in foreign countries will they have a low estimate of that produced here. Is it not time to call a halt in this matter? Experienced men from abroad for years have admitted that we have on an average as well-bred and as well developed tattle as can be found in England. Why, then, should we go to England for more? And what is true of Shorthorns, is true of pretty much every kind of imported stock; we have picked their best for years, have bred as well or better than they, and can afford now to claim that we have the best. It is not characteristis of Americans to yield the palm to any one. Let us think better of our own stock.

TO OUR PATRONS.

THE JOURNAL, like everybody else felt the depression of the low price of wheat last fall and knowing as we well did that our subscribers had need of every cent they could raise to keep them on their feet we did not press them for the little amounts due us. This fall times are very materially changed and every body can get money enough for all purposes without distressing themselves therefore we trust that our friends will remember us. We have need of every cent due us and as much that was due last fall was allowed to run over it amounts in the aggregate to a considerable sum. Do not forget that you can do better by giving us your subscription for other papers that you want, such as Farm, Stock and Home, Northwestern Farmer, American Agriculturist, Weekly Pioneer Press, than you can by sending to the office of publication direct. As we have dealt dealt very leniently with our patrons during the hard times we trust that they will, now that times are better, remember us by dropping in and squaring up old accounts.

The General-Purpose Cow.

Farm and Home.

My idea of a cow is this: She should be of good size, symmetrical in form, a large milker, (for without milk and plenty of it she is worthless in this part of the country,) a good yielder of butter, and when we are done with her she must make a good carcass of beef.

Now I think I have given a fair description of a Holstein-Friesian. Therefore we need look no further for a cow to fill the bill. We all know the Holstein cattle are large, and everyone will concede that they are good milkers. How about the butter? Let us take Aaggie 2d, who has made 207¾ lbs. in 60 days—a butter record which stands unequaled, I think. Taking T. G. Yeoman & Son's herd of 26 cows and heifers of all ages, 22 have averaged over 17 lbs. of thoroughly worked unsalted butter in seven days. Smith & Powell's nine cows made over 17 lbs. each per seven days; eight heifers, three years old, averaged 13 lbs. 4 oz. in seven days; 11 heifers, two years old and younger, averaged 10 lbs. 3 oz. per week; and the entire original imported Netherland family of six cows (two being but three years old) averaged 17 lbs. 6 oz. per week. I believe this record has never been equaled by any entire family of the same number of any breed.

I could give instance enough to fill half Farm and Home of 14-lbs. cows and over. But I think I have given enough to show that butter is one characteristic of the breed. Some Jersey men may doubt the quality of the butter. If they will take the trouble to look up the premiums at the fairs, they will find that in almost every instance where Jersey and Holstein butter have been entered in competition, the Holstein has taken the first premium over the Jersey. I know what these cattle are. They make the best veal in the world, are good milkers, good butter makers, quick feeders, and take a place on the New England farm which has not and will not be filled until Holsteins becomes as plenty as natives.

THE HOLSTEIN MILK IS GOOD.

T. G. Yeomans & Sons of Walworth N. Y., say: "To show what the real average quality of Holstein-Friesian milk is, we give you herewith the average per cent. of 21 cows of our herd, embracing all in our herd as per the published list over two years old and giving an average of one pound of butter (well worked and unsalted) to 22.48 lbs. of milk. The ages of these 21 cows are as follows: seven are 6 years and over, 9 are 4 and under 6, 1 is 4, 4 are 8, and the whole 21 have made an average of 20 lbs. 10.4 ozs. each, per week of well worked, unsalted butter, as per our latest list inclosed." Such statements as this, tell the story. Please publish this in justice to the best and most practical breed of cattle in the world.

PLEDGE.

"Do it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

A young man entered the bar-room of a village tavern and called for a drink. The landlord said, "No, you have had too much already. You have had the delirium tremens once, and I cannot sell you any more." He stepped aside to make room for two young men who had just entered, and the landlord waited upon them very politely. The other had stood by silent, and when the others had finished, he walked up to the landlord, and thus addressed him: "Six years ago, at that age, I stood where those young men stand now. I was a man with fair prospects. Now at the age of twenty-eight I am a wreck, body and mind. You led me to drink. In this room I formed the habit that has been my ruin. Now give me a few glasses more and your work is done. I shall soon be out of the way. There is no hope for me. But they can be saved; they may be men again. Do not sell it to them. Sell it to me, and let me die, and the world will be rid of me; but for Heaven's sake sell them no more!" The landlord listened, pale and trembling. Setting down the decanter, he exclaimed: "God helping me, that is the last drop I will ever sell to anyone!" And he kept his word.

I have just finished reading Dr. Talmage's sermon delivered at Brooklyn, May 31st on my chosen theme, and my heart responded amen, and amen; as did the Heavenly host when the words were uttered. That is the gospel of our Divine Lord, and may I not say in its fullest sense. I am so thankful that we have in your paper such a weapon of defense, against the hydra-headed monster—tyranny. God keep its pages as pure in the future as they have been in the past, and may its columns be filled with matter fresh from the great storehouse, as is the sermon to which I have already referred. I have felt so restless at times and so anxious to listen to preaching of that character, which I felt was so much needed, but which I am sorry to say, is most unpopular, that I have almost longed to step over the bounds of prescribed custom and preach the old, [new,] doctrine from the same text; but I must be content to know that God is sending forth laborers imbued by His spirit, and the stone that is cut out of the mountains without hands, will roll on 'till it fills the whole earth. What better service can we perform than that to which Our Father is calling us? I say calling us, for it seems clear to me, that a special demand is being made upon the Christian forces for a recognition of God's divine presence and power as never before, and that in order to cope with the great evils that exist, we must be armed with more than mortal energy. When Divinity interposes man must surrender. We need only to look over the record of the past few years and notice the events that have transpired, to be convinced that man is on the retrograde—that his moral strength is decreasing—while the exigences of the hour are calling him to awaken from his lethargy, and woman who has lived as it were in obscurity, has been called into active service; and with her heart filled with sympathy for the suffering, her hands tightly clasping the cross of Christ, she has stepped forth as a mediator between suffering humanity and Christian manhood; and what man in his strength would not do, she has dared to attempt, and in God's strength she has moved forward, with no other motive than to honor God and restore fallen manhood. How dark and dan-dangerous has been her journey—how high have rolled the waves of prejudice and passion, but on God's arm she has leaned. His hand has guided her, and at last manhood is seen to rise—Christianity to present a new phase, and the golden rule is beginning to shine out with increased beauty, and the sweet voice of the Redeemer is heard more audibly than ever before, "This is the way, walk ye in it,"—In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my disciples ye have done it unto me." Then let us take courage—"If God be for us who can be against us?" Let us hope in His mercy—let us cry continually for release from the bondage of sin and for consecration to our Master's service—co-workers together with Him, who has called us to high and holy purpose, and that purpose the amelioration of suffering thousands chained by the tyrant Rum. Already the chains begin to loosen and ere long they shall fall, as did the chains of American slavery—in an hour, unlooked for, for it is God leading us to battle and He will be victor.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First Publication September 10th, 1885.]

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Charles Forjet and wife, Tergillie Forjet, Mortgagors, to John Rhodes, Mortgagee, dated the 22d day of November A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and recorded as a mortgage together with the power of sale therein contained in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of November A. D. 1882, at 10:10 o'clock a. m., in book "I" of mortgages, on pages 531 to 533, on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, the amount of six hundred and forty-one dollars, ($641.00) and also forty-one and 80-100 dollars, ($41.80,) paid by said mortgagee for taxes on said mortgaged premises, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default and the non-institution of action the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become and is operative, and by and under the authority in said mortgage contained, the said John Rhodes mortgagee, elects to and does declare and claim that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid, is due and payable.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, at public auction by the Sheriff of said County, or by his deputy duly appointed on Friday the 30th day of October A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-five at 10 o'clock in the forenoon to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, including amount paid for taxes, and fifty dollars attorney's fees, being the lawful fees for attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit: The east half of the southwest quarter (e½ of sw¼) and lots three (3,) and four (4,) of Section thirty (30,) Township one hundred and fifty (150) north, of Range forty-three (43) west, containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres more or less according to the United States Government survey thereof.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Helge Olsen, mortgagor, to The Trustees of Beloit College, mortgagee, dated the first day of September A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty one, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the first day of September A. D. 1881, at 1:05 o'clock p. m., in book "E" of mortgages, on pages 249 and 250 on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the amount of five hundred and sixty and 63-100 dollars ($560.63), and also twenty-nine and 25-100 dollars ($29.25) paid by said mortgagee for taxes on said mortgaged premises with $2.58 interest from date of payment to the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default and the non-institution of action, the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become and is operative and under the authority in said mortgage contained, the said Trustees of Beloit College elect to declare and claim that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid, is due and payable.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE.

The National Stockman and Farmer.

A very good farmer said to me, I have to pay tax on my neighbors' laziness. I keep my farm in the best of order by hard work and good management. I use all the manure I can get. I plow deep, cultivate well, keep down weeds and raise just twice as much as he. My farm always looks neat, my stock of all kinds are kept sleek and healthy, and as a natural result pay me large profit. My garden is a deep, rich soil, producing large crops every year of the finest vegetables. My fruit trees and shrubbery are well trimmed and cleared of worms. Our fruit are always the best. The flower beds are admired by all. Each child has his pets or his own crop to look after. So all feel an interest. Our buildings are all in good order, inside and out, and are all built for durability. Stock is all properly sheltered in bad weather. My house well furnished with books, papers, music, and all that is needed to make a pleasant home. My children are all contented and happy. Our dairy pays all our grocery bills. Our bank account is always in our favor. The assessor sees all things so neat that he assesses our stock just double that of neighbor Stevens, only just because we work harder and spend less time loafing around town.

Neighbor S. pays a large bill every year for tobacco and strong drink, and then complains of hard times. His farm is over-stocked with weeds, his stock is poor, his buildings are unpainted and running down, there are no fruits, no shade trees or wind breaks. Stock is exposed to all the stormy weather. Children are uneducated, ill-mannered, discontented, talk of "the old man" and "old woman," use their tobacco, cigars, etc., and never care for a book or a paper. Reader, to which class do you belong? J. W. FOOTE.

Farm Team on Hay Only.

In answer to an inquiry whether it would not be cheaper to keep a farm team entirely on hay, the National Live Stock Journal replies: "Hay varies so in quality that it is difficult to institute an accurate comparison. Corn is of a much more uniform quality than hay, that is, commercially. By analysis, corn is estimated as worth $22 per ton, and when hay is estimated by the same standard, medium quality is $12.80, very good hay is $15, and extra is $17 per ton. When corn is 50 cents per bushel, it equals $17.84 per ton, so it is certainly as cheap at that as medium hay at $12 per ton. We believe that corn and most kinds of concentrated food are generally as economical in food value as hay. When food is to be purchased for working horses, it could hardly be considered judicious management to feed wholly upon hay. The grain, as we have seen, must be in most cases the cheapest food in proportion to nutriment, and other important reason must be considered in selecting the ration for the working team. Hay is too bulky to be fed as a complete ration. The horse has a small stomach, but it requires at least 30 pounds of hay per day to furnish nutriment for a medium sized horse at hard labor, and this fills his stomach too full for the free action of the muscles. It is very uncomfortable for a horse to labor on a distended stomach. He could not do fast work, and even for farm work would be too logy. When a team is fed wholly upon hay, the time for feeding must be lengthened. It has been found that city teams doing severe labor are better to be fed on 15 pounds of hay per day, the balance of the food to be made up in grain.

WINTER DAIRYING PAYS BEST.

It is hard to break away from old habits and customs, says the New England Farmer. For many years past, butter has been in over-supply during the spring an early summer months, and consequently prices have gone below the point of profitable manufacture. So, again, every winter the price has gone up to a comparatively high figure for strictly fine new made goods. A good many shrewd farmers have taken advantage of the uniformly high price in winter, and have arranged to meet the demand, but the large majority still continue in the old way of making all their butter in the summer season on grass or other green food, with no other reason for their practice than the fact that they have always done so.

Such dairymen ought to know that the public taste for butter has greatly changed within a few years; that while formerly house-keepers often laid in a stock of June or September butter sufficient to carry them around to June or September again, they now prefer their butter fresh from the farmer every week in the year, and will only buy old butter when they can get no other. Dairymen who really understand their business and who make their business pay, have learned to conform to the demands of the market, and are either making a nearly uniform amount each week, or else they make the most in winter when prices are high and let their cows go dry during the season of over supply, in the flush of green feed. Very nearly as good butter can be made in summer, and the difference in cost is hardly appreciable. Indeed, we much prefer a winter dairy to a summer dairy. In winter it is easy keeping milk warm by a little extra fire heat, while in summer a considerable expense must be incurred for ice to keep it cool.

There is no time in the year when farmers can better attend to dairy work than in winter, and no time when they can better afford to have their cows go dry than in early summer, when the work of planting, hoeing and haying are driving. Nor is there any better time to raise calves than in early autumn. Extra good butter usually begins to advance in price after severe hot weather sets in and when dairymen of ordinary skill and those who have no conveniences for making good butter, find it easier to make cheese, sell milk, or fat veal. If all dairymen were to change to winter dairying, there would be no surplus and no low prices in the spring, but all dairymen will not change, because it is so hard to break away from old customs, and because it costs something to make changes. Our advice is to keep the cows farrow for a few months, and plan to have them come in milk again next year not earlier than the 1st of July, and from that time till October or November. It is very discouraging to sell butter in May and June for 15 cents per pound, and then perhaps have to buy in January at twice that sum. We should study the market more and adapt our work to the demands of the times.

National Stockman.

Of the various ways through which it is possible for the average dairyman to enhance his profit, the most effectual is first to reduce the cost of producing his milk. This he can do in a variety of ways. One way of doing so lies in the improvement of his milking stock. This is a certain but slow way, and must be the work of a few years. And then another way, more rapid, and that can at once be available, consists in reducing the cost of keeping his cows.

This, again, he may do in different ways; first, by securing greater warmth and more comfort for his cows in winter. The heaviest item of expense which he incurs consists in wintering his cows, and the more they are exposed to the cold, the heavier that item becomes. Cows eat more in winter than at any other time, simply because more heat is absorbed from their bodies by the cold air. For instance, we all know that hot water will cool faster on a cold day than on a warm one. Therefore the animal heat must be kept up to an uniform standard, and the extra loss of warmth must be restored, by more fuel, in form of feed, and this increases the cost of keeping and the cost of producing the fall and winter supply of milk. Keep the cows warm, and they will eat no more in the winter than at any other time, and they will require less extra food for winter, just in proportion as they are made warm and comfortable, and by just so much they will turn out milk at a reduced expense. There is profit in keeping cows warm in winter. It costs much less to tone down the cold of our severe climate by providing warm, comfortable buildings for the cows. If the owner has not secured them already, the sooner he gets them the better, and not be furnishing extra food, year after year, to restore the heat needlessly lost by the exposure of his cows to the cold air.

FARM NOTES.

HOW TO PLANT POTATOES.

The experiments in planting potatoes at Houghton farm, whether from cut seed or whole, as demonstrated by the exhibited products at the Orange County agricultural fair, says the Orange County Farmer, seems to have settled the matter in favor of the whole seed. The experiment included a number of varieties, and seems to have been carefully conducted. The product ran from 200 bushels to the acre, cut, to 320 bushels planted whole. When potatoes are plenty and cheap, many farmers plant whole ones; but if scarce, cutting is resorted to as a means of covering more ground and raising large crops. We had similar experience a few years ago, where replanting the same ground. The old whole potatoes of the former crop that had safely wintered over when the crop came to be dug, turned out to be much larger and better than those from cut seed. We never had much luck in planting single eyes; but nevertheless, always cut potatoes to two or three eyes when we have large seed, and if small, plant whole, and we believe this rule holds good with farmers generally.

LOSS IN STACKING HAY.

Not much argument is needed, says Popular Gardening, to see that barn stored hay is worth far more than that which is taken from the stack. We think that an estimate of the loss of one quarter in stacking is not wide from the mark. There is a loss from moulding at the bottom of the stack, for the old rails, boards or straw placed at the bottom of the stack can not wholly prevent it. Then the whole area of the external surface, which numbers many square feet, is weather beaten to some depth, causing the loss of much of its sweetness and nutrition, while it is not improbable that impairment of the quality may extend through the whole stack. Why then follow a practice that entails so great a waste. If one's hay that goes into stacks is worth $500, according to the estimate made, such a man pays $125 a year for the privilege of stacking. But if besides this the hay is fed at the stack, the loss above alluded to is but a small part of the entire loss. It costs no less than an increase of one-third in the feed, if the animals are kept and fed in the open air. These are strong arguments for more barn room.

STABLE MANURE.

Says the Germantown Telegraph: We have heard a self-constituted professor labor for nearly an hour to try to convince an audience that about 90 or more per cent. of stable manure was water, and really all the value that was contained in a cord of stable manure was what would remain if the moisture was expelled and the mass burned to ashes, which could be carried to the field in a peck basket. Fortunately, the farmers of the country are not of the ignorant class to be humbugged in any such manner because some one has an artificial compound that he desires to sell as a substitute for manure. Results are what tell the story, and in that farmers will not be fooled. It is permanency of effects that determines value. A special fertilizer may produce a fair crop, but if the soil is left in no condition to produce more until another application, it is unlike the effect of manure. But there is no danger of manure going out of use.

POTATO SCAB.

A correspondent of the Western Rural claims to have discovered by the aid of a powerful microscope the cause of the disease known as potato scab. He finds the liquid portion of a scabby potato swarming with living organisms, microbes, but whether as cause or effect he is as yet uncertain. He believes salt a partial preventive, and that rank green manures invite the disease. The chief reliance in preventing the disease is such treatment as will give the most vigorous health and growth. It remains an open question just what the treatment should be. Clover sod usually gives clean potatoes, but not always, and the commercial fertilizers in the in the place of animal manures cannot be wholly relied upon for protection.

STORING PLOWS.

Plows that stand over night in the field will rust. If they cannot be carried to the barn draw them out of the ground and leave them standing. If a plow is laid on its side the beam is liable to become warped. When the season is over and the tools no longer required, they should be painted and carefully stored away. The following mixtures are recommended as excellent for coating plows and tools in order to keep them from rusting. Dissolve an ounce of rosin in four ounces of linseed oil and add one quart of kerosene, stirring the mixture well. Apply in a warm condition. Another method is to dissolve an ounce of camphor in turpentine and add four ounces of lard and one ounce of pulverized black lead or stove polish; mix well and rub on with a rag.

CORN FODDER FOR COWS.

The Germantown Telegraph says: "One of the most successful of Illinois dairymen keeps 100 cows, but never raises a pound of hay. He feeds his cattle corn fodder cut when in blossom, bound and set up till cured, or till winter, when it is removed to the barn. He gets seven tons of this dry fodder to the acre, and claims that it is worth as much as the best of hay." No one who has fed such feed can doubt that its feeding value is not equal to that of good hay. Of course the fodder must be fine and put up in the best possible condition to be equal to good hay. The immense yield which can be produced from an acre planted to fodder makes it a very valuable crop, especially so where land is high and the amount of feed which can be obtained from an acre is of more importance than a little extra labor.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultrymen, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it, with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

The Premium Engraving issued by "Peterson's Magazine," for 1886, is of rare excellence and beauty. It is a first-class line-and-stipple engraving, executed in the highest style of art. The artists are Illman Brothers, and they have engraved it—size, 21 inches by 27—for "Peterson's Magazine," in their best and most brilliant manner. The picture is called "The Angel of Paradise," and is a companion to the "Not Lost, But Gone Before," published by "Peterson's Magazine" some years ago, and which was so popular. In artistic merit, it is, we think, one of the finest "Peterson" has ever issued, and will go to every mother's heart, especially if she has lost one of her "darlings." Another of the premiums is the "Forget-Me-Not," an illustrated album, a book of very great beauty. Another is an extra copy of the magazine, etc., etc. You can get any of them, gratis, by raising a club for "Petersons" for 1886. This is a rare chance. Specimens of the magazine sent, gratis, with full particulars, to those wishing to get up clubs, if written for. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Wilkie Collins' new story will begin the first day of November, and continue six months. It will appear in the Minneapolis Sunday and Weekly Tribune only. Wilkie Collins writes for no other paper in the Northwest. Send for sample copies.

When potatoes are plenty and cheap, many farmers plant whole ones, but if scarce, cutting is resorted to as a means of covering more ground and raising large crops. We had similar experience a few years ago, where replanting the same ground. The old whole potatoes of the former crop that had safely wintered over when the crop came to be dug turned out to be much larger and better than those from cut seed. We never had much luck in planting single eyes, but nevertheless always cut potatoes to two or three eyes when we have large seed, and if small, plant whole, and we believe this rule holds good with farmers generally.

LOSS IN STACKING HAY.

Not much argument is needed, says Popular Gardening, to see that barn stored hay is worth far more than that which is taken from the stack. We think that an estimate of the loss of one quarter in stacking is not wide from the mark. There is a loss from moulding at the bottom of the stack, for the old rails, boards or straw placed at the bottom of the stack can not wholly prevent it. Then the whole area of the external surface, which numbers many square feet, is weather beaten to some depth, causing the loss of much of its sweetness and nutrition, while it is not improbable that impairment of the quality may extend through the whole stack. Why then follow a practice that entails so great a waste. If one's hay that goes into stacks is worth $500, according to the estimate made, such a man pays $125 a year for the privilege of stacking. But if, besides this, the hay is fed at the stack the loss above alluded to is but a small part of the entire loss. It costs no less than an increase of one-third in the feed, if the animals are kept and fed in the open air. These are strong arguments for more barn room.

STABLE MANURE.

Says the Germantown Telegraph: We have heard a self-constituted professor labor for nearly an hour to try to convince an audience that about 90 or more per cent. of stable manure was water, and really all the value that was contained in a cord of stable manure was what would remain if the moisture was expelled and the mass burned to ashes, which could be carried to the field in a peck basket. Fortunately, the farmers of the country are not of the ignorant class to be humbugged in any such manner because some one has an artificial compound that he desires to sell as a substitute for manure. Results are what tell the story, and in that farmers will not be fooled. It is permanency of effects that determines value. A special fertilizer may produce a fair crop, but if the soil is left in no condition to produce more until another application, it is unlike the effect of manure. But there is no danger of manure going out of use.

POTATO SCAB.

A correspondent of the Western Rural claims to have discovered by the aid of a powerful microscope the cause of the disease known as potato scab. He finds the liquid portion of a scabby potato swarming with living organisms, but whether as cause or effect he is yet uncertain. He believes salt a partial preventive, and that rank green manure invites the disease. The chief reliance in preventing the disease is [illegible] treatment [illegible] will give the most vigorous health and growth. It remains an open question just what the treatment should be. Clover sod usually gives clean potatoes, but [illegible] and the commercial fertilizers in the [illegible] in the place of animal manure [illegible]

CORN FODDER FOR COWS.

The Germantown Telegraph says: One of the most successful of Illinois dairymen keeps 100 cows, but never raises a pound of hay. He feeds his cattle corn fodder, cut when in blossom, bound and set up till cured, or till winter, when it is removed to the barn. He gets seven tons of this dry fodder to the acre, and claims that it is worth as much as the best of hay. No one who has fed such food can doubt that its feeding value is not equal to that of good hay. Of course, the fodder must be dry and put up in the best possible condition to be equal to good hay. The immense yield which can be produced from an acre planted to fodder makes it a very valuable crop, especially so where land is high, and the amount of feed which can be obtained from an acre is of more importance than a little extra labor.

Wilkie Collins, the greatest living English novelist, will commence his new serial story in the Minneapolis Sunday Tribune, November 1st, which will be transferred to the Minneapolis Weekly Tribune, and will continue for six months. Any person desirous of reading the same, has only to subscribe for the Weekly Tribune, at One Dollar a year.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultry-men, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support, yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

The Premium Engraving issued by "Peterson's Magazine" for 1886 is of rare excellence and beauty. It is a first-class line and stipple engraving, executed in the highest style of art. The artists are Illman Brothers, and they have engraved it—size, 21 inches by 27—for "Peterson's Magazine," in their best and most brilliant manner. The picture is called "The Angel of Paradise," and is a companion to the "Not Lost, But Gone Before," published by "Peterson's Magazine" some years ago, and which was so popular. In artistic merit, [illegible] we think, one of the finest "Peterson" has ever issued, and will go to every mother's heart, especially if she has lost one of her "darlings." Another of the premiums is the "Forget-Me-Not," an illustrated album, a book of very great beauty. Another is an extra copy of the magazine, etc., etc. You can get any of them gratis, by raising a club for "Peterson" for 1886. This is a rare chance. Specimens of the magazine [illegible] with full particulars, to those wishing to get up clubs. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Wilkie Collins' new story will begin the first day of November and continue six months. It will appear in the Minneapolis Sunday and Weekly Tribune only. Wilkie Collins writes for no other paper in the Northwest. Send for sample copies.

Pete Misgen is altogether too much of a retiring disposition. Meeting our reporter on Saturday near Rapin's, he invited him in and set up the cigars and other delicacies of the season without stint. Upon persistent inquiry as to the cause of this celebration, Pete said simply: "It is a little girl." Further inquiry elicited the fact that it had been ever since Oct. 6th, and Pete had forgotten to mention it.

Rogers' Triple Plate Table Knives, Butter Knives and Tea Spoons are offered as premiums with the Minneapolis Weekly Tribune. Send for sample copies.

Mr. E. T. Eiken, one of the popular firm of Eiken Bro's, of this city, was married on Thursday, Oct. 22d, to Miss Elsie P. Overli, the Rev. A. O. Anderson officiating. The happy couple are now visiting with friends in the city and will shortly go to Houston County on a bridal tour. Upon their return they will occupy the new residence now being fitted for them near Koeppe & Swanson's brick yard. The JOURNAL wishes them a pleasant trip, a safe return and a long and prosperous life.

A legend hanging in the N. Y. Store windows relates "as how" the said store was voted the medal as the most popular store in the city. And yet George and the boys are not proud over it one bit. (Of course they appreciate the compliment but are not too elevated to speak to common folks.)

Mr. and Mrs. Carey, of Ash street, gave a Progressive Euchre Party on Tuesday night last, to the young ladies and gentlemen of the city, in honor of Mr. C. W. Ferson and Mr. L. V. Naut. Four prizes were awarded, two to the lady and gentleman securing the greatest number of points, and two to the lady and gentleman securing the least number, Miss Westler and Mr. Gallasch taking the two highest, and Miss Nellie Mason and Mr. Wheeler the two lowest.

Stanton & Co. will be ready for business about Nov. 15th. The packing house is 40x110, one story high, and is complete in all its appointments. They will be prepared to buy only dressed hogs in the start, but will be ready for everything offered next spring. The establishing of this business in our midst solves the hog problem and will make hog-raising practicable and profitable, as it will make a good market for all of the hogs that can be raised in this county.

No delay. If you want a loan without waiting for eastern parties to pass on your application, apply to Christianson & Melgaard.

Among our advertisements this week we take great pleasure in calling attention to the ad of Mrs. E. E. Bangs, the popular Second street milliner. A visit to her establishment convinces one that who cannot be suited there is hard indeed to suit, for she carries a very large stock of the latest and most fashionable goods in the market, and when you add the fact that her prices are extremely low for the quality you are convinced of the completeness of the establishment in every particular. Her goods and prices are unexcelled in the Northwest.

Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis is one of the best farm papers published. Its veteran editor, Col. John H. Stevens, is a life-long Minnesota farmer, one of the progressive sort, a man well fitted for the position he occupies. (Many of our readers are well and favorably acquainted with his son, Gardner, who is a resident of this city.) The Col. speaks from a ripe experience on farm matters in Minnesota and knows as well, if not better, its requirements, than any other man in the State. The business managers, the Messrs. Owens, are young men of marked ability in their calling and they have taken the side of the farmer in his fight against all monopolies and right heartily are they wielding the club in his defense. While much has been accomplished in this fight, we are not out of the woods yet and we should not lie down upon our arms and sleep until we have accomplished the fullest results possible. The Legislature accomplished good results last winter, but only made a beginning, as we can see by the actions of the monopolists who have been carefully feeling the ground upon which they tread at every step and carefully for the future. There is much yet to be done, and every issue of Farm, Stock and Home contains some valuable hint upon these topics which every farmer should read. Every issue is worth the price of the whole year in this particular alone, if for no other reason. While an uneducated people fall an easy prey to designing monopolists, a reading community is a far different matter. By becoming posted as to the methods employed by monopolies, people are thus enabled to combat them more successfully. We have made arrangements with Farm, Stock and Home, by which we can send it and the JOURNAL to our readers at $1.75 in advance.

PLEDGE.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

Prevention is Better than Cure.

'Tis well for the drunkard there's hope
If but from the drink he will flee;
He need not be sluggish or mope,
For he may be sober and free,
But of this I am certain and very well sure—
Prevention is always much better than cure.

'Tis well for the poor, drunken man,
From the drink he may ever refrain;
But how wise and how good is the plan
To train up the young to abstain;
For still we are certain, and very well sure
Prevention is always much better than cure.

Strange Things.

'Tis strange that men of common sense
Can be so taken in
By drinking at their own expense,
Of whisky, rum and gin,
Which lead to every grave offence,
And every form of sin—
Since there's a shining goal far hence
That all should aim to win.

'Tis strange that men with open eyes
Will go where they must fall;
That men, professing to be wise,
Can stoop to things so small.
The soul to honor sinks and dies,
And sorrow's dark appall,
When there's a path in which to rise,
Inviting to us all!

'Tis strange men choose a path so low,
When they might rise so high!
'Tis strange men buy the cup of woe,
When joy's free glass is nigh!
'Tis strange that men false colors show,
Since all disclaim to lie!
'Tis strange that men can live as though
They never were to die!

'Tis strange that, while light paths lead up,
And dark paths lead us down,
While light will fill the soul with hope,
And darkness hope will drown—
So many will in darkness grope,
Who might enjoy renown,
And, like the world's most favored group,
Wear honor's shining crown.

What the Heathen Think of Us.

For the Pioneer.

In obedience to the command of our blessed Lord to his disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature," the Church is spending more money and putting forth greater effort to convert the heathen than in any age since the days of the Apostles, and the hope is entertained by many that the Millennium is near when all shall know the Lord from the least even unto the greatest, when the lion and the lamb shall lie down together, and none shall hurt or destroy in all His holy mountains. This glorious and long promised time will certainly come, but the greatest hindrance to the success of the Gospel, not only in our own land, but in heathen countries, is the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages.

Mahomet prohibited the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating drinks, and provided laws which are observed among the two hundred and one millions of his followers to this day.

These liquors are also prohibited among the Buddhists, Hindoos and Parsees, their teachers saying the penalties reach beyond the grave. Heathendom, that formerly was at such a long distance from us, is brought to our doors by the use of steam and electricity. What occurs here or there to-day can be printed in both places to-morrow. Besides great numbers of them are in our midst, and many of our own people live with them, and this intercourse is daily increasing.

Among the heathen there are many learned and well-read men, philosophers, who are engaged in examining the various regions of the world; with this chart spread before them, they test the character of each by the fruits they bring forth, by the laws they enact, by the morals they gender, and by the civilization each produces. These close thinkers influence and direct the multitudes there, as such characters do everywhere else.

When our missionary asks such to renounce his religion and adopt his, he will want to know some reason why he should do so. He informs our missionary that he is familiar with our civilization; he reads our papers; he is conversant with the morals of his own countrymen; and has concluded on a careful examination that "your people commit more horrid and heart-rending crimes than are known or practised among us."

Our missionary may reply: "But such crimes are committed under the influence of strong drinks; men become intoxicated, and being so, are morally irresponsible."

The philosopher to this replies: "Your civilization is to blame for this, for your laws encourage lunacy by licensing saloons, which are drunkard-manufacturing establishments, nothing more or less. It is true, we have bad men among us, who commit crimes, but when convicted they are punished. Search our laws and you will find nowhere among the statutes a law establishing or aiding a crime-producing agency. By such laws of yours, the crimes committed through the agency of the saloon your laws established rest upon the whole community sanctioning such laws. We cannot be induced to accept a religion that produces such laws and such a civilization."

Our missionary may reply: "These laws are not enacted by Christians." The reply will be: "They surely are not enacted by Mohammedans or heathen; they must be by Christians."

"It is true what you say, but these law-makers are not Christians in the sense we regard them; or, as they are generally considered in their own lands. They are not members of any orthodox church; they are not converted men."

"But in a Republic like yours, the law-makers are chosen by the whole people."

"True, but the bad out-number the good."

"If that is so," says the philosopher, own land, and seek to change the lives and hearts of your own people, that they may be induced to remove from your statute-books, such scandalous laws. I suppose, however, you have adopted the sentiments of that elegant writer, Mr. Burke, whose works I read with profit and pleasure. He says: 'When bad men combine, the good must associate, else they will fall an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.' Do your good men, ministers, and Christians unite at the polls to elect men of their own choice, who are pledged to erase from your statute-books such laws?"

To this our missionary can truthfully reply, that up to the present time the good and the bad are mixed up to the present time the good and the bad are mixed up and joined to either one of the two great political parties, both of which are equally guilty of these bad laws.

"If this is the fruit of your Christianity, how can I, as a man of principle, accept as true a religion that produces such fruits. I have more complaints against your religion. Your Government not only receives a tax and profit from the manufacture and sale of these beverages, but allows the exportation of these drinks into our own land, where our laws prohibit the sale. We know the power of your Republic, of Great Britain, France and the other Christian nations, all of whom are engaged in this unlawful traffic. We dare not oppose such powers, for your flag protects all your vessels with their crews and cargoes in all seas, and in every harbor they enter. In this way you have forced upon an innocent and unwilling people this fire-water, which has in some instances led our people from the paths of honor and religion, into paths of folly and wickedness. It does appear to us that the curse and vengeance of a just God will be poured upon nations that commit such wholesale crimes, for He has no attribute, whether His character be judged by your or our own writers, that can induce Him to take sides with you in this inhuman war against His own children, whether they be natives of this or your own land.

Winter Reading.

It appears to be a notable fact that the best farmers, and the best stockmen are the very best friends of the newspapers. It is generally the old foggy and the ne'er-do-wells, that scoff at "book and newspaper larnin," and if they are induced to take their home county paper, they never read it. The progressive farmers, those that get 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, and own fine, fat, sleek cattle and horses, are invariably men whose sitting room table will be generously supplied with, not only the local newspapers, but agricultural journals, books relating to stock, to feeding animals, which contain the thoughts and experiments of able men, who devote their time and energies to advance the cause of agriculture and to learn how to produce more abundant crops, as well as to surround their stock with the best conditions for raising them successfully and profitably.

Every farmer in the Northwest will be benefitted greatly by subscribing to one or more good agricultural papers, and if one is published near by it certainly should be a regular visitor in the family.

The Northwestern Farmer, published at Fargo, Dakota, is doing a good work throughout the Northwest, and we have decided to offer it to every old subscriber, as well as to all new subscribers, as a free gift, on the payment of one year's subscription to THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL paid in advance.

Sample copies of The Farmer will be sent free by addressing Edward A. Webb Fargo, Dakota. [26-29]

Hack & Gallasch' Cheap Store is on the corner of Main and Second Streets.

STOP. Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents. Or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.75. [25-tf]

Seely's Exchange.

Notwithstanding times are somewhat slack, Seely's Place still keeps up with the times. The choicest summer drinks always on hand; a nice bowl of soup for lunch, and the best lemonade in the city always on deck. Call and see me, boys. Remember Seely's place, the cosiest little place northwest of Chicago. [11-tf]

Johnston's Journal, an Illustrated Magazine for the people, is the comprehensive title by which the journal formerly called "The Operator" will hereafter be known. The paper was established in 1874, and its success in a limited sphere has encouraged the publisher and editors to make a radical change in its size and style, and transform it into a high-class but low-priced illustrated literary journal of 16 pages, appealing to the general reader. It is promised that in its contents the paper under its new name will aim to combine recreation and amusement with instruction and information—that is to say, while the articles will be short, bright and readable, they at the same time will be of an "informational" character—and that it will be a magazine for the home and the family—pure, clean, wholesome and elevating. It is issued from the same publishing house as are the well known and successful popular scientific journals, Industrial American and The Electrical World. October 3d is the first number under the new name. Published every other Saturday. $1 a year; 5 cents a copy. May be ordered of any newsdealer. W. J. JOHNSTON, publisher, 9 Murray St., New York; 48 Congress St., Boston; 23 Borden Block, Chicago.

For one dollar you can secure the Minneapolis Weekly Tribune and a small fortune in premiums. Send for sample copies and learn all about them.

A THOROUGH MUSICAL EDUCATION.

Parents paying out money to music teachers to have their children instructed in the art of music either as piano, organ or violin players, singers in church or professionally, should know whether the teacher receiving the money is competent to teach vocal or instrumental music, and is thoroughly honest and reliable in all respects. Every parent having a child instructed in music should know whether the teacher is competent or not just as every man going to law should know what kind of a lawyer he is seeking or a patient what kind of a physician he has. It is a well known fact that a child taking lessons from an incompetent music teacher is lost forever to the art of music. All parents who desire to be posted in this subject, should read, each week, the New York Musical Courier. It costs but four dollars per annum, and will save many times that amount if its advice is followed.

Also remember that the Musical Courier posts you on the manner of selecting a piano, organ or violin, and tells you all about the dishonesty in that line of business. Many persons believe that a name on a piano or organ is always that of the manufacturer, but such is not the case, and when you are about to spend $200, $300 or $500 for a piano or organ you ought to be thoroughly posted on the value of pianos and organs generally, and not depend upon an outsider who may or may not make a commission out of you and help to put a worthless instrument into your parlor. By subscribing to the Musical Courier, 25 East Fourteenth St., New York, you can save at least $100 in the purchase of a piano and nearly half as much in the purchase of an organ. After reading that paper for awhile, no one can fool you on that subject.

The Minneapolis Tribune is offering more wonderful premiums with their Weekly than has ever been offered by any other paper in the United States. Send for sample copies.

The October Babyhood gives its usual variety of topics interesting to parents, by its well-known editors, Marion Harland and Dr. Leroy M. Yale, and a corps of able contributors. Among the principal subjects are "The Precocious Baby," "Nursery Cookery," "The Care of Baby's Eyes," "Contagion in Throat Troubles," "Art in the Nursery," "Thoughts on Home Training," "The Diet of Nursing Mothers," "Systematic Weaning," "Autumn Styles for Baby's Wardrobe," etc. A letter from Vienna on Austrian baby matters in general, and another from an American mother in Japan, will be read with interest. 15 cents a number, $1.50 a year. 18 Spruce Street, New York.

Deceptive Frauds.

As soon as it becomes apparent that Moses King, the young publisher, of Harvard square, at Cambridge, Mass., had met an unprecedented success with his book called "Students' Songs"—the sale already reaching nearly fifty thousand copies—several publishers brought out collections of so-called student or college songs. Some of them are legitimate competitors; but some appear so similar in shape, in title, in design or general make-up, as to mislead a casual buyer who may be intending to get a copy of the original "Students' Songs," which was edited by Wm. H. Hills, of the Harvard class of 1880, and published by Moses King of the Harvard class of 1881, the names of both appearing on the title page of the genuine collection only. The success of this collection is due chiefly to the freshness of its sixty copyrighted songs, comprising those jolly and melodious tunes and peculiar phrases which, within the past ten years, have arisen and become generally popular among the students of all American colleges. The low price, too—fifty cents—and the attractive appearance, also, have had their influence in making "Students' Songs" the most successful book of its class ever published in this country.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication October 8th, 1885.]

WHEREAS, DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Helge Olson, mortgagor, to The Trustees of Beloit College, mortgagee, dated the first day of September A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty one, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the first day of September A. D. 1881, at 1:25 o'clock p. m., in book "E" of mortgages, on pages 249 and 250 on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the amount of five hundred and sixty and 68-100 dollars ($560.68) and also twenty-nine and 26-100 dollars ($29.26) paid by said mortgagee for taxes on said mortgaged premises with $2.98 interest from date of payment to the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default and the non-institution of action, the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become and is operative and under the authority in said mortgage contained, the said Trustees of Beloit College elect to declare and claim that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid, is due and payable.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case, made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 21st day of November A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-five at one o'clock in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, including amount paid for taxes with interest thereon and fifty dollars attorney's fees, being the lawful fees for attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit: The southeast quarter (se¼) of Section six (6), Township one hundred and forty-seven (147) north, of Range forty-five (45) west, containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres according to the government survey thereof.

WHICH PARTY IS WORTHY OF THE PEOPLE'S CONFIDENCE.

Toledo Weekly Blade.

The Republican party assumed control of the national government in 1861. Treason had done all it could to destroy the nation, and to break down the power and credit of the government. Business was prostrate, the country not having recovered from the financial crash of 1857, and the low tariff Democratic policy forbidding prosperity to our industries. The treasury was empty, the national credit destroyed, and the war cloud darkening the political sky. No greater task was ever imposed upon a party entering upon national control. Let us look at the twenty-four succeeding years, and see what the Republican party accomplished:

It crushed the greatest rebellion of modern times, and reconstructed the nation. It made the nation supreme, the Union indestructible, and laid in its grave the doctrine of State rights, and the resultant theory that a State could at will recede from the Union.

It blotted out the system of human slavery; it gave freedom to four millions of slaves, and turned these human chattels into citizens of the United States by conferring the right of suffrage upon them.

It adopted the policy of protection to American industries, revived our prostrate manufactures, thus adding untold millions to our wealth and giving occupation to hundreds of thousands of workingmen.

By its enlightened managment of the Nation's affairs, it trippled the wealth of the country, and gave such an impulse to all the factors of growth that in that period our increase in population, in wealth and in power was much more rapid than it had ever been before.

By its policy of protection, and the consequent increase in our manufactures, it extended our foreign commerce so that we sold to other countries, during the years of Republican rule, hundreds of millions of dollars' worth more of our products than had been disposed of during the entire previous history of the country.

By the enlightened policy of the Republican party, our railroad system was extended to the Pacific, and consequently thousands of square miles of the Great West were turned from an unproductive wilderness into the richest farming country the sun ever shone upon, and great and wealthy States now exist which were before sparsely populated territories.

The Republican party gave to the country the most perfect financial system ever devised, and a stable currency, in place of the "wild-cat bank" issue of paper money under Democratic rule.

It raised the national credit to the highest point ever reached. Under Buchanan, an issue of six per cent. bonds went begging at a large discount, while the last issue of bonds under a Republican administration bore only three per cent. interest, and commanded a premium from the start.

It paid off the enormous National debt, contracted in putting down a Democratic rebellion, more rapidly than was ever before done by any Nation, and the period of its entire payment was clearly set down, had the party continued in power.

While reducing the debt at this rapid rate, and raising the National credit to so high a point, it reduced the interest burden from the close of the war from $172,000,000 per year to less than $60,000,000 annually.

It paid in premiums to the boys in blue, during its lease of power, about $1,000,000,000 in cash.

It did more for the country in that twenty-four years than had ever been done by the Democratic party since the days of Jefferson.

It kept every pledge it made the people, and showed itself worthy of the confidence reposed in it in every respect.

This magnificent record was made in the face of the malignant opposition of the Democratic party at every step. Not one measure leading to these magnificent results but was opposed from its inception by the Democratic party.

The Democratic party of the South inaugurated the rebellion.

The Democratic party of the North opposed the war for the preservation of the Union.

It opposed every measure calculated to bring the war to a successful issue.

It denounced Lincoln as a tyrant, and Grant as a butcher.

It, time and again, in State and National platforms, declared that the war was a failure.

It opposed the freeing of the slaves, and fought against the constitutional amendment forever abolishing slavery in the Union.

It opposed the conferring of the right of citizenship and suffrage upon the freedmen.

It opposed, and still opposes, the protection of American industries, and hopes to make this country only a producer of raw material for British manufacturers.

It opposed the greenbacks, but afterward embraced the idea, and endeavored to rush the country to ruin through the issue of uncounted millions of an irredeemable paper currency.

It threw discredit upon the issue of United states bonds, and declared they never could be paid.

It declared the National debt never could be paid; and it fought, and still opposes, the system of revenue by which that payment was rendered possible.

It opposed the National banking system, and the absolutely stable currency that system has given us.

It has stood in the way of the Nation's progress at every step, and has opposed every one of the wise measures of the Republican party.

It has cursed every new move in the line of that advance which made the Nation great, and powerful, and wealthy, under wise Republican rule.

It came into power, not by the suffrage of a free people, but by the suppression of a free ballot and an honest count, and a practical nullification of the most sacred constitutional guarantees, by the Bourbons of the South.

During the period that it has been in power, the blighting effect of its policy has been felt in the Nation. The times were ripe a year ago for a grand revival of business. The result of the November election clouded the future with uncertainty. The Democratic party as feared, its policy doubted, by the business world. Wages went lower than ever. The business prostration was deeper. Several week ago, at the opening of the fall trade, it seemed absolutely certain that the long looked for trade revival must come. The idiotic leaders of the Democracy are prating of free trade, and gabbling of the wild schemes or tariff reduction they will attempt in Congress this winter; and it is this, and nothing else, that delays the rapid revival in manufactures and commerce. The boom is coming, but it is in spite of the Democratic party; and were the administration and the House of Representatives Republican, we would see to-day the entire country moving along in the full sunlight of prosperity, instead of the doubt and uncertainty which still surrounds the situation.

The Democracy, instead of considering grave questions of national policy, have been since Cleveland came into power struggling to obtain office under the government, and cursing the President for his foolishness in supposing that the Democratic party meant anything by its platform utterances in favor of civil service reform.

Our national revenue is decreasing steadily under Democratic rule; and and there is no reason, other than distrust of Democratic Congressional idiocy, for such a state of affairs.

The Democrats made much of the treasury surplus during last year's campaign, and promised that it should be "distributed"—a thing that can only be done by payment of debts, and calling in bonds, but—

There has not been a bond call since the Democracy came into power! Not one dollar has been paid on the bonded debt!

The amount of money in the Treasury is greater than it ever was before, and there is not business sense enough in the present management of the national finances to continue the work of paying the national debt.

It is already announced that the debt will not be extinguished at the time set by the Republicans long ago, and the burden of the debt and its interest is to be prolonged indefinitely.

The United States has been made the laughing stock of foreign nations by the utterly incompetent men sent to represent us abroad—men selected, not for their fitness, but because of their services to the Southern Confederacy men with their political disabilities still unremoved.

Men have been given positions at home who are utterly incompetent and unfit for office—some who are criminals, with indictments hanging over them; men who have no claim upon office other than dirty political work in the Democratic ranks.

And the thing grows worse as time passes on. Will the people take heed of these things, and note them carefully? Ohio has set the seal of her condemnation upon the Democratic party. Let New York, and Pennsylvania, and Virginia follow! The stake is too great, the interests too valuable, for the Democratic party to be continued in power in the nation. It must abandon its old idols, and turn its face to the future instead of the past, before the people will have confidence in it or its professions.

Manipulation of the Wheat Market.

Chicago Tribune.

It is unfortunate that at a time when business in general is in such a hopeful condition and the farmers, who have had to practice so much self-denial for a year or two past, are beginning to buy the comforts of life somewhat freely, the wheat market begins to show the white feather. Nothing else that went up in response to the revival of trade has declined, and nothing else has seriously weakened. Yet it would be hard to name anything that stands in so strong a statictical position as this leading cereal. There is a special reason for the decline in wheat, and it is not difficult to find. There is a large and powerful class of men whose interests call for lower prices. This class is composed of speculators and millers. Bear speculators may always be expected to resort to every device for the depression of the market, and they may be counted out of the present consideration of the subject. They have, however, certain allies who merit a little attention.

It is safe to watch a monopoly any time, and the particular monopoly that needs watching just now is the combination of millers and elevator men in the Northwest. It is charged that the Minneapolis millers and others in league with them are making every effort to depress the wheat market. They are engaged in that very important industry, the manufacture of public opinion. They have newspapers, statistical bureaus and agents of all sorts in their employ, and it is putting the case mildly to say that they do not always adhere rigidly to the truth in their statements.

The Minneapolis millers have announced that they will stop their mills Nov. 1st because it is not profitable to manufacture flour at the present price of wheat. That is prudent if it is done merely as a business matter. It is easy to see, however, that such a step might be taken for the purpose of coercing the farmers into selling their wheat at still lower prices. But they go further. It is customary for the combination controlling the elevators of the Northwest to receive the grain of a farmer at one elevator, give him a ticket for it, and then deliver it out to him when he wants it from an elevator at some other point, if there happens to be none at the elevator in which he stored his product, without charge for transportation. It is claimed that the millers have in some instances used up the wheat thus stored, and that, as they must deliver the property when the tickets are presented, they are practically short of the market. They are therefore doing what other short sellers do—bearing the price. They also circulate the report that the elevators back in the country are full, and that they are in consequence obliged to send the stuff to Duluth. This statement is pronounced by well-informed persons to be false. There are other abuses growing up in connection with this great industry. The lending of wheat receipts, for instance, is common, and the bad practice is increasing.

The farmers have suffered keenly in the last two years from the destructively low price of wheat. This year the crop is small and ought to command a better price. It will be a shame if they are defrauded of what belongs to them by the manipulations of unscrupulous speculators in the markets. The usual elevator rates are a heavy burden and will not be reduced except as a result of competition and perhaps legislation. Any artificial influence that may be brought to bear on them in addition to these should be met with instant exposure, and if possible retaliatory measures. Whatever truth there may be in the charges against the Minneapolis capitalists—and there are certainly some—it is in order to warn the tiller of the soil that the crop is a short one, that the monopoly is rich and selfish, and that they must not be frightened into selling their wheat by manufactured or highly colored reports of increasing supplies.

To Our Readers.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family, weekly newspaper of the first class—such, for instance, as the Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for habitual and careful reading to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly The Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine and review, all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 22 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for 30 cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultrymen, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it, with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

CROOKSTON, MINN., NOVEMBER 5.

'ROUND HOME.

I. U. Jennings has a few more houses and rooms to rent.

The Baptist church is rapidly approaching completion.

Jim Bain, of Fisher, is in town to-day taking in the sights under the escort of E. O. Flanders.

A. E. Flint, of Warren, was in the city on Tuesday and Wednesday on a bit of legal business. He expects to go west soon on a pleasure trip.

Wood for sale, by Hack & Gallasch.

It looks now like a general war in the Northwest was upon us. On Tuesday Geo. Tunnell took a hand in the wheat fight and now the mills must come to it.

As we go to press we hear nothing definite from the voting States of Tuesday. New York will be close, with the odds in favor of the Rebublican ticket.

We see the smiling countenance of Gus Wilder once more in the post office. Postmaster McKinnon could not have procured the services of a more agreeable and competent person for the place.

Herb Mason got over-stocked on Malaga grapes yesterday and he threw them onto the market at 50 cents per basket, weighing from 6 to 7 pounds, and the way they were picked up was a caution.

If you want to buy cheap go to Hack & Gallasch'.

W. H. Jennings took the village schoolma'am, Mr. Churchill, down to Beltrami to shoot ducks and geese last Saturday. They bagged two geese and any number of ducks. Mr. Jennings' share of the spoils amounted to 100 pounds.

Hexon, the postal clerk who was appointed in July last on the run from Crookston to Devils Lake, to take the place of Carey, an "offensive partisan," has resigned his position after a four months trial and one Gallagher, of Grand Forks, appointed.

Charlie Seely is not stuck up because he bought Judge Reynolds' thoroughbred trotter and phaeton, but continues to dish up the soup, oxtail, oyster, beef and every other kind all the same as usual for lunch. Charlie is bound to have a good time if he don't lay up a cent.

$500 to loan on a good farm. No bonus! STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

A number of the friends of Rev. C. E. Page gathered at the Congregational parsonage on Thursday evening last to present the Rev. gentleman and his excellent lady with a gold watch and chain each. The presents were time-ly and elegant and are highly prized by the recipients.

Carlton's Treasury of Universal Knowledge, published by A. G. Nettleton, Chicago, Ill., is before us. We have not had time for a critical examination, but should judge that it is a most useful work—worthy a place in every family. Address the publishers as above.

A valued patron of the JOURNAL, one who has traveled extensively in Norman, Polk, Marshall and Kittson Counties, informs us that the universal sentiment among the farmers is against the convening of the Legislature. He says a rousing remonstrance could be had against it.

Engineer T. E. Adams sent I. U. Jennings a copy of the N. O. Picayune, containing a glowing account of the Engineers' Convention at New Orleans, to which convention Mr. A. was sent as a delegate. We should judge by the account that the boys are having a good time down there.

N. F. Reynolds drives a team from the first car-load of horses that M. R. Brown ever brought to Crookston for sale. The horses are to-day apparently as good as the day Mr. Brown sold them to Mr. Reynolds. MORAL—Patronize home dealers who have a reputation at stake if you want to get a square deal every time.

The little thoroughbred scotch terrier that H. A. Chadwick, the proprietor of the Cleveland House, Winnepeg, sent as a present to Charlie Seely, is thriving and growing finely. He is a fine animal. Mr. Chadwick, we learn, is a great fancier of thoroughbreds of all kinds, especially horses, of which he has as fine specimens as can be found in any stable in the Northwest. He should come down to the States and try conclusions with some of our flyers.

The Crookston Fire Department are getting out cards of invitation, at this office, for their Third Annual Ball, which event transpires on the evening of Thursday, Nov. 26th. The boys are sparing no expense to get up a grand affair and you may rest assured that all of the elements necessary will be on hand. It will be the event of the season and should be generously patronized.

Through the indefatigable efforts of Mr. Filiatrault our citizens will enjoy a rich treat at the Opera House next week when the famous commedian, John Dillon, will appear on Monday night in "State's Attorney," and on Tuesday night in "Confidential Adviser." As nearly all our citizens have heard Dillon it is unnecessary for us to comment further. Reserved seats $1. Admission 75 cents; gallery 50 cents. Tickets for sale at the News Depot on Second street.

A. V. Eastman, of St. Paul was in last week to see how Crookston prospers.

Mr. I. Tharaldson, after a pleasant business trip, returned to Wisconsin last week.

Jacob Aldal was up from his town last week taking in the sights and scenes of the great city.

John Chalmers, of Keystone, was in town Tuesday, looking hale and hearty after his hard summer's work.

Everybody knows John Dillon, the great actor. Don't fail to see him Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Bert Wells and wife came over from Grand Forks last week and have gone out on their claim at Woodside.

We have $1,000, which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus!
[23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

D. Z. Horton was in from the Maple Lake country last week. He says that section beats the county on yield and quality of wheat this year.

General Geo. B. McClellan died suddenly last week of neuralgia of the heart. He had been sick but two weeks and was not considered dangerously so at any time.

Mrs. J. B. Copeland gave a euchre party at her residence on Broadway on Saturday afternoon last. Mrs. George Buckman got the head prize and Miss Blanchard the foot prize.

Hack & Gallasch' Cheap Store is on the corner of Main and Second Streets.

W. S. Taylor, of the Red River Lumber Co., is in sore affliction at the loss of his wife, which sad event occurred on Wednesday morning, the 4th inst., after a long and painful illness.

A. J. Hamery, of Garfield was in to report that wheat in that town will not yield as much as last year but the farmers are better satisfied as they can realize more money out of it.

NO OUTRAGEOUS COMMISSION CHARGED, but we can make you a good loan on good security.
[23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Miss Nellie Walters plays the Quaker maiden to perfection, and indeed all the female parts are well represented, and especially is the case with Mrs. George Walters, who has a saucy, piquant, able-to-take-care-of-herself character, which shows in strong contrast with the quiet, tender, clinging personation of Miss Walters.—[Sioux City Times.

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.
23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

Miller, the Dakota fiend, was worked off in good shape at 1:45 on Friday last. He insisted to the last that Rutherford did the killing. In the absence of more proof this story will be taken with a grain of allowance. The circumstances all pointed to Miller as the criminal and there is nothing save his unsupported word to fasten the crime upon Rutherford or to show his complicity.

Largest stock of Blankets, Quilts and Flannels, at Hack & Gallasch'.

Last Friday the walking was not the best that ever was, owing to a bit of a rain that fell during the morning, and somehow Barber and Edwards got to talking about how quick it was over to Carman and back. Barber thought it was about 30 minutes there and back and Edwards allowed he'd sold too much New Era Graders (the best in the business) to be taken in by any such a "fly" remark and he would risk a goodly bit of filthy lucre, a suit of store clothes, a plug hat or any other man that Marsh just could'nt get right up and get there and back in no 30 minutes that ever existed by the watch. Well, Marsh wasn't going to take the back track for no such dictionary as that or any other that Edwards was able to contribute so a referee was appointed, Star Bashaw was harnessed up and two good men and true got in the buggy to go along to see that Marsh should indulge in no monkey work, and away went Barber, flat footed for Carman and return. Blankets sponges and water were procured to take care of all that came back of Barber, and sure enough in just one second less than 30, back he came covered all over with glory, sweat, mud and one thing and another. He won the bet all the same, and after Johnny Hack had finished swabbing, was as fresh and smiling as though a two mile walk for a greasy day was no very great shakes after all.

Mrs. R. B. Reiley entertained a few of her lady friends on Thursday afternoon last with a game of progressive euchre. Mrs. Alden Brayley carried off the first prize and Miss Blanchard, of Chicago, the second.

When we introduced our thoroughbred Holsteins into Polk County last fall we naturally expected there would be some great calves to blat this year, so the effusion of the Times last week did not surprise us in the least.

It would be well if our committee on the bridge leading to Sampson's Addition would put more force at the work and get it completed. It has proved a great drawback to the mill over the river as well as to the residents in the addition and should have been finished long ago.

A carload of Michigan hand-picked winter apples will arrive for the Second St., News Depot this week. Go and get prices.

Mr. & Mrs. H. G. Proud gave a progressive euchre party to their many friends on Wednesday evening, October 28th. The prizes were carried off by Mrs. Dawley, Mr. David Buchanan, Mrs. Ed. Wile and Mr. H. Kertson. All present enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent.

The wheat buyers at Carman got into a jangle last week which has made a regular picnic for farmers. One house got to putting up the prices until as high as 80 cents has been paid and the price has run from 75 to 80 for several days. How long this will continue we cannot say, but we would like to see the $mark hit before they weaken.

Elsewhere is to be found a notice of another farmer's day for the immediate future. This time it will be held in Crookston, at M. R. Brown's sale stables. Everybody is invited to bring in anything he wants to sell. There will be a great demand for cows and anyone having any to dispose of will do well to bring them along. Come everybody.

Mr. J. O. Milne is completing a large stock barn on Section 8, in Crookston. It is calculated to accommodate from 70 to 75 head of cows and calves and to hold about 60 tons of hay. It is the strongest built and best arranged barn we have seen and we should judge by what he tells us that a farmer can have a comfortable barn for his stock without expending a fortune on it. He is also fixing up his residence in good, comfortable shape for winter.

Col. Cobham Post will give a progressive euchre party on Friday evening November 18th at their hall on Main Street. A general invitation is extended to all friends of the Grand Army. Refreshments will be served. After playing is concluded prizes will be awarded. Game to commence at 8 o'clock sharp. Admission $1.00 a couple. The following committee are appointed on refreshments: Mrs. Louis Fontaine, Mrs. I. U. Jennings, Mrs. C. S. Spendley, Mrs. E. C. Davis, Mrs. J. G. McGrew, Mrs. A. N. Hopkins, Mrs. C. A. Chiniquy and Mrs. Tom Harris. Committee of arrangements, C. A. Chiniquy, W. H. Jenning and A. N. Hopkins.

With its issue of Nov. 1st, Farm, Stock and Home closes its first year, and we are glad to know it has been a successful one for that excellent sheet. When it entered the field last fall there was not one agricultural paper in Minnesota that dare, or did raise a voice to protest against the monopolies that were crushing the life out of the farmers. A few local papers were doing all in their power to create a public sentiment against the gross outrages, but no agricultural sheet came to the rescue until Farm, Stock and Home entered the field. It at once espoused the cause of the farmer in the unequal contest, and in a fearless and independent manner has continued the fight. It counts its readers by the thousands, but it should be in every house in Minnesota, and it would if farmers understood what it is. It is essentially a farmers' paper in every sense of the word, and only costs 50 cents per annum. With the JOURNAL its cost is only 25 cents. Just think of that! Only 25 cents a year for one of the best agricultural papers in the United States. Surely the poorest farmer can afford that small amount. Call at the JOURNAL office and see a copy.

The great commedian John Dillion, in his two best comedys Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week.

The Walters' Comedy Company played the "State's Attorney" at the new opera house, in Oshkosh on the 9th, and turned away crowds of people, who were unable to secure even standing room. Every seat in the house was sold before 7:30 p. m., and standing room was completely sold out before 8 o'clock. This being the case in nearly every city they visit.—[Oshkosh Tribune.

"The fight, that for a space did fail Now trebly thundering swells the gale," or words to that effect. On Tuesday the P. & H. opened out with solid shot and at this writing the mills, being between two fires are on the ragged edge, it being but a question of only a few hours when they must tumble to the situation. If this fight means anything it means that Minneapolis buyers know that there is not as much wheat in this country as usual, they know that very soon it will be in demand and they want to secure every pound of it they can. If this is the true solution the fight will not end before wheat touches the $ mark. Our advice would be to take advantage of this opportunity, sell enough to satisfy present demands and hold the balance for better prices which are sure to come.

Where were the Police?

A tall man and a short man went to war on Second Street, near the depot, on Monday, and enjoyed (?) a free fight for the space of half-an-hour or such a matter. The tall man spent most of the time cruising 'round in the vain effort to find the short man while ever and anon, Banta would "bob up serenely" and present the compliments of the season in the shape of a bat on the nose of the tall individual, which seemed to make the tall man terribly ambitious to discover Banta's whereabouts so as to drop him a line to inform him as to how the battle was raging up in the clouds. He did not seem to find him worth a cent while ever and anon a report would come up from below which kept him posted on the condition of the fight below. All this time, while some 15,000 or 16,000 of our citizens (of the male persuasion) had gathered together, not a sign of the police could be seen anywhere, and if a constable hadn't happened to be handy there would have been no one to keep time. The constable succeeded after awhile in having an amnesty declared and the opposing powers withdrew to settle the differences by arbitration. Don't the city keep a half-dozen policemen with nothing else to do but attend to such things? Or have we got but two with so much else to attend to that they have not time to attend to such things? How is that?

CITY SCALES.

In view of the fact that there has been so much discrimination in the matter of weights of wheat handled in Crookston we believe it would be a good idea for the city to put up a set of scales and appoint some one as weighmaster. These scales to be balanced as often as necessary by some city official, whose decision in all questions arising should be taken as final. We call the attention of the council to this matter.

A Grand Supper.

The Womans' Christian Temperance Union will give a grand supper at the Favorite Skating Rink on Friday evening November 6th, 1885, for the benefit of the free reading room. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Another Big Stock Farm.

For some time, rumors have been afloat that the organization of a company for the purpose of running a big stock farm was in contemplation and that E. M. Walsh and Ole Bang were to compose said company. Interviewing those gentlemen we were told that as soon as they had fully determined to engage in the business and had matured their plans they would tell us all about it. It was only last week that they announced everything in readiness to give to the public and they informed us that they had selected four sections of land, due north from St. Hilaire, and have men engaged in putting up necessary buildings. When these are completed they will commence buying stock. They propose to put in from 400 to 600 young native cows, four Hereford bulls three or four Shorthorn bulls, and two or three Holstein bulls, 300 sheep, a number of mares and a large number of hogs. They will use thoroughbred Poland China ma'es. Their headquarters will be at Crookston. They have engaged the services of a thoroughly competent and experienced stock breeder as foreman on the farm and we shall watch their enterprise with great interest. While, of course every farmer cannot go into stock on this scale, and it would not be advisable if he could, yet it is such ventures as this that will enable him to get into thoroughbred stock in a way suitable and it will not be very long before Polk County farmers will all have a little good paying stock.

State's Attorney.

John Dillon enjoys an extended reputation as a comedian, and his intrinsic value as an attraction cannot be over-estimated. Possessed of all the elements that constitute a first-class comedian, he has won fame and fortune. A large audience greeted him in his new play, which is a domestic drama containing genuine humor and pathos. In the character of Pilgrim Boggs, the irrepressible attorney, which is splendidly adapted to Mr. Dillon's style, of acting, he has made a decided hit, and keeps an audience in one continual roar of laughter. His ridiculous mutilation of common Latin phrases, such as "e pluribus unicorn," "non compos memorandum," and the expression "When I holler it's law," never fail to provoke laughter. He is inimitable, and as long as he remains on the stage his popularity will not wane.

Miss Nellie Walters impersonated the affecting and pathetic role of the Quaker's daughter with such a fidelity and naturalness as to win the unqualified approval of her auditors, and her splendid acting merits the highest commendation. George W. Walters as "Si Strong," the rough, but noble hearted miner, George A. Wilcox as the stern and unrelenting father, and Mrs. G. W. Walters as the village school teacher, were impersonations that deserve nothing but praise. The remaining support is excellent.—[Omaha Herald.

Abraham Lincoln.

Rev. C. E. Page will deliver his excellent lecture on President Lincoln for the benefit of the Baptist Ladies' Society of Carman, in their hall, on Friday evening next, Nov. 6th, at 8 o'clock p. m. Admission 20 cents; children 10 cents. Come and hear it and help the society at the same time.

HOW THEY DO IT.

We are told that Louis Berthiaume sent a load of wheat which he had carefully weighed, to a Carman elevator by his hired man, to sell. He found, when he received his returns, that his load fell short four bushels and eleven pounds. That may be one reason why Carman buyers can pay more per bushel for wheat than any other man.

"WHEN I HOLLER IT'S LAW!"

If any one has been deluded into the belief that John Dillon's popularity in Sioux City was waning, the magnificent audience which greeted him at the Academy last night should be sufficient to dispel the illusion. Dillon has been here many times, but he never appeared to better advantage than he did last night as "Pilgrim Boggs" in "State's Attorney." This play was written by Mr. Scott Marble, especially for Dillon, and while it gives this famous comedian full play in the very lines which he is strongest, it at the same time is strong in other points too. And while wholly different, there is something of a similarity between "State's Attorney" and "Hazel Kirke."

Holstein-Friesians.

On Monday morning the two carloads of Holstein-Friesians spoken of in H. G. Palmer's letter in last issue, passed through the city en-route to H. G Palmer's farm. As far as our reporter was able to judge in the early dawn, they were a fine lot of young cows, heifers and bulls, and will prove a valuable acquisition to the stock interests of the Valley. The JOURNAL became convinced long since that the system of all wheat, which was pursued by our farmers was a ruinous policy and must be abandoned for diversified husbandry and we begin to study up the merit of the different breeds in order to find the one best adapted to the wants of the Valley. After a long and careful research, carefully weighing results, officially reported, we decided that the Holstein-Friesians were the cattle for this country because they combined all of the qualities necessary for the general purpose cow in a greater degree than any other breed. They are very deep milkers, will make a large quantity of butter and are very large, heavy animals, thus rendering them valuable for beef when their milking days are over. They are also especially adapted to this climate. That our views are correct is proved by the action of such experienced men as E. D. Childs & Co. E. M. Walsh, Wm. Box, J. O. Milne, H. G. Palmer and many others in the Northwest who are going largely into Holsteins, and the result is that the Holstein-Friesian, at an early day, will be the leading breed of the Valley. Because the JOURNAL was far-sighted enough to see this, and was fortunate enough to be the first to not only call attention to this choice breed but to bring the first thoroughbred Holstein-Friesian into the Valley, one of our contemporaries has been taken with a spasm of jealousy and tried to belittle the breed and all who advocate them, but the poorest, the meanest, the most viciously ignorant man in Polk County is a king compared with that fellow and what he says or does will not have any weight—cannot in any way injure the cattle nor those who are wise enough to adopt them. There are some fools, like unto the one referred to, who would like to see farmers keep right on raising wheat, and consequently, keep right on until they are too poor to live. The JOURNAL has some interest at stake in the country and believes that the more the farmers thrive the greater will be our prosperity and we shall always, as we ever have, advocate everything that is for the best interest of the farmers of Polk County, whatever addled brained fools may say to the contrary. They will have their little tuppenny butterfly existence and die out, while the Holsteins and their owners will live and thrive in this country long after their revilers are gone and forgotten. Such things as those who revile the efforts of the farmers to better their hard lot by the introduction of a better class of cattle are apologists for the Miller's Monopoly and the extortionate rates of freights and the farmers have little use for them.

The last dispatch received, just as we go to press says that New York has gone Democratic by 30,000. Gosh?

RUM'S CURSE.

Could oceans, rivers, seas and lakes,
And all the names that water takes,
Bneath the expanded sky,
Be turned to ink of blackest hue,
With every drop of morning dew;
With every shrub and every tree,
And every blade of grass we see
Made pens to write withal;
Were every man in every clime
A scribe to use those pens;
Were each Methuselah in age,
And every moment wrote a page—
A book as large could we suppose
As this whole earthly ball—
All would be tired and die,
The pens would every one wear out,
The book be writ within, without,
The ink be drained quite day.

To write the curse of rum: Oh, then,
Angels would fail as well as men—
Archangels e'en would fail—
And until eternity should end,
A long eternity they'd spend,
Nor then have told the tale.

A WOMAN'S BITTER EXPERIENCE.

In every pastor's experience some houses will have sad associations with them. I never could pass one of the houses in the parish without thinking of the pitiful story told me when I first called there to see a poor bed-ridden invalid. She was a woman about forty years of age, although she looked much older. She was emaciated, and her face was dreadfully disfigured with scars all about the forehead and eyes. The other part of her features showed that she had once been a fine-looking woman. She was very weak, and did not expect to live but a little time. Indeed she died a few weeks later. As I sat by her, I remarked that she seemed to be having her full share of earthly suffering. She said, "Sir, it is not possible for a soul in hell to suffer more terribly than I have suffered." I expressed surprise at such language. She repeated the words she had spoken and then insisted on telling me her life, as she said, to show me that I need not be surprised, but might see that she could justly use even stronger language than that.

Slowly and painfully she told me that she was born in the north of Ireland. Her father was a well to-do tenant-farmer. She was the only child. When she was five years old her father died. Two years after her mother married again and then the trouble began. This step-father drank; he would sometimes come home drunk and abuse her mother, and at such times he would be especially hateful to his step-daughter. Matters grew worse until there were two little ones added to the family and the property was all gone, when they came across the ocean to Canada. They went where they were not known and the man threw off all restraint. He was constantly under the dominion of drink. The mother was forced to do whatever she could to get bread for them to eat, and on the slightest protest the father would frequently whip and cruelly abuse this girl while she was compelled to take care of the other children. At one time in the winter when she was twelve years old, as she was doing the washing he struck her so as to make her face bleed, threw the wash-water over her, and then threw her out of the house, keeping her out until her hands and feet were badly frozen. She endured almost everything from him until she was fourteen and then she ran away and found a place as a servant. There she had a good home for five years. At nineteen she married a man who proved to be a sot. She had to supply him. They had two children; they both died. After five years her husband was killed in a drunken brawl.

Three years later she married a man whom she supposed did not drink at all, but she soon found that he was a veritable fiend in his drunken fury. They had been married only a month when he came home and beat her until she was insensible. Repeatedly he would knock her down and trample on her. From his brutality she suffered through six years, when one day he came in to dinner, drunk and ugly as usual. He overturned the table and as she tried to gather up some of the things he caught up a large earthen dish and struck her in the face with it. She knew nothing of what followed until two weeks after, when she found herself in a hospital with her head bandaged up. A neighbor had found her bleeding on the floor, her face all cut up. The man was gone. They took her to the hospital. She had been in delirium. As her face healed it was found that her neck and spine were injured so that she was almost helpless and was almost constantly in excruciating pain, and as she looked up into my face she said: "Now for twelve years I have not been able to sit up at all and I have been free from pain only when the doctor has given me some opiate. I have suffered everything, and I don't believe I could suffer more if I were in hell!" I said, "It was all from the drink." "Yes," she said, "and I always hated it. It is the worst of the devil. He has done his worst with me. I shall be where drink can't hurt me when I am dead."

Then and afterward her thought of dying seemed constantly to be that of going where the curse of drink could not hurt her any more.—[The XVIth Amendment.

Winter Reading.

It appears to be a notable fact that the best farmers, and the best stockmen are the very best friends of the newspapers. It is generally the old foggy and the ne'er-do-wells, that scoff at "book and newspaper larnin," and if they are induced to take their home county paper, they never read it. The progressive farmers, those that get 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, and own fine, fat, sleek cattle and horses, are invariably men whose sitting room table will be generously supplied with, not only the local newspapers, but agricultural journals, books relating to stock, to feeding animals, which contain the thoughts and experiments of able men, who devote their time and energies to advance the cause of agriculture, and to learn how to produce more abundant crops, as well as to surround their stock with the best conditions for raising them successfully and profitably.

Every farmer in the Northwest will be benefitted greatly by subscribing to one or more good agricultural papers, and if one is puplished near by it certainly should be a regular visitor in the family.

The Northwestern Farmer, published at Fargo, Dakota, is doing a good work throughout the Northwest, and we have decided to offer it to every old subscriber, as well as to all new subscribers, as a free gift, on the payment of one year's subscription to The Polk County Journal, paid in advance.

Sample copies of The Farmer will be sent free by addressing Edward A. Webb Fargo, Dakota. [26-29]

STOP. Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents; or we will send it and a copy of the Journal for one year for $1.75. [25-tf]

Seely's Exchange.

Notwithstanding times are somewhat slack, Seely's Place still keeps up with the times. The choicest summer drinks always on hand, a nice bowl of soup for lunch, and the best lemonade in the city always on deck. Call and see me, boys. Remember Seely's place, the cosiest little place northwest of Chicago. [11-tf]

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First Publication October 29th 1885.]

WHEREAS, DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Calice Carlton mortgagor, to The Board of Trustees of Beloit College, mortgagee, dated the 13th day of May A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-two and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 13th day of May A. D. 1882, at 11 o'clock a. m., in book "F" of mortgages, on pages 354 and 355 on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the amount of five hundred and thirty-three and 92-100 dollars, ($533.92-100,) and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default and the non-institution of action, the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become and is operative and under the power of sale in said mortgage contained, the said Board of Trustees of Beloit College elects to declare and claims that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid is due and payable.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 12th day of December A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-five, at one o'clock in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount, which shall then be due on said mortgage with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, and the sums paid by said mortgagee for taxes and interest thereon and fifty dollars attorney's fees, being the lawful fees for attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit: The northwest quarter (nw¼) of Section twenty-four (24,) Township one hundred and fifty (150) north, of Range forty-three (43) west, containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres, according to the United States Government survey thereof.

Winter Dairying.

A majority of the farmers who are now engaged in summer dairying, says R. P. McGlincy, in Hoard's Dairymen, can change to winter dairying, and, by taking proper care of their cows, make twice the money they are now making. Some will say that it costs more money for labor during the winter, but that is more than twice balanced by the value of the manure. Fix up your stable so the manure will not freeze in the coldest weather. This can be done with hay or straw at a little expense. This not only makes the cows comfortable, but makes the milkers comfortable. Milking in a well managed stable is the most pleasant part of winter chores, and what is still better, is the most profitable part.

Look about among your neighbors and see which of them are making the most money out of their business, and we are convinced that it is those who carry on dairying the year around. As managed now, in the north-west, we believe that fully three-fourths of the cows come in in the spring, and are at the flush of milk when dairying products are at their very lowest price. The dairy farmers of Illinois and Wisconsin, that is, those who make a business of dairying, manage their herd so that the larger portion come in in the fall, and it will be found that the cows that net their owners $60 or $70 are the ones that come in in September or October. The former month is preferable when the calves are to be raised, as it gives them a good start before the severe weather sets in and they will thrive and come out in the spring in splendid condition, ready to be turned out in the pasture.

On this subject the United States Dairymen has the following:

A cow that calves in the fall, if decently well taken care of, will not only actually produce more pounds of milk in a year than one that comes in in May, but the milk she does give is worth more per 100 pounds for the reason that dairy products are worth more in the winter than in summer. It has been found by the most intelligent practical dairymen that the calf born in the fall, fairly well wintered and given the vigorous growth that grass food gives the following summer, makes a better cow than the spring-raised one, and she is two years old the right time for the birth of her first calf, besides. The gain all round is found, by those who try it and adhere to it, to be as much as $20 per cow per anum. But for all this, the "general purpose" farmer will not practice winter dairying, but will continue to work cheap, by making the bulk of his production when it is worth the least. Nearly all of those who are now noted as highly successful dairymen, make their business a speciality and are winter dairymen.

Dairy Butter the Best.

To our notion good dairy butter is the best butter that was ever made. But little of it brings as good a price as creamery, and the reason that it is not generally as well made. It is often said that the only difference between creamery and well made dairy butter, is that one is made in the dairy and the other in the creamery. That is not all the difference. Creamery butter suggests to the public good quality, and dairy butter inferior quality. There is great injustice to this unqualified estimate. No doubt of this. But if the dairy has the same facilities for making butter that the creamery has, it will always be just as good, and as a matter of fact much better than a great deal of creamery butter is. Whenever the number of cows warrant it, and all the machinery is secured and properly operated, the butter will be first class.—Western Rural.

Mules on the Farm.

A subscriber says "you have invited us to try mules on the farm. I wish some one acquainted with mules would write something concerning them." As none of the mule's relations can write it, it is well to call on his acquaintances, of which I am one, therefore I write. Now, the advantage of mules over horses are these: They are longer lived, less likely to balk, less liable to disease or unsoundness, will stand rough treatment better, have thicker hides and hair, consequently can stand cold storms better, are less particular about their fare, and will eat weeds and coarse grass that horses would refuse. He is less likely to run away, and if he does run away, don't get scared and kick things to pieces, but follows the road and stops when he thinks he has gone far enough, and is not more likely to run again as if nothing had happened; he takes less grain, but fully as much rough food as a horse, takes less slicking up, as he is only a mule, anyway. This is his good side, and now let us look at his other side. A mule is very apt to be roguish. He will jump fences, throw them down, climb over or crawl through just as he pleases therefore when you turn him in pas- [illegible] ure you have no idea where you will find him. It is owing to how a farmer is situated which kind of a team he wants; if he employs all kind of drivers and has steady work and keeps his team up nights, he wants mules. But if his team is driven by trusty drivers and can run on pasture part of the time, horses are much more convenient.—Farm Journal.

Carleton's Treasury of Universal Knowledge, published by A. G. Nettleton, Chicago, Ill., is before us. We have not had time for a critical examination, but should judge that it is a most useful work—worthy a place in every family. Address the publishers as above.

To Our Readers.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family, weekly newspaper of the first class—such, for instance, as the Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for habitual and careful reading to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly The Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine and review, all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 22 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for 30 cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

THE INDEPENDENT is one of the best papers in the world. Its good points are many and striking. They have only to be stated to be appreciated; and for proof of our claims appeal may be taken to any of the fifty-two issues of the year. ABILITY, VARIETY AND INTEREST.—The great thinkers, the great story-writers, the great poets, men of the highest reputation in all departments of human knowledge, make up its list of contributors. Religion, philosophy, science, literature, art, travels, discoveries, stories, and all conceivable topics are embraced in the contents, and everybody, old or young, learned or unlearned, without regard to sex, employment or condition, will find something of special interest in every issue.

COMPREHENSIVENESS.—It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and a political paper combined.

BREADTH, CANDOR, EARNESTNESS.—The Independent is tied to no denomination; it is the organ of no clique or party in state or church. It is free, therefore, to discuss all questions, and to speak its mind candidly. It is not swerved by fear or favor. All its columns—the advertising as well as the reading—are free from everything of doubtful or objectionable character. No matter what a person's religion, politics, or profession may be, if he desires to keep up with the times and know what the brightest minds are thinking of, the ablest pens are writing about, and what the world at large is doing—he should read The Independent.

'ROUND HOME.

Lovely weather still continues.

A Gilmour was up from Fertile to take in the State land sale.

Brag is a good dog as long as his wind holds out, eh, Roughpelts?

Wood for sale, by Hack & Gallasch.

The Union Temperance lecture will be delivered in the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening.

Tom Box is going to Minneapolis to attend school this winter. He is resting up a few days from a summer's work on the farm.

Roughpelts says as the ladies pet he is solid. Yes, poodles are adopted as pets by the ladies in some cities but we had hoped Crookston would be spared the infliction.

Mrs. George Bucknam has purchased Mr. Netzer's residence on Houston Avenue and will build a fine addition thereto. Intends to have it ready for occupancy by early spring.

"The center one" flatters himself no one knows his pedigree! Vain hope. Every farmer and every experienced man knows that thoroughbreds never have Rough-pelts, but scrubs always do.

Roughpelts has coined a breed already. He talks very learnedly (he can't talk any OTHER WAY (?) easily) about the "Muley Holsteins!" Moley Hoses! What that fellow don't know can't be worth much.

J. W. Slee was in from Warren, last week, contractsng to supply evergreens. His method of setting in winter seems calculated to give the best results. He will employ a crew during the winter getting them out and shipping.

The entertainment given by the Women's Christian Temperance Union was in every respect a success. Net proceeds $105. They extend hearty thanks to all who in any way assisted them, especially the managers of the rink and the band.

Not long since, the Fosston paper gave an account of an accident to Olaf Thomas, who got caught in a tumbling rod to a threshing machine breaking his left arm. A Detroit doctor was called who set the arm, binding it too tightly. Mortification set in with the result that he had to be brought to Crookston to have his arm amputated which operation was performed by Dr. Dunlop and Dr. Van Dyke on Thursday of last week. At last accounts the man was doing as well as could be expected.

Pity that Roughpelts is so modest, otherwise he might, (if he lived long enough) attain to local fame. While he himself admits that he is the "official paper" of North America, and the best paper in the world, and that the Pioneer Press will now have to look to its laurels or its ineffectual light will pale in the glory of the times, yet he is too modest altogether. Of course he is the smartest man ever born into an unappreciative world and he ought to come out and say so frankly.

In a conversation with Inspector Seeley we were informed by that gentleman that he would have no objection to recognizing the validity of the certificates issued by the Minnesota Steam Boiler Insurance Co., providing they are doing business as the Hartford and other companies are. He claims that they are not and that this is the only point at issue. He claims their inspector does not thoroughly inspect these boilers, examine the engineers properly and in fact has no authority to license engineers. We understand that the object of the bill passed by the Legislature was to throw about the business every safeguard possible and that is right as too great care can not be exercised in this important matter, involving as it does, the lives not only of engine-owners, and engineers but also of every farmer who has to employ them, as well as the hired help. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is doubly true in this case for it is impossible to "cure" a man to any remarkable degree after he has been blown into nineteen million fragments by a rickety old boiler that a proper inspection would have shown to be unfit for service. The lives of hundreds of innocent parties demand as near absolute accuracy and safty in this matter as can be had and it is for the common interest to see that this object is accomplished. We cannot afford to sacrifice valuable lives, and to make cripples by the wholesale, to the BUSINESS INTERESTS of a few individuals. What the people want to get at and all they are interested in is the ABSOLUTE FACTS in the case. The whole thing in a nutshell is this: If the State Inspection is too severe let that fact be demonstrated and let it be done away with. If it is the proper method to pursue oblige all insurance companies during business in the State to adopt the system before their certificates can be recognized. The very fact that such a mixed up mess exists shows a radical defect in the system somewhere—a lacking that should be remedied. THE JOURNAL is not and never has been partisan on this question. Our object is to get at the true status of the case if it be possible and the private interests if any set of men does not weigh one straw. We are after system which insures the welfare of the public at large.

Big time to-morrow evening at G. A. R. Hall.

Say, Roughpelts, don't you know that people don't like windy times? Or doncherno.

Union Gospel Temperance Meeting at the Presbytdrian church on Sunday evening next.

Mike Leguee has rented the house owned by J. R. Clements on Third St., and will reside in the city this winter.

Mr. R. Johnson left his seat in the treasurer's office long enough to go over to Ojata to see his folks a bit, returning this week.

The crews for the woods are taking possession of their winter quarters and soon all will be ready for the coming pine campaign.

The hardest man to get up a laugh at Dillon's foolishness was Fred Durand—but then he laughed the hardest when he did get at it.

C. M. Ohl has built a large skating rink at Beltrami, which will afford amusement for the citizens of that thriving village this winter.

Pete Nolan is now running a freight to St. Vincent. Walter Alexander has Pete's old run to Devils Lake with his Sunday lay off at Crookston.

J. B. Holmes, of Minneapolis, accompanied by his son, J. F. of Red Lake Falls were taking in the sale of State lands, in the city last week.

For job printing call at the JOURNAL office. We do not boast that we can beat the world on printing, but we do say that we can do as good work as reasonably as any country office.

It looked like Hack & Gallasch were going into the milling business last week—but they were not. It was only several carloads of genuine York State apples that lined the sidewalk.

Paul Bataglia is building an addition to the residence that he purchased last fall between Third and Fourth Sts., east of the High School building. He will make a neat and nobby residence of it.

At the progressive euchre party at John Cromb's on Friday evening of last week, Mrs. J. G. McGrew and Mr. C. A. Chiniquy won the first prizes and Miss Blanshard and A. Gallasch the second.

County Auditor McGuire informs us that the land sales of last week were the largest ever held in the county. Over $20,000 were received in first payments. This does not look like teetotal destruction.

John N. Ives and Senator Steenerson visited the Saintly city last week. Steenerson was counsel for bulldog Kelley and succeeded in procuring his discharge, but he was immediately re-arrested and will have another trial.

Ed George says that the coffee was a little—just a trifle strong for a temperance organization, but when he intimated as much to one of the lady waiters the defect was remedied so promptly and effectually that he wished he had kept still.

The snowfall of last week has rendered the going so muddy that farmers find it difficult to haul in wheat—if they wanted to. If this continues for a few days you will see wheat climbing up encouragingly. There has been a few loads brought in every day in spite of bad roads.

Fred Boynton, representing the Minnesota Type Foundry Co., was bulldozing the boys on Friday last. That company has eliminated the old fogy element and is now composed all of young men full of vigor and energy who are on deck for anything that happens in their line. We can recommend them.

Geo. B. Winship, editor and proprietor of the Grand Forks Herald was in the city on Thursday last looking up business a little in the way of subscriptions to the daily. His facilities enable him to get all of the latest news ahead of the St. Paul afternoon papers at least 15 hours in advance of those papers.

State Inspector Seeley arrived this week for the purpose of applying the cold water test to the boilers of engines and engineers. In the case of the boilers it may do but in the case of some engineers we should consider it too risky. Some of 'em are not used to the "cold water" test and it would prove too great a strain.

Mrs. V. D. Carruth returned to her home on Friday last and now the blush of pleasure mantles the cheeks of the professor as he pursues the even tenor of his daily walk and conversation. Mrs. Carruth reports having had a delightful visit in old Chenango Co. and looks very much improved in health thereby.

Svendsen, Holmboe & Larson have just got out a fine lot of business cards printed at the JOURNAL office, announcing that they are live business men and inviting their friends to call in at their new store on Robert street. This firm have been doing a good business since they started and they are alive to the best interests of their patrons. Drop in and see them at Miller's old bakery on Main street.

Bray & O'Brien sport a new sign, as well as a new store. It is a daisy and indicates where may be found a live, enterprising firm whose business principle is live and let live. When you see a man who is not too stingy to use printers ink to inform the public where he does business, and that he does business, you can bet on him every time. He is reliable and liberal and a good man to tie to.

Postmaster Kirsch, of Euclid was in the city on Monday.

John McColleugh, the great actor, peacefully passed away at his residence in Philadelphia, on Sunday morning.

Postmaster McKinnon paid his respects to the city of Grand Forks last week. He says he is as fully satisfied with our city as ever.

Miss Nettie Benham, of Devil's Lake was the guest of the family of Conductor J. B. Copeland on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Rev. Page delivered his lecture to a small house in Carman last Friday evening. The weather was to inclement for a crowd—don't like rain.

John Dillon proved a drawing card on Monday night in his great specalty, "Pilgrim Boggs." John Dillon, like good wine, seems to improve with age and his auditors are never disappointed in him.

Dan and Josie Morris Sullivan have written Mr. Filiatrault for dates and will appear on or about Friday evening Nov. 20th. For right-down jolly Irish wit they take the bakery.

We have $1,000 which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus!
[23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The man who never laughs at anything was out to see Dillon on Monday night. We know why he didn't laugh. He don't believe in advertising and he was afraid to laugh least it might attract attention to him.

The new bridge to Sampson's addition may be finished in the dim future. But if proceeded with as of late, the finishing touches may be put on about 1900. Wake up committeemen, and see for yourselves how it is progressing.

We have received a neat card of invitation to the Fireman's ball on Thanksgiving Evening. We feel assured that all who enjoy dancing will have a grand time, as no expense nor pains have been spared to provide it. Everybody should get there.

Rev. T. McCleary will deliver one of his characteristic lectures at the Methodist Church, on Friday evening, subject "That Preacher." No one who has ever heard Mr. McClary will be willing to miss this lecture. No admittance fee will be charged, but a collection will be taken.

Hack & Gallasch' Cheap Store is on the corner of Main and Second Streets.

A. D. Morris, a former fellow-townsmen, but now a thriving jeweler of Devil's Lake, D. T., was in the city last week, on a visit to Tom and his many friends here. We are pleased to note that Dune is doing a big business at His Satanic Majesty's Lake, and is certainly coining the wealth of the realm. May his exchequer never grow less.

$500 to loan on a good farm. No bonus! STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

McKinzie says that the JOURNAL has gone to war with Roughpelts. Oh no, Mac, you're off. We have not declared war at all on HIM! There are some little spotted animals you know, that the worse you stir them up the worse they st—that is, we mean, you know, that it is not best to stir them up because—Oh, you know how it is yourself. You have had experience with it!

The large bell for the public school arrived on Monday, in prime condition. This will supply "a long felt need" and it is confidently said that it is capable of making more sound than the "ladies darling" "pet" Poodle Roughpelts, himself, though this statement is taken with a grain of allowance, by those who know the latter best. However it has one advantage over him, it is not cracked.

It has been circulated through the country that the Roller Mills of Crookston have shut down and have taken their wheat buyers from the street. We are happy to be able to contradict this statement, and to be able to state that both mills have their buyers at work and propose to keep them there, and to take all wheat offered to them. The buyers can always be found on the old corner, near Herb's Branch.

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.

The Grand Forks Daily Herald is one of the best newspapers in the Northwest and as it is now delivered in this city on its day of publication it brings its fresh telegraphic news about 17 hours in advance of the St. Paul and Minneapolis evening papers. The Herald is the paper for the latest news. Its editor, Winship, hates a monopolist like the Devil is said to hate holy water and has done good service in fighting against all monopolists. He is a fearless champion of the rights of the weakest in that fight.

Mr. Al. Talford, one of the employees of the American Express Co., is spending a few days in the city.

Our merchants all seem to be doing a thriving business this fall, judging by the stock of goods daily piled upon the side walks.

Rev. C. E. Page and family, left for Ada last week, where they will reside in the future.

The police ran in several disorderlies on Monday night. They had seven in the cooler all night. Rather crowded for that cheese-box.

Charlie Johnson was in from Rockstad, this week, shaking hands and saying "howdy" with the boys. Charlie reports times flourishing in his vicinity.

What do ye soy? Rain last Friday evening? Faith that's just what happened, and yet some intimate that we live too near the hyperborean regions for any particular use.

The "ladies darling pet" don't seem to like our every-day, practical style one bit. It is too bad "pet," but then this is a practical every-day sort of a world anyhow, and every thing affected is liable to get hurt.

There was more drunken men to be seen on the streets of Crookston on Monday, than at any other time during the past year. We do not know how to account for it, unless it was from the fact they were happy over prices being paid for wheat.

Oh! I guess not. By the way the apples come rolling in by the car load, one would think that Polk County inhabitants need not hunger for their fruit in future. They are so cheap that even the "l. p.," p. r., ought to be able to afford a bar'l.

Collins says that the north side are busy all the week, and don't have time to fight on week days. That accounts for the big fight on North Main Street on Sunday last. No bones broken—not even a policeman killed. That article was scarce as hen's teeth.

It was rumored on the street during the week that Capt. D. S. DeMers of Fisher, had been appointed Register of the Crookston Land Office, to take the place of John Cromb, whose commission has expired, but on tracing up the rumor, it proved premature.

We understand that "the ladies darling" Poodle Roughpelts, has political aspirations. He has not decided yet whether he will run out the postmaster, take one of the Land Office positions, or run for State Senator, Congressman or what. He'd make a better "what" than any thing else.

Don't forget the farmer's auction sale notice of which appears elsewhere in this issue. We learn that a very large and attractive list is prepared, and the sale bids fair to be an immense success. If you have anything to sell don't fail to get there in time. Remember that all articles for sale must be listed with Mr. Brown, as soon as the 18th inst.

Geo. Crocker, formerly of this city, but now a prosperous and happy lumber manufacturer of St. Hilaire, was enjoying life in the city last week. He reports that the company is doing a good business in lumber, and the future prospects are a booming. All who have occasion to deal with Crocker will find him an A. No. 1 man to deal with.

Mr. N. Crawford, was in from Red Lake Falls on Monday and dropped in to set his subscription ahead one year. He says his wheat did not turn out an average yield this year, and is of the opinion that there is lots more of the same kind in the county this fall. The price being good and the wheat being nearly all No. 1 hard the farmers will all do as well, or better, than they did last year.

Ole Bang is getting to be quite a farmer lately. He raised 60 bushels of wheat at a sheriff's sale, for which he paid 55 cents per bushel, and when he went into the market to get suddenly rich on the deal, he could only get 58 cents offered. When our reporter found him, he was considering what he should do with it. He hasn't made up his mind yet, whether he had better hire three or four grist mills to grind it and make it into biscuits for his stock, or hold it several years, until he could get back his purchase money. There is one thing about it however, the experience in handling wheat that Ole gets will be worth all it costs him.

Frank Bivins and family are moving into the city to spend the winter.

Riel did not hang on the 10th. He is respited until the 16th of November.

Our slight snow-fall of last week lasted too quick, and farmers are ploughing again all the same.

The Grand Forks papers compliment Judge Montague very highly on his recent speech in Grand Forks.

J. M. Palmer was down from Angus last week, to try and amuse himself somehow while his better half is away.

Pueblo, Col., Chieftain: Dan Morris Sullivan's impersonation of famous Irish characters is wonderful, and his jigs and clogs are superb, the best ever witnessed.

John Knuppe went to Euclid Tuesday and Angus Wednesday. He reports collections on railroad lands excellent this fall and he is doing an immense business in loaning.

Many of our legal lights are attending the term of court in Norman County. A change of venue has been asked for in the Stuart case, and he will doubtless be tried in Crookston or Detroit.

Pretty soon we shall know something in relation to the Crookston & S. W. railroad. A party left Crookston on Friday for the purpose of securing right of way. They expect to be out two weeks.

Daily News, Chicago: Several characters taken by Mr. Dan Sullivan were really good, and his personation of Shiel was very fine. Josie Morris Sullivan in her Irish character in love and courtship, were well rendered.

Judge and Mrs. Reynolds departed for Callifornia last week. Mrs. Markham will join them at Kansas City, and continue the journey with them. We wish them all a presperous trip, a pleasant time and a safe return.

The lah-de-dah Roughpelts claims to be a "ladies darling" If he has made a mistake and told the truth, it must be for the same reason that the ladies like Rough on rats or bed bug poison—because it is good to kill vermin.

The New York Store sports a new sign. It is in keeping with everything else about the establishment—new, neat and nobby. Geo. Macdonell has shown his ability to rag out in first-class manner and his goods are all first-class and the prices to suit the times. Try the New York Store for bargains.

The ladies supper at the Favorite Rink last Friday evening was a grand success in every particular, netting $105. It was like going up in a balloon to supper, but there were some good looking girls up there, and every body clum. The supper was a success, and was thoroughly enjoyed, and the ladies deserve great credit.

Meeting the Crookston nurseryman, Mr. F. T. Haseltine, with his grip, rushing to catch a train our reporter boned him for an item. "I have but a moment to spare," said he, "but I can say that I am hurried night and day delivering my orders, which far exceed anything we ever saw before, and the business is growing, sir, it is growing rapidly. Just delivered an order of 60,000 trees to E. S. Corser who is more than ever pleased with the fine condition of the goods, and I have only made a commencement on his orders. Yes, our business is all I could ask, but I must go or I'll get left." So saying he "lit out" just in time to make his train.

State Inspector Seely intimated to us rather strongly that it is his impression that THE JOURNAL is coddling Uncle Wallace, the Insurance Company's Inspector. Nothing is further from the truth. The private business of an individual, or set, as against the interest of the public does not and cannot have any weight with us. Mr. Wallace told us some time since that he intended to meet the State Inspector at as early a date as possible and to make arrangements for a test case. Since then he has told us that he did meet the State Inspector at Breckenridge and that he could not accomplish his object. Mr. Wallace told us that his object in this was to show people that the company were working openly and above board and that it had a perfect legal right to conduct its business. Inspector Seely told us on his arrival at Crookston that he had met Inspector Wallace at Breckenridge not long since and that Wallace proposed to make a test case and have the matter legally tested but that he refused to do it. He tells us that his reason for refusing was that as his salary depends upon the number of inspections he makes he necessary! Well, now, it strikes us that in so important a matter, involving as it does the lives and safety of hundreds, the private interests of one individual should not be allowed to weigh. Mr. Seeley may be right in the statement that the Farmers' Insurance Company are not conducting their business properly, but this question will present itself to the average man: "If he is right, and knows he is right, why don't he accept the challenge of the Farmer's Insurance Company to have a test case?" Simply to say that he has not the time to spare is no good answer in view of the importance of the question to the public at large. When he intimated that we were bolstering the old man up we told Mr. Seeley, that to a reasonable extent our columns were free for his use for any statement he was inclined to make. At this writing the offer has not been accepted.

Miss. Blanchard, who has been visiting with her sister Mrs. A. Buchanan, returned to her home in Chicago, yesterday.

Dave Huggard spent some time in the city this week. The Huggard Bros., have rented the Angus farm for five years, and will come to Crookston to live. They have an offer of a residence property in James' addition, which they may purchase.

We clip the following article from the Quill and Press, a spicy little paper published at North Pharsalia, N. Y. which shows that V. D. is not forgotten by his friends in the old home.

"V. D. Carruth, Esq., of Crookston, Minn., will please accept our thanks for POLK COUNTY JOURNAL. Mr. Carruth formerly resided at East Pharsalia and was there a successful teacher. Some 20 years ago he moved to Minn., and engaged in teaching. He is now county superintendent of schools for Polk county, Minn. He has a host of friends in this town, who will be pleased to learn of his success in the far west."

Old Roughpelts has opened his mouth and put his foot in it again—as usual. This is how he comes back at us in his Saturday's issue. He says:

"The Holstein bull AT THE SOUTH end is m-a-a-d. He shuts his eyes, bellows, and tears all around the calf pen! Whoa—there bossy. Everybody knows YOU'RE only a grade, and a muley at that!"

That is to say that everybody DON'T know that the center one and the one on the north end is. Then why didn't you keep your mouth shut and PERHAPS (?) they might not have found it out! What did you want to give it away for you old blunderbuss!

Geo. H. Thomas Lodge, Sons of Veterans, was organized on the evening of Nov. 6th.

The following officers were duly elected:

The number of the Post has not been announced as we go to press.

We don't Understand It.

There is nothing malicious about us—we always treat everybody with due respect and give the devil his due, but somehow, every DARN FOOL who has started a paper in Crookston straightway pitches into us as soon as he gets his press set up and running. We don't understand why this is thusly, but it is the solemn fact all the same, and yet, we are not wholly cast down, nor destroyed.

While we hear many complaints of hard times, poor crops, low wages, and all that, in eastern and southern states, there is far less of it here than one would suppose, and as yet farmers have sold but little of their wheat. The fact of the matter is that money, which in times past it has been almost impossible to obtain, is easier to get than ever before and at very moderate rates of interest, and farmers who do not wish to sell have arranged for what money they want for incidental expenses and are holding their wheat until it reaches the $ mark. That it will reach that point seems inevitable and there are those who predict it will go beyond it. We have no reason to complain in this country in view of what other localities in the U.S. have to contend against. We believe that we have entered upon an era of unexampled prosperity such as we never before saw, and if all who are in debt will make good use of the lessons of the past, and use proper economy and care they will be all right. We suffer some evils that must be corrected, arising from the wheat monopoly and excessive railroad freights, and when these things are done away with, which they certainly will be, we shall then have one of the best countries in the world. We have the soil and climate and as soon as we have the conveniences for handling our products that other countries enjoy, we shall be solid. Railroad competition is sadly needed and should the time ever come when we can secure this desideratum we should not allow a false idea of economy to prevent our going deep into our pockets, if need be, to secure a competing line of road.

And the Police Got There.

The boys don't want to be too presuming. On Monday a high old fight on Main Street ended with one of the belligerent parties going with Dowling to the cooler.

Boiler Inspection by State Inspector Seeley.

Mr. Seeley writes to an Ada paper, explaining the method of his inspection, but the article shows that it was intended against my inspection. Like all others who write upon a subject they know nothing about, they simply "give themselves away." He says that our State law was taken from the United States inspection law, with such changes as were needed for local conditions. This is blunder No. 1, and shows his ignorance of the whole business; all he cares for the law is to get into a fat office, with good pay and little to do. The great majority of boilers in the State of Minnesota are threshing boilers which differ in more ways than one from steamboat boiler iron. I cannot, in this short article, give all the details, but will take one point in the law to show how much he knows about "local changes." The law is very plain that all boilers must have a safety plug four inches over the heating surface. As the average threshing boiler has only eight inches altogether, and to comply with the law would, practically, stop threshing by steam, and this would leave the wheat in the fields and bankrupt the State. Are they not a nice set to have a law passed that they could not, or dare not, put into practice? Blunder No. 2. State Boiler Inspector Seeley says the test is really a double test, viz: "hammer test and water test." Now, there is nothing that shows up a man's ignorance of a boiler more than to go hammering over a boiler with a hammer to find blisters. If there is a blister in the iron the fire will bring it out; until then it is all right. When it begins to show the eye will see it. I will cut this short by giving an extract from an article by Geo. Marshall, in the American Machinist, of Feb. 10th, 1884. He says: "In some cases the Inspectors were appointed through the influence they possessed, and not through any knowledge that they had of a steam boiler. Some of the Inspectors admitted they could not tell the difference between the locomotive type of boiler and horizontal. The water test which they applied was not the best way to determine the safety of a boiler." Again he says: "The hammer test is not of itself entirely to be depended upon. Not every man knows the sound caused by a blister, or whether the plate covered with sediment will give the same sound as a solid plate. An educated eye and ear and experience are the guides and qualities necessary to test a boiler, yet how few possess them." How does that strike you, Mr. Seeley? Just think of it, when you are putting on airs on the prairie with your hammer and squirt-gun, but I am not done with you yet. Here is another from the same source: "Some builders make their vertical boilers with the grain of the iron lengthwise. I am pleased to say this is rarely done. A boiler constructed in this manner should be considered unsafe and dangerous, as the fibre of the iron is injured by bending and the frequent expansion and contraction which necessarily takes place in heating and cooling of the boiler imperceptibly increases the first injury." This is what I claim may take place by putting a cold water pressure on the threshing boiler that were not intended to bear such a strain. I have much more from this same Mr. Geo. Marshall which I will give some other time. As Mr. Seeley has endeavored to throw a slur on my inspection, I will say that I feel that I have done all right, and as I claim to be a practical boiler maker and manufacturer, I have the proof, whereas Mr. Seeley has none, and has not claimed to have any. I will close this article with a few words from that practical journal of mechanics, the American Machinist. It says: "There seems to be a growing opinion that in some of the books published on the subjects connected with various trades and occupations, information will be found that will supersede the old-fashioned way of attaining skill and proficiency, and this opinion is doing harm. Books are of value to none more than mechanics, but no one would be quite so foolish as to jump into water 40 feet deep because he had read all that has been written on the art of swimming." Well, that is just what they are doing on the State boiler inspection.

JOHN WALLACE,
Inspector of Boilers for the Steam Threshers of the State of Minnesota.

Elsewhere will be found the prospectus of the Duluth Evening Herald, one of the best dailies published in the Northwest. The patronage its columns show gives evidence that the Duluthians are a wide-awake, progressive people in every enterprise that helps so much to build up a city as does a newspaper. The Herald is ably conducted and merits the success it has attained. We have a pointer for the good people of Duluth, that we wish to offer right here and now. While, by her natural position Duluth is bound to be a great city—can't help it if she would and don't want to if she could—yet a large proportion of her success depends upon this Red River Valley. The granaries of our farmers would make of Duluth the most important city in the State if Duluth had ready access to those granaries. Two important enterprises have been broached that would accomplish this end. One, the building of an independent line of railroad right through the Valley, should be encouraged by Duluth with all the money and influence she could bring to bear upon it, and the other (and by far the most important) the one by which her great waterway system would be connected with the great water route of the Northwest. If Duluth would take hold of this project, put money into it, and secure the balance of the capital necessary to complete and equip it, the result would be that capitalists would put money into the developing of her magnificent water-power and she could grind every bushel of our surplus wheat right there at Duluth, thus making her the most important milling city in the world for no other is so near the best wheat fields in the world. Duluth is a fine young city but she might be a giant by improving her opportunities.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for December is received, surpassing in beauty even what we had expected. It contains two costly steel-engravings; a mammoth colored steel fashion-plate; a superb colored pattern, such as would sell at retail for fifty cents; and more than half a hundred wood cuts of fashions, embroidery, etc. Only the immense circulation of "Peterson" can explain how this can be afforded. The literary contents are even better than usual. Mrs. Ann S. Stephens finishes her powerful novelet, that has awakened so much interest during the year. Professor Boutelle contributes a story so intensely exciting, that it might have been written by the late Hugh Conway himself. Besides these there are numerous other first-class tales and other articles, some of them charmingly illustrated. This number ends the volume. Great improvements for 1886 are promised, though "Peterson" seems to us already as nearly perfect as a lady's-book can be. Every woman ought to take it. It is exceedingly cheap: only Two Dollars a year. Great deductions are made, moreover, to clubs, with costly premiums for getting up clubs: among others, an extra copy to a person getting up a club of four and sending us $6.50: now is the time to get up clubs. Specimens are sent free gratis, if written for in good faith. Address, CHARLES J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PLEDGE.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

"OLD SMITH."

"Now, Willie Nelson, I just want you to understand that even if you should live to be as old as Methuselah, you are never to touch a drop of intoxicating liquor, from sweet cider up, or maybe I should say down, and you've signed the pledge, 'paregorically speaking,' and the next Band of Hope meeting you'll sign it in dead earnest, and you'll keep it too, 'from the sole of your head to the crown of your foot.'"

"Amen!" said an earnest voice behind him, causing Willie to start from his soliloquy, and exclaim: "Why, mother, I didn't mean you to hear that, but I was just giving your son a temperance lecture, and he is going to sign the pledge and reform. He never drank anything but sweet cider, you know, but I guess its easier to reform when one has only been drinking sweet cider, than to wait till one gets to something stronger, isn't it?"

"It certainly is, my son, but what served for a text to your temperance lecture, or in other words, what set you to thinking of it just now, and so earnestly declaring your intention?"

"Oh, it was only 'Old Smith' in a new role; he just went by here, and it set me thinking that I didn't want to have anything to do with the simplest kind of a drink that could turn a man into such a creature—I won't say beast, for that would be too hard on the dumb animals. Talk about a man who takes too much to his glasses making a great spectacle of himself, I should think he did! If Yankee ingenuity could only invent some way for a man to be sober just once while he saw himself drunk, I believe it would cure the worst case. 'Old Smith' had evidently been either dead-drunk or fast-asleep, and the boys had blackened his face all over with stove-blacking, and polished it up till it shone like your range. He didn't seem to mind it one bit either, but just staggered along, trying hard to stand up straight; I am doubtful if he even knew it at all. He was going home too. Whew! I just wonder what his wife said to him."

"I can satisfy your curiosity on both points, Willie, for I was just in to engage Mrs. Smith to wash for me tomorrow, and when her husband came in she hurriedly advised him to go and wash his face, almost hoping, it seemed, to get him out of the room before I had noticed just what was the matter; but it was all spoiled by Smith straightening himself to the best of his ability and remarking. 'I'd (hic) have you know (hic) that I'm proud of that face.' It seems that whoever had done it had also made him think that it was a kind of extra touch to his manly beauty, and he could not think of washing it off."

"Perhaps, mother, he thinks it is a kind of reward for all the money he has spent for liquor. It is but a few years since he was the owner of several houses, and his wife rode in her carriage, I am told; and now he staggers along the streets so drunk that he is proud of having his face polished with stove-blacking, while his wife goes out washing to support the family. Anyhow it has cured me; I was holding off a little on the cider question, you know. I could not see that the little alcohol there was in sweet cider could do any harm; but I have made up my mind that the worst habit, or even the biggest sin in the world, was once so small that it didn't seem to amount to anything. It is just like the weeds in the garden; when they are little, baby weeds, one can kill a hundred of them with one stroke of the hoe, and think nothing of it; but let them have a chance to grow first, and then one wants, as Charles Dudley Warner says, 'A cast-iron back with a hinge in it to get one of them out of the ground.' And so I am going to sign the first pledge I can lay hold of, even if it is an anti-profanity, anti-tobacco, iron-clad temperance one; the more weeds I can kill with one stroke of the hoe the better, and if any of them haven't sprouted yet, then they'll never get a chance, that's all."

Before subscribing for an agricultural paper consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents; or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.75. [25-tf]

A Bonanza to Every Farmer.

We offer a premium which will prove a bonanza to every farmer who excepts our offer. Farm, Stock and Home is a Minnesota institution, adapted to our soil and climate, edited by a life long Minnesota farmer and a paper that is invaluable to every progressive farmer. We have made such arrangments as will enable us to give every subscriber of THE JOURNAL a copy of this valuable agricultural paper

FREE FOR ONE YEAR.

This offer must be accepted before January 1st 1886. If you wish to secure lots of reading matter for the coming year, subscribe for THE JOURNAL and Farm, Stock and Home at just the price of THE JOURNAL.

Wm. Davidson, manager of the Keystone farm, was in from Euclid on Thursday last, and as he last winter tried the experiment of diversified husbandry, we thought an opinion from him would prove of interest and value to THE JOURNAL readers. Mr. Davidson [illegible] purchased early last year 86 cows and a thoroughbred short horn bull. This summer, from April 1st, he has made over 2,000 pounds of butter, besides raising 84 calves. The calves were sold at $15 per head for the round lot to one bidder at the Keystone sale this last fall. This makes an average of 55 pounds and a fraction, but when the fact is taken into consideration tha nearly every cow raised a fine calf that sold for $15 the result of the experiment must be very satisfactory to Mr. Davidson, especially as the calves were only natives. Mr. D. intends to go to Illinois this winter for a carload of grade Norman mares and a Percheron stallion. He will try the experiment of winter breeding of colts which, with proper care we believe will be found successful. We shall watch this experiment with deep interest, for it is a system that THE JOURNAL has urged our farmers to try, and is, we believe, the first one yet attempted in the Northwest. Mr. D. says wheat on Keystone is not an average this year. They only have 60,000 bushels for sale where they ought to have had 95,000; several sections were almost wholly destroyed by hail and the hot, wet weather damaged the balance badly, reducing the average to a minimum yield.

Bathgate Sentinel: Crookston has lately had opened a large hog packing establishment which is to take all that can be offered. This is an industry that is as yet in its infancy, but which will in time be one of the leading ones of the Valley, or we are no prophet.

If you don't get your sample copy of Farm, Stock and Home within ten days after you receive this copy of THE JOURNAL notify us at THE JOURNAL office either in person or by postal and you will receive a copy of it promptly.

C. E. Foote, the writer of the following letter to the Grand Forks Herald was connected with the Moorhead News during the wheat agitation of two years ago, and was then very conservative on the question, thinking that perhaps the statements which were then made of the rapacity of the Millers Association were a trifle overdone. This fall he has had some experience as a buyer at Duluth, and has had his eyes opened a bit. Here is what he says:

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 11, 1885.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Since your letter of last week was written, your correspondent has spent some days in Minneapolis, and has had an opportunity of ascertaining, to some extent, how the manipulations of the wheat market by the Minneapolis Miller's Association were conducted. Of course it goes without saying that the Minneapolis and St. Paul papers are practically controlled by that association which in itself is an immense leverage. In this way they control to a very great extent, the local northwestern sentiment in regard for prospects in prices. If there is war news in Europe, that news can be so worked by these newspapers, if it is desirable to do so, that the least possible attention may be given it, and that it may cut the least possible figure in the workings of the market. They can report the immense number of cars received. They can report the blockades of freight trains loaded with wheat. They can give or suppress various items of interest which has a tendency to affect the market the wrong way. So it will be seen that the control of the Minneapolis and St. Paul papers must have a considerable effect upon the market. The members of the millers association almost to a man protest that they do not speculate, still the fact remains that some banks in Minneapolis refuse to give any credit to the large number of these same millers. Those banks are opposed to speculation on principle, and will not do business with men whom they know to be doing business on speculation. They have therefore shut off the millers as a dangerous class. Then there are other facts which make it look as though the millers were not strictly honest in their declaration that they do not speculate. It is alleged that one firm in Duluth has made somewhere in the vicinity of a quarter of a million of dollars handling the deals of C. A. Pillsbury alone. Of course I have no evidence of that fact, but everything points towards it as being correct. The firm spoken of is rich and powerful, and from the heavy trading it does, is apparently backed up by some heavy firm. And while there may be no evidence that that heavy firm is C. A. Pillsbury & Co., yet everything points that way.

Mr. Pillsbury told me that he was not interested in the price of wheat, except as to the grain he requires to run in his own mills. At the same time it is a fact,—Mr. Highland, general manager of the Miller's Association, admitted it—that the late tremendous increase in the visible supply was accomplished by the simultaneous sending in of large quantities of wheat from large country elevators, for which the farmers hold receipts, great portion of the wheat not yet being sold.

It has been reported very generally, that the millers were losing money on the flour they were manufacturing at the present prices of wheat. On being informed that the statement was current, Mr. Pillsburry asked your correspondent if the public were a set of d—n fools, to suppose that they would run their mills at a loss. Of course your correspondent was not a public censor, and had no idea.

Further, I have it from good authority that Mr. Pillsburry is about 800,000 bushels long in Chicago wheat. After selling the market as low as possible, the association evidently turned around and bought long to a very great extent, and then made an effort to put up prices again. They advanced wheat two cents, and the fact was telegraphed to Chicago, but it seems that Chicago has grown tired of northwestern manipulation, and the Chicago market did not heed the two cents a bushel that the Millers had advanced. This is a nail in the coffin of the Miller's association and remains for the farmers to drive more. I do not know how much long wheat Mr. Pillsbury has in Duluth to add to the amount he has in Chicago, but I may assume that from the general position of the market here that he has considerable. The market here is very dull and quiet, and there is little trading here for the simple reason that a few heavy dealers do not permit this market to follow values in other markets, prefering to hold it up and make it look to Chicago and other markets as if it were very strong. It is hard work to either buy or sell wheat here now. It is exceedingly nervous, and a comparatively slight amount of business—buying or selling, will affect it very greatly, though it will only be permitted to depress about so much, when the firm supposed to be the agents of the Miller's association step in and control it for all it is worth.

C. H. FOOTE.

ROUND HOME.

Some of the boys do be gettin' great fun skating on the river these nights. Be a little careful, boys; don't be to venturesome and drop somebody's life into the rolling.

What there is left of H. M. Pierce (after being called all to pieces by "That Daily") will soon be transported into winter quarters in that elegant new residence on Houston Avenue.

We shall this week send a copy of the JOURNAL to many who are not regular subscribers. We have also made arrangements to have a sample copy of Farm Stock and Home sent to each one. Look them over and if you consider them both worth $1.50 send in your order.

Presiding Elder McCleary delivered his lecture on "That Preacher" at the M. E. Church on Friday evening last to a delighted audience. If we were to speak right out in meetin' and fling in our testimony, we should say that "that preacher" is a brick and we are not particular which one you think we mean either.

State Inspector Seeley licensed Jas. E. Morrisey as chief engineer, (the highest grade certificate that can be given.) The appointment is a worthy one. He also issued several other certificates to other parties as engineers. While here he inspected among other boilers, the flouring mill, foundry, brewery and Walker & Son's planing mill boilers.

Max Ericsson has put in a few well bound volumes which he calls his circulating library. They are intended to beguile many a weary hour for the lonely traveler, conjuring up more visions of wealth and happiness than were ever hinted at in "Arabian Nights" or any fairy tale. There are some volumes on spiritualism which believers in that creed will find up to the age in every particular—seances and all. [illegible]

We must have gilt-edge security and real farmer borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission. [23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

C. A. Seeley, the State Inspector explains his reasons at length elsewhere in this issue. The article will be read with interest by all farmers who are seeking light upon the vexed question. In commenting upon our last week's article he informed us that, if the Steam Threshing Insurance Company were inspecting boilers where they issue their certificates, he should not hesitate to accept their inspection as valid—the same as any other insurance company.

We have $1,000 which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus! [23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Roughpals does great credit to his real nature and offers a gratuitous insult to every one of his few readers in the little rebus which he says a friend tells him is well known in the Anglo Saxon. The dirty scurrilous fool evidently thinks his readers are incapable of understanding the rebus. He's a lovely specimen. He who exultingly boasts of being "solid with the ladies." What can be his opinion of the character of ladies who would countenance such vile language as that. It can not be very exalted, truly. He has attempted to read us a lecture as to how a newspaper should be conducted and his little rebus shows [illegible]

A party just in from the Thirteen Towns gives THE JOURNAL the particulars of a double suicide that occured in the town of Knute near the residence of Chas. Churchill on Union Lake. He says that on the fifth inst. a man named August Healand was building a stable within a short distance of a neighbor. Mr. Healand left for the purpose, it was supposed, of going to cut a stick of timber. Not returning as soon as it was thought he should the man who was assisting him followed his track in the snow until he came to his dead body swinging from the limb of a tree. His cries soon brought Mr. Churchill and [illegible] to the spot who cut down the remains of the unfortunate man. The sad affair so affected his wife that she became insane and although kind friends did all in their power to watch and care for her she succeeded in committing suicide a few days later by cutting her throat and jumping into a well. They leave a family of six small children, the youngest being but 11 days old at the time of the death of its father. No cause for his act has been assigned.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, Executive Department.

In obedience to law and custom I do hereby set apart and appoint Thursday, the 26th day of the present month, as a day of Solemn and Public Thanksgiving to Almighty God, for His continued blessings and mercies. The people of Minnesota have been led onward through another season in substantial prosperity and happiness. Peace and order have prevailed. General healthfulness has continued and labor has obtained employment and its meed. Abundant harvests have rewarded the care of the husbandman. The violence of the elements has been tempered and pestilence averted from the people and their flocks and herds. Our material interests have been prosecuted with success and our hearts concern in and support of the great agencies of moral and social amelioration have been maintained.

Wherefore, I recommend and exhort the people of the State that on the day aforesaid, laying aside their ordinary avocations, and assembling in their usual places of worship and around their sacred firesides they celebrate in joyfulness of heart, with fitting words and ceremonies, the praise of our Father of mercies, the giver of every good.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, at the Capitol, in St. Paul, this seventh day of November, A. D. 1885.

L. F. HUBBARD.

By the Governor:

FRED VON BAUMBACH,

Secretary of State.

FARMERS' ALLIANCES.

The long evenings of winter are at hand and farmers will have plenty of time for reading, visiting and all such things which are as a rule impracticable during the rush of the summer's work. It is also a capital time to attend the meetings of the Farmers' Alliance an organization which now exists pretty generally throughout the State and which should exist in every township. These farmers' meetings where they have been kept up, have proved of incalculable benefit, being the direct means by which ways have been devised for the bettering of the condition of the farming community. To this cause, more than to any other may be attributed the improved facilities for handling our wheat, which is this fall enjoyed and yet the work in this direction is but just commenced and very much yet remains to be done. The rapacity of the Minneapolis Millers Association is but simply checked—not crushed out as it should and must be and if we now tamely sit down and accept things as they are these monopolists will consider that we are satisfied with matters as they exist and will redouble their efforts to bind the chains still tighter. If one farmer in every town should write to our Congressmen and Representatives in the Legislature that might have some weight, but if every farmer in the town should speak through their town Alliance against the giant monopolies that are sapping our life blood, their united voices would not fail of the most respectful attention and some way would be devised to furnish the desired relief, for are not the farmers in the majority, and what public official would dare oppose their wishes when thus expressed? The advantages to be derived from an Alliance are too many for the scope of one short newspaper article and they are too obvious to need discussion in a live, wide-awake community. All that is needed is for those directly interested to act upon the matter at once and form an alliance where there is none, and the winter season is the most propitious for organizing.

People's Convention at Ada.

ADA, MINN., Nov. 13, 1885.

EDITOR JOURNAL: A convention to take into consideration the opening of the White Earth Indian Reservation, has been called by the Ada City Council to take place in this city on December 1st. All cities and villages in the vicinity of the Reservation are invited to send seven delegates, said delegates to be appointed by the city or village board. It is hoped that your city will be represented in the convention.

A scheme is now on foot to concentrate all the Indians in Northern Minnesota on White Earth, and prompt measures must be taken or the fine agricultural lands on the Reservation will forever be closed to development. The concentration of the Indians on White Earth would be a calamity to Northwestern Minnesota, while the opening of the Reservation would be decidedly beneficial.

A. H. BAKER, City Recorder. S. R. CRAGIN, President City Council.

BOILER INSPECTION.

Letter from State Inspector Seeley.

Editor Polk County Journal:

Your paper of last week was so prolific in articles concerning State boiler inspection, that I ask room for a statement which would have been offered before had I correctly understood your date of publication. The great point seems to be whether or not the water test is an injurious one. That it is not is proven by the universal use of this method by all countries having supervision over steam boilers, whether marine or land. To be specific, I would say that the United States, Canadian, English, French and German governments use this test in their inspection of marine and other boilers. It is a common practice to insert a clause in the specifications for new boilers, calling for water test, and it is the practice among PRACTICAL boiler makers to test their boilers by this method before they are delivered. This is to show the universality of the use of the water test. In Minnesota since the law went into effect, many hundreds of boilers of all sizes, kinds and conditions have been tested by this method and there has not been an explosion in any district nor in the State, so far as I know, this year, as against a large number in former years. If the test gave a dangerous strain, would we not be followed by explosions all over the State? The law may have some errors, but the intentions are good, and no man can say that our work has been improperly done or discourtesy used. The reason for the water test and the excess of pressure used above the allowed steam pressure is simply because there is no other way of testing the strength of boilers of irregular shapes, worn, corroded and weakened as they may be in inaccessible parts. The strength of a new boiler may be calculated by knowing the tensile strength, thickness and size by well known formulas provided no law of design or arrangement is violated; but with use a boiler grows weaker and to keep on the safe side it is necessary to test the boiler to a pressure in excess of that allowed. If the boiler safely stands the test pressure [illegible] tinued breakage occurs. Now take the tensile strength of the average iron used in thresher boilers at 50,000 pounds to the sectional square inch. That iron can be strained from 35,000 to 45,000 pounds before taking a permanent set or, in other words, the elastic limit is not passed. Now, taking into consideration that our formula for safe boiler pressure calls for one-sixth of the tensile strength, or 8,333 pounds when 50,000 iron is used, it can be readily seen that nearly five sixths of the strength of the iron is used for a margin between the safe pressure and the bursting pressure. I say nearly five-sixths, as there are some deductions to be made by reason of the riveting, but it is practically near that. Now add 50 per cent. to the allowed steam pressure for the test pressure and how near do we get to the elastic limit? We have yet more than one-half of the strength for a margin. Mr. Wallace's use of Geo. Marshall's words does not prove anything against the water test, as he takes so improperly constructed a boiler for an example of how a boiler may be weakened, and plainly says that the weakening is done by heating and cooling in actual service, the truth being that a water test is the only method of determining whether that weakening has gone on to a dangerous point or not. Our test has been misrepresented in many ways. Some understand that the test pressure is 165 pounds in all cases. In reality we give a test pressure 50 pounds in excess of the allowed steam pressure. There is nothing in the law calling for COLD water. We test hot boilers with hot water and have no objection to an owner warming up a cold boiler. After a boiler has been tested by water and the hammer, the safety valve is set by us and the steam gauge corrected by our standard gauge, if found wrong, which is generally the case, as a cheap class of gauges are generally used on threshers, and exposed as they are to all weathers, we seldom find them correct. As the safety valve is generally set by the steam gauge, it is very essential that the latter should be correct. Mr. Wallace claims to have done his work aright, but I claim it is impossible to properly inspect boilers unless the strength and condition of the iron is ascertained and the safety valve and steam gauge correctly adjusted. Unless all of these necessary conditions are fulfilled the inspection is incomplete and void. He quotes some portions of an article I wrote for an Ada paper and uses abuse for argument, and does not touch the gist of the article for want of either courage or ability. He is the first that has hinted a doubt of my ability to perform my duties. He does so by quoting Mr. Marshall again, but it is possible that that gentleman was alluding to inspectors of the Wallace stamp. He misconstrues the law in his last article in a surprisingly foolish way. It says nothing about the safety plug being four, or any other specific number of inches above the heating surface, and he need not fear "bankrupting the State," if he would read the law aright, and I assure him that many boilers have fully complied with the law and still did a good fall's work. His claim of our use of the hammer being in ignorance is entirely offset by his quotation of Mr. Marshall when he says "not every man knows the sound caused by a blister," from which we infer that Mr. Marshall knows, even if Mr. Wallace does not, that a blister will produce a sound differing from that of solid iron. If the inspector must sit down and wait for a blister to develop until it gets to a dangerous point, there would be little use for inspectors. I am not surprised at Mr. Wallace's statement, as it is on a par with his inspections as I have found them. As a "give away," as he is pleased to call it, I regard his last production as complete. I have wandered somewhat from my text, but if any boiler owner wishes any further information on any point herein contained it will be gladly furnished. My P. O. address is Duluth. I wish to say that the fee for boiler inspection is $5; for engineers license $1. No engineers are exempt from the law except those in the employ of railroads. I have written more than I at first intended, but as it is my last, as well as my first communication, owing to my limited leisure, I hope you will excuse the length and give me the benefit of a full hearing. Yours sincerely,

C. A. SEELEY,

State Boiler Inspector, District of Duluth.

Farmers' Advocate: There are already several quite extensive stock farms in Polk County, this State, and now we see by THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL that E. M. Walsh and Ole Bang propose engaging in the business on a large scale. They have selected four sections of land, north from St. Hilaire for their farm, upon which the necessary buildings are now being constructed. They propose to put in from 400 to 600 young native cows, four Hereford bulls, three or four Shorthorn bulls and two or three Holstein bulls, three hundred sheep, a number of mares for breeding to draft stallions and a large number of hogs, using Poland China males. This is a big undertaking and we shall watch its progress with interest; that it will be a success, if rightly managed, we believe. The selections in the male line are all good, but care must be exercised to keep up their vigor and purity as the years pass by.

To Our Readers.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family weekly newspaper of the first class—such, for instance, as the Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for habitual and careful reading to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly The Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine and review all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 22 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for 30 cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00. Address THE INDEPENDENT, 251 Broadway, New York City.

CROOKSTON, MINN., NOV. 19.

Changed his Boarding Place.

On Thursday night of last week, upon retiring, Andy Stephens left orders for a fire to be built in his room at an early hour in the morning. When the porter went in to make the fire about five o'clock, he saw a fellow meandering around the room, but thinking him to be Stephens bunk mate did not offer any remarks, built his fire and went out. Shortly thereafter, the night clerk stepped in to see if the fire had been built as per order, and seeing the chap suspected that everything was not all right, and began to question him. During the confab Andy awoke and on searching his pockets missed his watch together with sundry keys, knife, etc. Meanwhile Mr. man had started, but was followed to his room by the clerk and Mr. Stephens, and the missing wealth was recovered. In the morning Mr. Carroll, learning of the event secured the arrest of the light-fingered party, who was straightway called upon the magistrate, who remarked "$25 or thirty days." As the party seemed to have more of the latter about his clothes than of the former, he chose to change his boarding house, from the Commercial to the hotel de-Hanson, on the hill. He had registered at the Commercial as H. C. Harris, Fargo.

We propose to give our readers a benefit this fall and in giving them a copy of Farm, Stock and Home we are making them a valuable present.

A number of our patrons were induced through THE JOURNAL to subscribe for Farm, Stock and Home last year. Most of them have renewed with us again this year and we have yet to see the man who does not like the paper. If you fail to get a copy call at this office and get one, or drop us a postal and one will be sent you.

The JOURNAL will club with the following papers at the prices named below:

The JOURNAL and
Farm, Stock and Home	$1.50
Weekly Pioneer Press	2.30
American Agriculturist	2.50
Northwestern Farmer and Breeder	1.75
Breeders' Gazette	3.50
The Independent	4.00
Toledo Blade	2.40
Farmers' Advocate	$2.50

The prices quoted above are for both the JOURNAL and the paper named and are strictly cash prices from which there can be no deviation. All in arrears can obtain any of the above papers, or all, at clubbing rates by paying up arrears and one year in advance.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultry-men, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support, yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.75.

Winter Reading.

It appears to be a notable fact that the best farmers and the best stockmen are the very best friends of the newspapers. It is generally the old foggy and the ne'er-do-wells that scoff at "book and newspaper farmin," and if they are induced to take their home county paper, they never read it. The progressive farmers, those that get 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, and own fine, fat, sleek cattle and horses, are invariably men whose sitting room table will be generously supplied with not only the local newspapers, but agricultural journals, books relating to stock, to feeding animals, which contain the thoughts and experiments of able men who devote their time and energies to advance the cause of agriculture and to learn how to produce more abundant crops, as well as to surround their stock with the best conditions for raising them successfully and profitably.

Every farmer in the Northwest will be benefitted greatly by subscribing to one or more good agricultural papers, and if one is published near by his own family should be a regular visitor in the family. [illegible] The Northwestern Farmer, published at Fargo, Dakota, is doing [illegible]

To all who are in arrears to THE JOURNAL on subscription we make this offer: If you will pay up the old score and one year in advance we will accept payment at the rate of $1.50 in Polk Co., $1.65 outside of Polk Co., and present you with a copy of Farm, Stock and Home, the best agricultural paper published in Minnesota. JOURNAL readers will all get a sample copy in a few days.

Communicated.

HI-HO MR. EDITOR:—How-de? I've just woke up. I went to sleep after the refusal of the people of Polk County to build that hotel for me at St. Hilaire. I concluded that there wasn't any use trying to help the public, and I hadn't any other occupation but that of a public benefactor, and as there was no other public benefactor in the market with whom to dispute the right to the honor, or to be jealous of. I thought I would take a good long nap. I probably should be asleep now but for a fearful bad dream I had, that awoke me. Ever since my association with our old time friend Earnest Buse dreams have had a significence to me that only those who have sat at the feet of the illustrious Earnest can appreciate. Having learned from him the true method of interpreting dreams, this dream fills me with alarm. I dreamed that at the earnest request of some of the wealthiest and best citizens of Crookston and Carman and with the money they furnished me I had built a large saw mill for myself, to enable me to work up the logs growing on my pine land, to the end that I might be able to sell lumber to the farmers at cost. I had perfected a plan by which I could sell lumber at $15 per thousand, my plan was this: Surrounding my tract of pine are vast stretches of pine lands belonging to the people. Now if it cost me $5 per thousand feet to put my logs in the boom including the value of the timber on the stump, by cutting as many logs on the land owned by the people as I had cut on my own land it reached the cost of the whole lot to $2.50, see, for of course the people would never think of making me pay for the logs I cut on their land if they get the lumber for $15 per thousand and this would enable me to sell it at that price and leave me $12.50 per thousand to pay running expenses. In my dream everything was lovely and the goose hung high, the people were receiving great benefit, a host of men were exchanging their brain and brawn for my round dollars. I was getting back all the money I had put out with a small increase of about seven hundred per cent. and at the same time maintaining my reputation as a great, good, generous and philanthropic man. I had also conceived the idea of showing to the people of the valley that they would be further benefited by paying me $25 per thousand for lumber, and the argument I proposed to make use of was that by paying me that amount they would have the satisfaction of sustaining a home enterprise, and besides that I was ready to assure the people that I would keep the money at home, (yes that's the safest place to keep money,) but of course it is not necessary to explain that the home that I have in my mind is my pocket. As I said I had just got all these things to running nicely, when some one-horse mill owners in a hamlet way down on Lake Superior and in a place on the Mississippi came into this valley with their lumber and offered to sell the same grade for less money delivered. Good heavens the cold chills run up my back now when I think of how that information affected me in my sleep, the whole train of events likely to follow the happening of such a calamity flashed through my mind. I saw myself divested of my dearly loved reputation as a public benefactor. I saw those who had always stood with uncovered heads when in my presence gazing upon me with mute admiration, now pass me by the same as they would any common man. This and other things not the least of which was the probability that the $12.50 per thousand for sawing my logs would be cut down by the necessity of reducing the price of lumber, with no possibility of mending the matter by an increase of the cut of logs on the people's land, for now that the people had begun to get their eyes open they were not fully satisfied that I was doing them so great a favor by cutting their timber and selling them the lumber at $15 per thousand, and some hinted that I had better go slow. All of these possibilities passes through my mind with such vividness that in great agony I awoke and found that it was only a dream. Of course it was a great relief to find that it was not a horrid reality, but according to the rules of interpretation as mentioned before, this dream portends disaster to someone. It can't be to me. I don't own any saw mill or pine land, if I did and the said mill was almost a free gift of the people I don't think, hardened though I am, that I have the gall to talk about the duty of the donors to pay me $10 per thousand more than they can buy the same grade in some other market, even if that market should happen to be in some other part of the State, and I should pledge myself to keep my money at home.

Yours Truly,

UNCLE JOSH.

A Bonanza to Every Farmer.

We offer a premium which will prove a bonanza to every farmer who accepts our offer. Farm, Stock and Home is a Minnesota institution, adapted to our soil and climate, edited by a life long Minnesota farmer and a paper that is invaluable to every progressive farmer. We have made such arrangments as will enable us to give every subscriber of THE JOURNAL a copy of this valuable agricultural paper.

FREE FOR ONE YEAR.

This offer must be accepted before January 1st 1886. If you wish to secure lots of reading matter for the coming year subscribe for THE JOURNAL and Farm, Stock and Home at just the price of THE JOURNAL.

A Farm and Household Necessity.

In these days of intelligence and wide reading few men enter into any class of business without a laudable desire to know what others have done and are doing in the same line. Hence it is hat the physician, the lawyer, the minister, the politician, the tradesman and the mechanic as well as other professions and callings all have their mediums of communication. The same is also true of the farmer, the dairymen, the stockman, the horticulturist and other allied interests of the farm. To meet this desire on the part of the farmer, some twenty-three years ago THE WESTERN RURAL was founded. It has been conducted by a practical farmer almost from its inception, and has grown in power and influence until to-day it stands at the head of the agricultural press of America. Its editor and proprietor was the prime mover and organizer of the National Farmers' Alliance, which has become a power in the reform agitation of the present day and in time must be of inestimable value to the farming classes. It is the acknowledged champion of the farmer's rights, and as such is the uncompromising enemy of monopolies of every form. So great also has been its service in denouncing the adulteration of food and food products, as well as exposing frauds and swindling schemes in whatever phase presented, that in many homes throughout the country it has really become a household and farm necessity. THE WESTERN RURAL AND AMERICAN STOCKMAN in its enlarged form is not a class journal in the strict sense, as its twenty departments cover the entire field of literature, as related to both practical and scientific agriculture. Many say its veterinary department alone is worth more than double the price of one year's subscription. It is a large sixteen page paper, full of elevating and entertaining matter pertaining to the household and farm, and is just such a paper as ought to be in the home of every farmer in the land. The subscription price is $1.65 per year (or $1.50 in clubs.) Write to Milton George, 157 Dearborn street, Chicago, for a free sample copy.

HOLSTEIN-FRIESIANS.

Meeting of the Holstein-Fresian Breeder's Association in Chicago—Discussion of the Merits of Various Breeds of Cattle.

Chicago Special Telegram, Nov. 16.—The Holstein-Fresian Breeders association held a special meeting this afternoon at the Grand Pacific hotel. M. L. Sweet of Grand Rapids, Mich., presided, and Edgar Huidekoper, Meadville, Pa., was secretary. S. Hoxie of Whiteslawn, N. Y., read a paper on Holstein breeding. Lucian Prince of Worcester, Mass., said that Boston was now receiving 65 per cent of her dressed beef from the West, and they were particular anxious to get good beef. They did not desire any more of those long horn prairie cattle. L. G. Yeoman of Wayne county, N. Y., said:

The Holstein-Friesian was chiefly noted for its milk and butter qualities; the breed was far ahead of fatted cattle. His cattle averaged twenty pounds of butter per week for twenty head. He had one cow that made 804 pounds of butter in ninety days. This was Aggie II, who had the champion record.

Judson Smith, Syracuse, N. Y., was of the opinion that a complete record should be kept and a competition had with other breeds. J. W. Stilwell, Troy, Ohio, gave his experience with Holsteins for beef cattle. They were not beaten, and he claimed that they could down and smother all other breeds in milk and butter. H. J. Lightner of Iowa gave his experience in feeding nineteen head of cattle, six head of which were Holsteins. The result of the year showed that the Holstein steers were the hardest and heaviest of the lot. Mr. Barney of Hampton, Iowa, was of the opinion that the Holstein would cut up to as good an advantage as any other breed. Dexter Sever of Leland, Ill., had fed some Holstein grades and they brought as much in the market as any other kind. He was satisfied that while they were not made especially for beef they would make as good beef as any breed in the world. Mr. Dale of Pa., said that in the common every-day slaughtering it was found that the Holsteins made a better grade of beef than many others.

Greed of Cows.

It is hardly necessary to tell any one that the domestic cow is a great feeder, and that this is especially true of cows that are great milkers. The appetite of domestic animals are largely what years of feeding for certain ends has made them, and they may, therefore, be regarded as a measure abnormal. This is shown clearly enough by the great milk and butter tests which have shown that cows can be systematically overfed up to a point where death soon follows. This being the case, it is necessary in feeding cows, to be careful that feed of a stimulating, concentrated character be administered regularly and judiciously. The over indulgence which a cow will practice at times, when allowed unrestricted access to grain or apples, is usually due not only to the greatly developed appetite induced by an abnormally active udder, but far more to a want of regularity in feeding and the neglect of the feeder to meet the demands of such an appetite as they develop. With proper feeding cows can be trained to take care of themselves with any kind of food before them. Even with apples, than which no kind of food is more dangerous to cows when indulged in to excess, this statement holds good, and when properly trained, being fed at first moderately and the quantity gradually increased, they seem to measure the quantity their stomachs can manage, and may be as safely trusted in the orchard as any other animal. In the case of bovines, the trouble arises from the unnatural distension of the rumen by habitually overcrowding it with coarse food in an effort to appease the appetite induced by any great strain upon the system. Thus stretched, it will hold more of a concentrated food than the animal can digest before fermentation becomes active enough to be injurious. It may be stated here that fed judiciously, apples are a healthful, safe and an excellent milk-producing food.—(National Live Stock Journal.

A Point in Stock Raising.

The conclusions which a stockraiser draws from conditions affecting his business must, if he contribute to his profit be direct and profitable. His is not a calling which will permit a liberal indulgence in the far-fetched and fanciful. There is a straight road from certain causes to certain ends, and it will not do to fool along in certain unexplored paths. If good wool is wanted, the direct way to produce it, is to buy, breed, and raise sheep whose wool is the kind desired, not try to convert the bearers of mean fleeces into bearers of a choice article. If extra draught strength in a horse is wanted, it must be secured in draught blood, not in attempting to harden the muscles and increase the weight and momentum of the graceful thoroughbred.

There is no use wasting time and money in trying to do something that can not be done, or trying to adapt one thing to something else, to which it is altogether unsuited. There is a sufficient variety of breeds to furnish any speciality which one may desire, without attempting to turn a breed well adapted to other purposes in a direction in which it will not go and was never intended to go. Certain breeds of cattle run to milk, others butter and others to beef—each excelling in its line. In these days the man who fires his charge into the air without effect has no one to blame but himself. Times and business conditions are full of pointers for guiding his aim. Breeders and stock raisers need not be without well defined purpose and positive results. With his judgment trained by study and reflection, every industrious stock raiser should succeed.—(National Stockman.

STOP. Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents, or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.50. [25-tf]

One cup of Hack & Gallasch May Flower tea calls for another.

$2,000 to loan on terms to suit the borrower. Inquire "C" JOURNAL office.

To be buoyant, bright and lively, drink only Hack & Gallasch May Flower tea.

Red Lake Falls will enjoy a big Thanksgiving ball at Kretzschmar's Hall to-night.

Friday and Saturday of last week were remarkably fine, warm days for November.

To-night the grand Fireman's Ball at the opera house comes off. There will be a big time.

Thanksgiving Day to-day—"Hurrah for the fun. Is the pudding done? Hurrah for Thanksgiving Day!"

Our thanks are due those who have, during the week called to settle up that little subscription. Such substantial tokens of regard are highly appreciated by us.

We congratulate Hack & Gallasch upon the name "May Fower Tea," which they have given their brand. It is a title suggestive of the fresh and buoyant for which this tea is famous.

Wm. Jackson, who claims to have been private secretary to Louis Riel, gave a lecture at Ericsson's Hall on Saturday evening. The hall was full and the lecture listened to with wrapt attention.

Mr. Frank Robar's son, Joseph, has gone to St. Paul for the winter. He expects to help build the ice palace. This is his first outing since he came to this country and he is enjoying it immensely.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wyand have returned from Hudson, Wis., where they went to attend the funeral services of Dr. Hoyt, Mrs. Wyand's father. The doctor was one of the oldest and best physicians in that State.

Mr. Thomas, the young man whose arm was so successfully amputated a short time since by Dr. Dunlop and Dr. Van Dyke, is, under the excellent care of Dr. Dunlop, doing nicely. He is able to be about the house and has been out around, a little.

Elsewhere appears the prospectus of the St. Paul Globe. The Globe is too well known as a newspaper to need comment but we must say that it appears to be more energetic than ever and is rapidly taking a front seat as a wideawake newspaper. Baring its politics we are prepared to endorse it highly.

Koeppe & Swanson are making great preparations for brick-making the coming spring. They intend to more than double any former effort they have made and be enabled to furnish first-class brick in any quality desired. They have made a good reputation for their brick, and will doubtless do well.

The famous Holstein cow Echo, died a few weeks since, after giving birth to three bull calves. Her owner, T. C. Stevens, of Attica, New York, had refused $25,000 for her a short time previous. Her yearly yield of milk was one of the most remarkable on record being 23,775½ pounds, nearly 3,000 gallons.

The New York Lyceum Theater Co. will appear at the Opera House on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week. They will open out Friday evening in "Fanchon." On Saturday evening the "Lights o' London." This company has been playing to good houses. Tickets now on sale at the Second St. News Depot.

"That's on Grover William" remarked C. C. Utzinger on Tuesday. G. W. is a new arrival at the house of Utzinger and owes his name to the mistake of the people last fall at the polls. However he is a fine young lad, all the same and it is hoped will outgrow it and in time be as good a Republican as his father is a Democrat. "Ho!"

At the last stock show in Chicago, last week, the Herefords rather got away with every other breed, receiving the most premiums and winning sweepstakes without end. The Herefords, since their introduction to America have steadily gained ground until the "Lordly Shorthorns," have been compelled to look well to their laurels.

We received a sack of onions from Uncle Damon Dodge on Tuesday that beats all our experience in onions in this or any other country. They were all large fine fellows, almost as big as pumpkins and one has only to see them to appreciate the value of this country as a vegetable producer. Uncle Damon always will have the very best of everything in vegetables.

P. O. Strand, of King dropped in on Tuesday to say howdy and order the JOURNAL sent to his address. He is engaged in mercantile pursuits and derives much pleasure and profit thereby. He reports the outlook in the Thirteen Towns very favorable—all they need being a railroad to fill up the cup of their prosperity to the brim. They do need a railroad and we hope and believe they will get one.

Horace B. Claflin, the great New York merchant is dead.

James Russell of Fisher is in town spending the day with friends.

The turkey shoot on Wednesday was a "big thing on ice," and well patronized.

O. T. Eikon, of Farmer, Houston Co., is visiting with his brothers and sister in the city for a fortnight.

The banks and post-office are observing Thanksgiving Day. The post-office will only be open from 11 to 12.

The new bell for the school house now swings to and fro in its proper place, raised by Harris and Glenn.

Chas. H. Clarke, who was for so long time secretary of Bill King's great exposition died at his residence Friday morning of last week, of paralysis.

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.

[23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

Dan and Josie Morris-Sullivan presented their "Mirror of Ireland" to full houses on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week. They do not seem to grow stale with age.

Governor Hubbard and Springer Harbaugh were in the city last week. The Governor visited the Harbaugh farms in this county and expressed his pleasure of what he saw of Polk County and her people.

Mr. Smith, the new Register is one of the staunch kind of old-time Democrats—the kind that believe in principles. It is said that he will make a worthy successor to Mr. Cromb and that is paying him a very high compliment.

$500 to loan on a good farm. No bonus! STEENERSON & McMANUS.

The Mayor has issued a proclamation declaring that all saloons, regardless of race, color, or previous condition, must be closed promptly at 11 o'clock p. m. and must also be hermitically sealed all day Sunday. Take due and timely notice and govern your-selves accordingly.

Alden Braley stepped into the "Board of Trade" for a good smoke last Friday. He had just been shaving a customer and still had his razor in his hand. While waiting on Mr. Braley, Barney Feran in some way met the razor blade cutting a severe gash in his hand. He is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

NO OUTRAGEOUS COMMISSION CHARGED, but we can make you a good loan on good security.

[23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

President Cleveland has appointed Wm. E. Smith, of Red Lake Falls, as Register in place of John Cromb, whose time expired in October. Mr. Cromb retires with the good opinion of all who knew him. He is said to be one of the best officials ever holding that office, and that opinion is shared by Democrats as well as Republicans.

We have $1,000 which we wish to loan on an improved quarter or half section of land. No bonus!

[23-32] STEENERSON & McMANUS.

The New York Lyceum Comedy Co. is as good a company of its class as travels. You will find no actors in it equal to a McCullough or a Booth, but you will find some very fine actors and it does not cost you a small fortune to go and enjoy a pleasant evening, as it would to hear any of the great guns. It is well worth the price of admission. Fanchon has been presented here before, but the Lights o' London is new for us.

Mr. A. Boddy, the Ayrshire breeder of Liberty, dropped in on Tuesday to say "ho dy" and report progress. He says the Ayrshire herd is going into winter quarters in excellent shape and thinks they are the boss animal for the dairy farmer. There is to be formed at once a farmers' alliance. The charter has been sent for and all arrangements made to organize upon its arrival. This is just what should be done in every town in the county and doubtless will be in time. There is to be a large cheese factory built next spring all of which shows that that portion of the county is inhabited by an enterprising set of farmers who intend to live in this country and make money in their profession too. We predict that they will meet with the success that their energy deserves and shall watch their progress with interest.

The Farmers' Auction.

The farmers' auction sale on Thursday last was not overly crowded and but a comparatively small amount of property changed hands. If these events were properly appreciated we think they would prove of greater benefit to the community. Mr. Brown, some time ago, informed us that he intended to try to establish a "Farmer's Day," in this city. The object being to have one day per season on which farmers could bring in what stuff they wished to dispose of and, after they had swapped about among themselves until they were tired they would, for a nominal commission mount the block and dispose of the balance at auction. Owing to the high license fee demanded by the city this was found to be impracticable, until it was discovered that the ordinance was defective and inoperative. Before this was discovered one sale had been held in Carman, which was fairly well attended and showed that the plan was a good one. The next one, last Thursday, while it was not as well attended as it should have been, shows no reason why the plan should be abandoned. We are positive, that should the original plan be adhered to these events would become of very great importance, not only to the county but also to the city and it would be good policy on the part of the city council to encourage them as far as possible. They will be continued either here or in Carman and if not here it will be the fault of the city.

The Twelfth Annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associans of Minnesota, in conjunction with Associations from Dakota, will convene at St. Paul, in the Central Presbyterian Church, Thursday evening, Dec. 3rd, at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. J. H. Brookes, D.D., of St. Louis, will make the opening address. The sessions of the Convention will continue through Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Some of the prominent Association workers in the country will partake in the exercises.

Railroads will return delegates at one fifth fare, and the St. Paul Association will entertain all delegates who give early notice of their expectation to attend the Convention. The number of delegates from Associations is not limited, and Christain young men from places where organizations have not been perfected will be cordially welcomed.

Those who contemplate attending the Convention should at once send their names to Rev. H. F. Williams, State Secretary Young Men's Christain Associations, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

A Surprise.

On Wednesday the 18th inst. when Mr. G. W. Lewis went home to tea he was surprised to find a host of his neighbors and friends who had dropped in to see him on his 70th birthday and wish him many happy returns. After an evening of social enjoyment they departed leaving many valuable presents as mementos of the event.

The council, at their meeting on Tuesday evening accepted the new bridge to Sampson's Addition, and drafted an ordinance regulating auctioneer's licenses.

HURRAH! HURRAH!

The only thing that was needed to make Crookston a city. The undersigned has opened up a second hand store in the old restaurant building on Main St., just two doors south of Clement's store, where he will buy and sell second hand goods of all kinds. He will also have a repair shop in connection. It will be known as the City Auction Store, sign of the Red flag! Give me a call when in need of anything in my line and I will guarantee you satisfaction. Respectfully,

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication November 26th, 1885.]

WHEREAS, DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by William Berkholtz, mortgagor, to The Beloit Savings Bank, mortgagee, dated the 18th day of July, A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-two and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 15th day of July A. D. 1882, at 4:20 o'clock p. m., in book "F" of mortgages, on pages 605, 606 and 607, on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice the amount of four hundred and three dollars and thirty-five cents, ($403.35), and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. By reason of such default, and the non-institution of action, the power to sell the property described in said mortgage has become and is operative, and under the authority, in said mortgage contained, the said mortgagee elects to declare and claims that the whole sum secured by said mortgage and now unpaid is due and payable.

Now, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on Friday the 8th day of January A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-six at one o'clock in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, the sums paid by said mortgagee for taxes and interest thereon and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, the lawful fees in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit: The south half (s½) of the southeast quarter (se¼) and the northwest quarter (nw¼) of the southeast quarter (se¼) of Section fourteen (14,) Township one hundred and fifty-two (152) north, of Range forty-six (46) west, containing one hundred and twenty (120) acres according to the Government survey thereof.

A Great Free Seed Distribution.

We are in receipt of a sample copy of the Farm Field and Stockman, a well known agricultural and family journal, and learn from its columns that it has recently been purchased by Gen. C. H. Howard and Jas. W. Wilson, who will conduct it hereafter under the firm name of The Howard & Wilson Publishing Co., at 89 Randolph street, Chicago. These gentlemen are both journalists of large experience, as well as practical farmers, and well qualified to conduct the Farm, Field and Stockman successfully, and make it one of the brightest and best of its class. It is to be published weekly, beginning Dec 1st. It contains sixteen pages, neatly printed and bound. It is to be conducted strictly in the interest of the class who read it—the farmers, with whom its publishers are in full sympathy. In other words, it is to be an honest organ of farmers and champion of farmer's rights.

Mr. Wilson of the firm, is also an experienced seedsman, and the free distribution to its readers of choice new varieties of seed potatoes, seed grain and seeds, of which they have a large supply on hand, gathered from different parts of the country and Europe, will be a leading feature. Those who subscribe this year will get twenty packets, in addition to fifty-two numbers of the paper. The subscription price is $1.50 a year, including the seeds. For further particulars address the above firm for free sample copy and premium list.

We will furnish the Farm, Field and Stockman, and its seed distribution in club with this Journal for $3.00.

MISS WILLARD'S SPEECH.

Her Annual Address Before the W. C. T. U. at Philadelphia.

The following is the substance of the annual address of Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union:

Very sacred seems the comradeship of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. As I have long believed, it is God's way out of the wilderness for half the human race. Whatever ought to be will be. The second temperance century shall see humanity fused and moulded into an universal brotherhood to wage war on the two-headed dragon of stimulants and narcotics. A petition has been prepared appealing to the governments of the world, collectively and severally, beseeching them to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the law from the drink-traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by total prohibition. This we ask every woman to sign. Perhaps the chief advance this year is the fraternizing of representative Catholic temperance workers with Protestants. A superintendent of work among Irish women would be a most opportune addition to our group of foreign workers. Nine States have this year adopted laws introducing temperance text-books into the system of public education. These are of various degrees of stringency, that of Pennsylvania being the best.

We all deplore the failure of our methods to reach the boys in that debatable period of our chronology known as "those dreadful teens." I hope we shall be able to create an effective department that will reach these young men. The Kindergarden Department has been carefully organized. It has boundless possibilities of good, and it is slowly growing. The Superintendent of the Anti-Tobacco Department has won new trophies this year. The habit is continually receiving more attention as the abomination of its desolation becomes more apparent. New Jersey, New Hampshire, and Nebraska have enacted laws to protect boys from the temptation of its sale. The States should be asked to follow the lead of New Hampshire, and pass laws against impure literature. The skating-rinks throughout the country make good meeting places for us, and we might make the experiment of using them together with the waiting rooms, vacant stores, reading rooms and other places where non-church-goers will congregate.

Our Department for the Suppression of the Social Evil is as yet inoperative. Its special aim will be to trace the relation between the drink habit and the nameless habits, outrages and crimes which disgrace so-called modern civilization, especially the brutalizing influence of malt liquors upon the lower nature. But the effect upon our minds of such unspeakable disclosures as the Pall Mall Gazette and the horrible assurance given us by such an authority as Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell that we should uncap perdition in the same direction were the hidden life of our great cities known, has so stirred us that we are, I trust, ready for an advance. Crimes against women seem to be on the increase everywhere. It is not by the vain attempt to reintroduce the exploded harem method of secluding women that they are to be saved. When we remember the unavenged murder of Jennie Cramer, the acquital of the ravishers of a cultivated Illinois school teacher, when we reflect that the Pall Mall Gazette says that the law is so formed as to allow men to outrage girls with impunity; that in Massachusetts and Vermont it is a greater crime to steal a cow than ruin a girl; that in Illinois seduction is not recognized as a crime, it is a marvel not to be explained that we go on the even tenor of our way too delicate, too refined, too prudish to make any allusion to these awful facts. We have been the victims of conventional cowards too long.

As to our relations with politics we do not forget in the midst of our unmistakable gains that the Democratic party is the open ally of the liquor oligarchy in the realm of National politics.

We want the Democratic party to bite the dust. The saloon is intrenched in politics even more firmly than the law. We can write and pray for the only party that declares that "the saloon must go."

What a Cow Should Yield.

American Farmer.

Something depends, of course, upon the kind of cow; but no cow is a good one that does not yield 2,500 quarts of milk in one year, or seven quarts a day for the 385 days. She will be dry a portion of the time, and, of course, will yield more when fresh than when toward the end of her milking period, but she should not give less than seven quarts daily for every day in the year. The milk should produce about 200 pounds of butter, or a pound to every twelve and a half quarts of milk, which at twenty-five cents a pound the whole year would yield $50. The value of the calf depends upon its breeding, while the skim milk fed to pigs, and the manure, should realize at least $25 more, making $75. We may safely take off one-half for cost, leaving $37.50 as profit. This sum, fixed as profit, however, may vary, as the price of food is cheaper in some localities than in others. Dairymen differ as to the amount of profit a cow should give. Some claim as much as $50 a year, but such dairymen sell the milk directly to the consumer at a fair price. The safest estimate is made upon the practice of skimming the milk and raising the pigs which will increase the profit, especially if a good breed of hogs be used in connection with a first-class lot of dairy cows.

A Good Holstein Cow.

Queen of Wayne, (H. H. B. 955) owned by Messrs. T. G. Yeomans & Sons, Walworth, N. Y., was personally selected in Holland by the senior member of the firm as the most perfect type of this breed he could find, and the remarkable butter and milk records made by the Wayne family, of which she is the founder, show conclusively that he made no mistake in his selection. Her record is 75¼ lbs. of milk in a day, 10,769 lbs. in six months, which exceeds by 75 lbs. 10 oz. the record of the noted cow Aaggie for the same length of time when she made her greatest record. An injury to her udder and a loss of part of it prevented more complete record. After the injury to her udder and when her milk was reduced to an average of 56 lbs. per day, she made 17¼ lbs. of well worked, unsalted butter in one week, showing that she was capable of making about 23 lbs. per week before her injury. She is the dam of Princess of Wayne, with a butter record of 22 lbs. 9 oz. in one week; 91 lbs. in thirty days, and the largest milk record reported of any living cow, viz: 20,469 lbs. 9 oz. in one year. She is also the g. dam of Princess of Wayne Third, with the wonderful teree-year old butter record of 18 lbs. in one week, 76 lbs. 12¼ oz. in thirty pays and 14,015 lbs. 8 oz. of milk in one year. Messrs. Yeomans have in their herd five generations of this remarkable family.

"WHAT TOMMY DID."

John Habberton author of "Helen's Babies" says: "What Tommy Did" would be worthy of the serious considerations of parents if it were possible for any one to be other than wildly mirthful over the saintliness and dreadfulnesses of the little hero. Tommy is an ideal boy—one of the kind which are by turns unendurable and angelic, which changes parents from young to old, and old to young again many times a day. We pity parents who fail to read this book; there is no time in the day, nor any day in the week, in which its pages will not dispel care. The Chicago Tribune pronounces it a book that "will delight every boy and girl and every mother too, who will find it a book that can be read over and over again to suit the insatiable appetites of youthful listeners, and yet never sickens the reader with any weakness in its composition." It has just been published in dainty and delightful shape, fine cloth, richly ornamented binding by Alden, the "Revolution" publisher, at half its former price, 50 cents. Alden's 148 page illustrated catalogue (price 4 cents—condensed catalogue free) of his immense list of standard books, is a wonder as well as a joy to book lovers. John B. Alden, publisher, New York.

The Library Magazine, for November, fully carries out its promise to furnish a repertory of the best periodical writing of the current month or two. This number contains about half a score of the most carefully conceived and best written papers in the English Reviews. Among these is a thoughtful essay by the Bishop of Carlisle, entitled "Thoughts about Life," being really a review of Herbert Spencer's Principles of Biology. The recent death of Lord Houghton, who, although raised to the peerage nearly a quarter of a century ago, is still best known as Mr. Richard Monckton Milnes, gives occasion for an appreciative sketch by Mr. Estcott, editor of the Fortnight Review. Very readable is the "Dialogue upon Novels," by Vernon Lee. Mr. William Henry Hurlbert, well known as an American literateur, and for many years editor of the New York World, furnishes a well-considered paper upon "Catholic Italy and the Temporal Power." Mary Howitt, now eighty-five years of age, is now writing a series of Autobiographical Reminiscences. Perhaps the most interesting of these is that upon her "Girlhood," which appears in this number of the Library Magazine. Mr. Richard A. Proctor's paper upon the "New Star in the Andromeda Nebula," is worth more than the space it occupies. Captain Vernon Lovett Cameron, whom we remember best by the account of his notable journey "Across Africa," made a dozen years ago, writes a sensible paper upon "The Future of Soudan." Among the original papers in this number of the Library Magazine, the first place must be assigned to that upon "John Ruskin in his Homes and Haunts," by William Sloane Kennedy. Mr. Alfred H. Guernsey writes a brief paper, mainly derived from a letter in the New York Independent, relating to the work The Lost Manuscript, by Solomon Spalding, which has been believed to be the source form which Joseph Smith got his Book of Mormon. A bulky manuscript thus entitled, and undoubtedly the work of Solomon Spaulding, has turned up at Honolulu, in the Sandwich Islands, as narrated in this paper. But, as we think, can be clearly established, this extent Honolulu manuscript is not the one which fell into the hands of Sidney Rigdon and Joe Smith, and which furnished the idea of the Book of Mormon. The truth we judge to be that Spalding became dissatisfied with this manuscript and wrote a wholly new one, which fell into the hands of Smith and his confederates. The whole matter, when fairly sifted, will form a curious chapter in literary history. New York: John B. Alden, Publisher. $1.50 a year.

CROOKSTON, MINN., NOV. 26.

The following Carman notice, was recieved too late for last issue:

Carman, Nov. 19, '85.

Mr. Editor:—You was misinformed about the lecture on Abraham Lincoln, by Rev. Mr. Page. A large audience considering the size of our village was in attendance. The lecture was excellent in every particular, and was very highly appreciated by all, from whom I have heard an expression. The thanks of the Baptist Ladies Society are cordially given him, and assumes that a good house would greet him every time.

F. K. Roberts.

To all who are in arrears to THE JOURNAL on subscription we make this offer. If you will pay up the old score and one year in advance we will accept payment at the rate of $1.50 in Polk Co., $1.65 outside of Polk Co., and present you with a copy of Farm, Stock and Home, the best agricultural paper published in Minnesota. JOURNAL readers will all get a sample copy in a few days.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultrymen, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.50.

THE ST. PAUL GLOBE.

DAILY. 1886! WEEKLY.

SUNDAY.

THE REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER OF THE GOLDEN NORTHWEST

It distinctly represents DEMOCRATIC IDEAS, LIVE ISSUES, and ECONOMICAL GOVERNMENT, and in the interest of the latter, it is firmly in favor of the

REDUCTION OF THE WAR TAXES

As levied on the labor of the country by the present iniquitous tariff.

It will fight Monopolies;
It will fight Intolerance;
It will fight Illiberalism;
It will fight Malefaction in whatever party found.

While it is Democratic to the back-bone, it is broad and liberal in its political views and tolerant toward those who differ from it in opinion, and is an especial representative of the non-office holding and non-office seeking people.

It is not an organ, except of MORAL FORCES and LIVING IDEAS. It will stand manfully by President CLEVELAND in his struggle to restore honesty to the Government service, and in his declared war upon party bossism and the rule of partisan cliques.

As a Newspaper, the GLOBE shall not be excelled in either the East or the West. It is a member of the Western Press Association and has the exclusive franchise for this territory of the United Press Association. Besides, it participates in all the news advantages of the New York Press Association and the leading News Associations of Europe and other countries. It has its own leased telegraph wire to Chicago and the Eastern cities, and maintains a corps of correspondents representing every important city and town in the Northwest, and to this list of active news-gatherers it is constantly adding.

The management of THE GLOBE is always alert for that which will instruct and amuse, and promptly avails itself of every new and novel feature suggested by the brightest and most aggressive American journals. The attractive illustrated articles, racily written; the choice daily stories; the charming social chat; the valuable labor department; the crisp relation of local events; the ably edited farmer's department, which aid in making the GLOBE the brightest and breeziest of Family Papers, are all evidences of this.

A GREAT DAIRY COUNTRY.

THE RED RIVER VALLEY COUNTRY PRONOUNCED BY COMPETENT AUTHORITY TO BE THE BEST DAIRY COUNTRY IN THE STATE.

The city of St. Paul has let the contract for sinking four artesian wells in West St. Paul. The Pioneer Press of the 25th inst. quotes a letter from Springer Harbaugh to H. M. Rice, in which, among other things Mr. Harbaugh says:

"Referring to our conversation last week on the subject of arecsian wells and natural gas, you stated that our municipality had made contracts for sinking several with a view of obtaining a water supply for the inhabitants of the West side. In compliance with your wishes I now address you, giving you the result of my experience in the Red River Valley. Within the past four years we have drilled eleven artesian wells at the Keystone and Lockhart forms, which I represent, located in Polk and Norman Counties, Minn., on the east side of the Red River Valley. We were amply rewarded by obtaining a full and adequate quantity of pure, good, semi-soft water from each and all. One of our wells at the Lockhart farms has, I think, sufficient flow to supply the present needs of West St. Paul. For the more particular details as to the strains of earth we passed through, and other information regarding the wells, I will respectfully refer you to my report of them made March 20, 1885, to our State geologist, which you will find in his thirteenth annual report, page 47. Since making that report we have erected, at the headquarters of each farm, large and convenient "artesian milk houses," which enable us to keep the milk from a large number of cows at a proper temperature, and make our butter and cheese with great convenience, economy, and satisfaction. We have thus demonstrated the fact that nearly every farmer in those two counties, and, in fact, in the entire Red River Valley can obtain artesian wells and have "artesian milk houses" at every farm house; and I am impressed with the belief that the making of butter and cheese is destined to become one of the important and diversified industries of our great valley; and by virtue of our pure climate, pure water, and the peculiar quality of our albuminous and glutinous grasses, grain, roots and feed generally, that we will be able to compete in quality with any section of North America or the world. And in sinking those wells we have fully developed the fact that our subsoils, to a great depth, are so heavily charged with the necessary chemical elements that will furnish the requisite fertilizing material to enrich the land for years to come; and consequently, in my judgment, the Northwest is to remain without any great competition the wheat belt of our country."

To the above we would add, that these wells are obtained very cheaply, ranging from $100 to $800, according to depth and that there are very few that exceed 250 feet in depth, generally ranging from 150 to 200 feet deep. They are never failing and supply an abundance of pure, cold water, just what is needed to make the dairy business a success. There is already in successful operation one dairy on the plan suggested by Mr. Harbaugh, that of Mr. J. O. Milne, of Crookston, who makes butter upon the deep setting plan, butter that can not be beaten by the best creameries in existence. Add to the fact that water is cheap and abundant, the facts that our climate is unexcelled for healthfulness, and our supply of native grasses rich and unfailing, and you have all of the essential elements necessary for a first-class dairy country. It will not be many years before Polk and Norman Counties will be as noted for their dairy products as they now are for their wheat.

How Freezing Benefits the Soil.

It is a well-known fact that water in the act of freezing, expands considerably, and with a force that is irresistible. It is the freezing of water in their crevices and pores that causes the rocks to be gradually worn down, and "weathered" as it is called, into soil. It is this also which is continually reducing the soil to finer fragments, and which breaks up the hard clogs and mellows the ground. Fall plowing or spading assists this effect by breaking up the compact soil into lumps, which are further broken into small particles. As water and air can only act upon the surface of these particles, it is clear that the smaller they are, the more surface is exposed to the weather, and the soil is made soluble. If a block of hard soil of 12 inches cube is exposed to the weather, there are 864 square inches only of it affected; if it is broken up into cubes of one inch, 10,368 square inches are exposed to these beneficial influences; if the soil is further broken up in fragments of one twelfth of an inch, there are more than 124,000 square inches thus affected. This fact shows how greatly the effects of frost benefits the soil, and therefore how necessary it is that the land should be fall plowed, and opportunity given for this beneficial action of the weather. In the garden, even, all the soil possible should be spaded before it freezes.—[American Agriculturist for Dec.

TO OUR READERS.

We cannot to strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family, weekly newspaper of the firs class—such, for instance, as The Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for habitual and careful reading to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly The Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine, and review all in one. It is religious, literary and educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial, and political paper all combined. It has 32 folio pages and 22 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for thirty cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

A Farm and Household Necessity.

In these days of intelligence and wide reading few men enter into any class of business without a laudable desire to know what others have done and are doing in the same line. Hence it is that the physician, the lawyer, the minister, the politician, the tradesman and the mechanic as well as other professions and callings all have their mediums of communication. The same is also true of the farmer, the dairymen the stockman, the horticulturist and other allied interests of the farm. To meet this desire on the part of the farmer, some twenty-three years ago THE WESTERN RURAL was founded. It has been conducted by a practical farmer almost from its inception, and has grown in power and influence until today it stands at the head of the agricultural press of America. Its editor and proprietor was the prime mover and organizer of the National Farmers' Alliance, which has become a power in the reform agitation of the present day and in time must be of inestimable value to the farming classes. It is the acknowledged champion of the farmer's rights, and as such is the uncompromising enemy of monopolies of every form. So great also has been its service in denouncing the adulteration of food and food products, as well as exposing frauds and swindling schemes in whatever phase presented, that in many homes throughout the country it has really become a household and farm necessity. THE WESTERN RURAL AND AMERICAN STOCKMAN in its enlarged form is not a class journal in the strict sense, as its twenty departments cover the entire field of literature, as related to both practical and scientific agriculture. Many say its veterinary department alone is worth more than double the price of one year's subscription. It is a large sixteen page paper, full of elevating and entertaining matter pertaining to the household and farm, and is just such a paper as ought to be in the home of every farmer in the land. The subscription price is $1.65 per year (or $1.50 in clubs.) Write to Milton George, 157 Dearborn street, Chicago, for a free sample copy.

The American Agriculturist for December, 1885, is the largest number issued during its half century existence. It contains a large number of full page and small illustrations, executed by Edwin Forbes, Bennett, and other well-known artists. D. D. T. Moore writes on "Seasonable Duties of Farmers;" Seth Green descants on "Farmers and Fish Culture;" Chester P. Dewey discourses upon "The Milk Supply of Cities;" Jos. Harris writer about "Our Apple Harvest;" Mason C. Weld discourses upon "Cross-breed Beef Cattle;" Dr. Geo. Thurber contributes numerous articles on horticulture. Henry Stewart writes on "Fruit in the Southern States;" Andrew S. Fuller, tells how to secure early fruitage from grafts and cuttings of fruit trees; D. W. King presents drawings of a cheap house adapted to either village or country. The Household and Children's Departments are unusually interesting, while the Humbug Department exposes several new frauds. There are numerous illustrations and descriptions of Farm Contrivances, Noted Horses, Celebrated Cattle, Pigs, Sheep, etc., etc. Terms, $1.50 per year; Single numbers 15 cts.

It is free, therefore, to discuss all questions, and to speak its mind candidly. It is not swerved by fear or favor. It is a vigorous defender of the Evangelical faith; it preaches practical righteousness, and earnestly supports all moral reforms. All its columns—the advertising as well as the reading—are free from everything of doubtful or objectionable character. No matter what a persons religion, politics, or profession may be, if he desires to keep up with the times and know what the brightest minds are thinking of, the ablest pens are writing about, and what the world at large is doing—he should read the Independent.

A GREAT DAIRY COUNTRY.

THE RED RIVER VALLEY COUNTRY PRONOUNCED BY COMPETENT AUTHORITY TO BE THE BEST DAIRY COUNTRY IN THE STATE.

The city of St. Paul has let the contract for sinking four artesian wells in West St. Paul. The Pioneer Press of the 20th inst. quotes a letter from Springer Harbaugh to H. M. Rice, in which, among other things, Mr. Harbaugh says:

"Referring to our conversation last week on the subject of artesian wells and natural gas, you stated that our municipality had made contracts for sinking several with a view of obtaining a water supply for the inhabitants of the West side. In compliance with your wishes I now address you, giving you the result of my experience in the Red River Valley. Within the past four years we have drilled eleven artesian wells at the Keystone and Lockhart farms, which I represent, located in Polk and Norman Counties, Minn., on the east side of the Red River Valley. We were amply rewarded by obtaining a full and adequate quantity of pure, good, semi-soft water from each and all. One of our wells at the Lockhart farms has, I think, sufficient flow to supply the present needs of West St. Paul. For the more particular details as to the strata of earth we passed through, and other information regarding the wells, I will respectfully refer you to my report of them, made March 20, 1883, to our State geologist, which you will find in his thirteenth annual report, page 47. Since making that report we have erected, at the headquarters of each farm, large and convenient artesian milk houses, which enable us to keep the milk from a large number of cows at a proper temperature, and make our butter and cheese with great convenience, economy and satisfaction. We have thus demonstrated the fact that nearly every farmer in those two counties, and in fact in the entire Red River Valley, can obtain artesian wells and have 'artesian milk houses' at every farm house, and I am impressed with the belief that the making of butter and cheese is destined to become one of the important and diversified industries of our great valley, and by virtue of our pure climate, pure water and the peculiar quality of our nutritious and glutinous grasses, grain, roots and [illegible] generally that we will be able to compete [illegible] with any region of North America or the world. And in putting these wells we [illegible] [illegible] abundance of pure, cold water, just what is needed to make the dairy business a success. There is already in successful operation one dairy on the plan suggested by Mr. Harbaugh, that of Mr. J. Q. Milne, of Crookston, who makes butter upon the deep setting plan; butter that cannot be beaten by the best creameries in existence. Add to the fact that water is cheap and abundant, the fact that our climate is unexcelled for healthfulness, and our supply of native grasses rich and unfailing, and you have all of the essential elements necessary for a first-class dairy country. It will not be many years before Polk and Norman Counties will be as noted for their dairy products as they now are for their wheat.

How Freezing Benefits the Soil.

It is a well known fact that water in the act of freezing expands considerably, and with a force that is irresistible. It is the freezing of water in the crevices and pores that causes the rocks to be gradually worn down, and "weathered" as it is called, into soil. It is this also which is continually reducing the soil to finer fragments, and which breaks up the hard clods and mellows the ground. Fall plowing or spading assists this effect by breaking up the compact soil into lumps, which are further broken into small particles. As water and air can only act upon the surface of these particles, it is clear that the smaller they are, the more surface is exposed to the weather, and the soil is made soluble. If a block of hard soil of 12 inches cube is exposed to the weather, there are 864 square inches only of it affected. If it is broken up into cubes of one inch, 10,368 square inches are exposed to the beneficial influence. If the soil is further broken up in fragments of one twelfth of an inch, there are more than 124,000 square inches thus affected. This fact shows how great the effects of frost benefits the soil, and therefore how necessary it is that the land should be fall plowed, and opportunity given for this beneficial action of the weather. In the garden, every bit of the soil should be spaded before it freezes.—American Agriculturist for Dec.

TO OUR READERS.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family weekly newspaper of the first class—such for instance as The Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for habitual and continuous reading, to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly The Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine and review, all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and political paper, all combined. It has 32 folio pages and 22 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for thirty cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription price is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

Address The Independent, 251 Broadway, New York City.

A Friend [illegible]

the stockman, the horticulturist and other allied interests of the farm. To meet this desire on the part of the farmer, some twenty-three years ago THE WESTERN RURAL was founded. It has been conducted by a practical farmer almost from its inception, and has grown in power and influence until today it stands at the head of the agricultural press of America. Its editor and proprietor was the prime mover and organizer of the National Farmers' Alliance, which has become a power in the reform agitation of the present day, and in time must be of inestimable value to the farming classes. It is the acknowledged champion of the farmer's rights, and as such is the uncompromising enemy of monopolies of every form. So great also has been its service in denouncing the adulteration of food and food products, as well as exposing frauds and swindling schemes in whatever phase presented, that in many homes throughout the country it has really become a household and family necessity. THE WESTERN RURAL AND AMERICAN STOCKMAN in its enlarged form is not a class journal in the strict sense, as its twenty departments cover the entire field of literature as related to both practical and scientific agriculture. Many say its veterinary department alone is worth more than double the price of one year's subscription. It is a large sixteen page paper, full of elevating and entertaining matter pertaining to the household and farm, and is just such a paper as ought to be in the home of every farmer in the land. The subscription price is $1.65 per year (or $1.50 in clubs). Write to Milton George, 157 Dearborn street, Chicago, for a free sample copy.

The American Agriculturist for December, 1885, is the largest number issued during its half century existence. It contains a large number of full page and small illustrations executed by Edwin Forbes, Bennett, and other well known artists. D. D. T. Moore writes on "Seasonable Duties of Farmers"; Seth Green descants on "Farmers and Fish Culture"; Chester P. Dewey discourses upon "The Milk Supply of Cities"; Jos. Harris writes about "Our Apple Harvest"; Mason C. Weld discourses upon "Cross-bred Beef Cattle"; Dr. Geo. Thurber contributes numerous articles on horticulture; Henry Stewart writes on "Fruit in the Southern States"; Andrew S. Fuller tells how to secure early fruiting from grafts and cuttings of fruit trees; D. W. King presents drawings of a cheap house adapted to either village or country. The Household and Children's Departments are unusually interesting, while the Humbug Department exposes several new frauds. There are numerous illustrations and descriptions of Farm Contrivances, Noted Horses, Celebrated Cattle, Pigs, Sheep, etc., etc. Terms $1.50 per year. Single numbers 15 cts.

Ed. Strader was arrested and taken before a magistrate last week, charged with having beaten an old man. Upon confession and payment of fines and costs he was released.

On Saturday evening next Milton Nobles will give one of his famous entertainments at the Opera House. Tickets now on sale at Berthiaume's jewelry store, Robert street.

Messrs Walsh & Bang, started for their stock ranch on Saturday, calculating to be gone about two weeks. It is possible that they intend to beef a few of those "steers" that the Breeder's Gazette of Nov. 26th, reported.

Mrs. Rose has opened a restaurant on Broadway, just north of the Commercial House. The sample of fried oysters sent around to the JOURNAL office indicate that everything will be kept in first-class style and of the very best quality.

$3,00 worth of photographs secures you a ticket for the grand drawing, for $50.00 in prizes, at Kertsons.

Trail County, (D. T.) Times: Mr. X. Sohler, proprietor of the Fertile, Polk County, Minn., mills, visited our town on Friday and Saturday of last week. He was introduced to many of our citizens by Peter Casper, of the Caledonia mills. Mr. Sohler ranks among the most prominent citizens of Polk county. He is a sturdy, honest German miller, whose word is as good as gold. Those who made his acquaintance are much pleased with him and hope that he will favor us with another visit in the near future. Such men are an honor to any community.

The opera house affords a very commodious and convenient place for meetings, similar to the one of Tuesday, but there is one reason why Mr. Filiatrault objects to having it used, and justly too. He takes great deal of pains to keep the floor in good condition and he must have been greatly discouraged after the speech of Riel's ex-secretary, at the filthy condition of the floor making it almost impossible to wax for the dance the next evening. We noticed on the day of the funeral that several tobacco-chewers forgot to notice the absence of spittoons. If men would be a little more careful, the chief objection for using the opera house for public purposes would be removed.

We congratulate Hack & Gallasch upon the name "May Flower Tea" which they have given their brand. It is a title suggestive of the fresh and buoyant for which this tea is noted.

The New York Lyceum Company, which gave two evening entertainments and matinee on Saturday afternoon, last week, did not give very good satisfaction, judging by the slim houses that greeted their return to this city. There were several excellent actors with the company, among which were Wm. Frederick, Miss Laura Dean, (Frederick's wife,) George Clark, and Arnold Wilford. Their presentation of "Fanchon" on Friday evening was pronounced by good judges to be excellent. Frederick's conception of "Father Barbeaud" was good, while the "Old Fadet" of Miss Sidney Carleton was well rendered. If there was anything lacking in Mrs. Frederick's presentation of "Cricket," it was in a lack of vivacity, and the size of the audience was hardly calculated to awaken any such emotion in the bosom of any actor or actress. Ed. Dayen's performance on the mouth organ, was wonderful, and he was re-called many times before he was allowed any rest. Mr. Frederick informed us that he had several actors who command very high salaries, and while there were a few young actors in the troupe, for light parts, yet the company was as a whole as good, if not better than the average. While it was not the best troupe in the world, yet for the price charged it was worth the money. We have had many a worse company visit our city, against whom there was not a kick made. The only fault we can find with it is the number of very young people with it, but in this country, where the villages are so far apart this is an objection which cannot be remedied, except by an admittance fee of from $1.00 and upward. The company go to Chicago soon to [illegible]

Mr. M. R. Brown left for Indianapolis, Ind., on Saturday evening to attend the session of the Farmers' Congress, to which he was recently appointed a delegate by Gov. Hubbard. This meeting of the representative farmers of the United States can not fail to be productive of good results to the farming interests of the nation and we shall watch its proceedings with interest.

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.

[23-32] STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

The little Misses Copeland, Edie and Unie, gave an entertainment to twenty of their little schoolmates on Thanksgiving evening. After a bountiful repast, the evening was pleasantly passed in merry games, charades etc., etc., and when the time arrived for the little folks to take their departure for home they all with one consent agreed that it was the most enjoyable event of the season. The little ladies are excellent entertainers.

At our own expense we arranged to have a copy of Farm Stock and Home sent to every one of our readers and many others. They were all to be sent out in November, but the issue of Farm Stock and Home was exhausted, leaving over 1,000 unsupplied. These will be supplied with the issue of Dec. 1st. We ask our friends to examine it carefully. Remember you can secure it for a year free if you comply with the terms of our offer, which is to square up and pay one year in advance. Farm Stock and home is worth a great deal to every progressive farmer.

The fireman's ball on Thursday evening of last week was a big success, netting over $200. The opera house was gaily decked, trimmed with the National colors, and about on the walls hung the trappings of the Fire Department. If there was any fault to find it was in the fact that there were too many present. Dan McKinnon furnished one of his excellent suppers which was heartily enjoyed by the hungry throng. The dance was kept up until a late (or rather, an early) hour and all departed with the feeling that it had been a very pleasant [illegible]

A Visit to Marshall County.

On Saturday last Mr. Wm. Box and our scribe alighted at the Warren station about noon. We found the inhabitants as busy as bees, handling wheat, selling goods, paying the notes in the collector's hands and scraping the tenacious soil of Marshall County off their feet. This latter kept them pretty busy as the better the soil the closer it will stick to one through thick and thin. Wheat was 67c. for No. 1 Hard and the four large elevators, and two flat houses were kept busy taking it in with one exception. We were told that the Pillsbury & Hurlbut elevator was getting a very small proportion of it this fall. We dropped in to see all our old friends, among the rest the Sheaf man, whom we found out, and were told that he had sold out to A. J. Clark, the enterprising proprietor of the Stephen Leader. We visited the stock farm of H. G. Palmer & Son and found H. G. busy erecting a large machine shed which was intended to furnish shelter for 18 or 20 binders and a thousand and one other articles of machinery too numerous too mention, which were roosting about under the trees. Mr. Palmer took us to see the new importation of Holsteins, which recently arrived from Iowa, which consists of 41 head of very high grade cows, heifers and young bulls and one very choice thoroughbred bull, "Duke of Buchanan." This animal will be three years old on Dec. 29th and weighs about 1600. He is a long ways from being fat, but is healthy and rugged and an exceptionally fine animal. The cows are also a choice lot, being originally a Shorthorn and Holstein cross, making them especially valuable for milk and butter. Mr. P. informed us that they intend to devote their large farm wholly to stock raising as soon as it can be brought about. They will pasture 200 acres next season. They have just completed a large cow barn which is admirably planned for the purpose. They have a choice location and a farm well adapted for a stock farm and with proper management are bound to make it pay well. We next visited the fine farm of Wm. M. Box, situated one and one-half miles west of the village. This consists of a section of land lying on both sides of the Snake River, with the farm buildings on the river. Mr. Box has a very comfortable and neat residence and seems to be enjoying life, surrounded by his flocks and herds, with 8,000 bushels of No. 1 Hard in his granary, awaiting the $ mark. While as yet he relies somewhat on grain it has been his object all along to get into stock somewhat extensively and as a starter he has a dozen cows and their offspring for a year or two, in all about 40 head, and a fine young Holstein bull, "Prince-Errena," a fine young Mooie-Hartog, which already shows many of the excellent qualities of his illustrious ancestor, old Mooie. As he has a very choice lot of milch cows he will in time be the possessor of a fine dairy herd. We saw in a yard a lot of fine Berkshires which had all the appearance of being thoroughbreds. For their use in summer he has a twenty acre wood-lot which could doubtless be made to raise red clover which would supply the hogs with plenty of summer feed and they could be produced at slight expense. He has several fine young colts and will pay considerable attention to this line of breeding. He has ducks, geese, turkeys and hens by the hundred. His yield of wheat was 20 bushels per acre, the lightest yield he has ever received. The original claim shanty, a 14x16 log shanty, shingled with poles and tarpaper is being fitted up for a calf pen, and aptly shows what a few years will accomplish for the intelligent, economical farmer in this country. It was our intention to have visited the Marsh farms but we found that our time was too limited and so we hastened back to Warren just in time to catch the afternoon train south, well pleased with our visit and the reception we had received.

The Phœnix.

The dramatic critic of the New York Mirror says of Milton Nobles, in the Phœnix:

After seeing all the modern melodramas, native and imported, I come back to the old Phœnix with a sense of relief. It is incomparably the best of the lot. There is something indescribably catching in the play and the chief player. Year after year I find myself laughing at the quaint, curious comicalities of the contributor to the Chambermaids' Own, wildly applauding the incomparable fire-scenes or holding my breath during the painful stillness of the gambling scene and stamping vociferous approval of its well known climax. In looking at the play last night for about the twentieth time, I tried to analyze it. I had nearly given it up when the solution presented itself. Nobles is a genius. It must be so. Here is a play composed of the most thread-bare material with nothing save the story-writing incident to relieve it of commonplace sensationalism, and yet for nine years it has been steadily growing in popular favor, although advertised by the most legitimate and conservative methods until to-day it is recognized as one of the surest drawing cards on the road. It is the man, not the play. I doubt if there is an actor living who could get the meat out of that story-writing scene excepting Nobles himself. It is as thoroughly his own as Rip Van Winkle is Jefferson's. The man is not only a genius, he is an artist, and while on the stage pulls the play up to his own level. That's the secret of perennial popularity of The Phœnix, and I don't care who knows it.

On Thanksgiving morning our citizens were electrified by the news that Vice President Thos. A. Hendricks had died suddenly at his residence in Indianapolis, at 4:45 the day previous of paralysis. This was the first intimation of his illness that had been received. He had been ailing but a short time and at no time unable to attend to his duties and had been under the care of a physician but a few hours. A few minutes previous to his death his wife, nephew and a man servant were with him. His wife left to receive callers and a few minutes thereafter, Mr. Hendricks, who had been in great pain, said to his nephew: "I am free, send for Eliza!" (his wife.) His nephew, not attaching the real importance to his words which was doubtless meant by the Vice President, did not call Mrs. H. at once, and when she returned a few moments after she found her husband alone and dead. The news was a great shock to the nation as it was wholly unexpected. It is not as yet definitely known who will be his successor.

Don't forget "Phœnix" on Saturday evening.

Funeral Services.

Appropriate funeral services were observed by our citizens on Tuesday. At 1 o'clock a procession was formed at city hall, headed by the band which marched to the opera house. The hall had been appropriately draped, the windows were darkened and the lamps lighted. The mayor in a few well chosen words stated the object of the meeting and Rev. S. Currie read a passage of scripture. The choir then sung a chant which was followed by the reading of the scriptures by Rev. G. E. Page. Rev. F. K. Roberts offered a fervent and eloquent prayer and after an appropriate hymn by the choir, the Rev. S. Currie delivered a very interesting address, appropriate to the occasion. After music by the band the audience dispersed to their homes.

Juvenile Opera.

Nothing is talked of among the children now but the charming little opera which will be given at the Opera House on December 11th, under the direction of Miss Gorman, of Grand Forks. The costumes are all new for the occasion and in keeping with the different scenes of the opera. Bertha Chase as the "Fairy Queen," and George Finlayson as the "Wolf" could not have been better chosen. The proceeds are to go to the Congregational Sunday school.

WHEREAS, DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Lyman Anderson and Harriett E. Anderson, his wife, mortgagors, to The Board of Trustees of Oberlin College, mortgagee, dated the 16th day of December A. Wheat.

Although the price of wheat is depreciated somewhat the same reasons why it must eventually be very much higher exist to-day, as much as they did several weeks since. The volume of wheat in sight is quoted at 53,000,000 bushels, enough to last the country only four months, for its own consumption, leaving nothing for export. The reason why wheat has dropped off so, may be found in the gambling methods of the dealers, and cannot in any way be construed to mean that there is an over production. The object of the buyers has been and still is, to get the wheat out of the producers hands, at as low a rate as possible, and had they succeeded in doing that, the price of wheat to-day would doubtless be greater than it is, although there would have been a larger amount in sight. While a great deal of that 53,000,000 in sight, is not sold yet, it is in the elevators of the country adding to the amount in sight and helping to depress the price of wheat by appearing to show a surplus. If all of the wheat that farmers have delivered, and drawn upon, but not sold, was where it should be, in the farmers' granary, wheat would now be higher, the actual amount on hand would sooner be used and the time when wheat will touch the $ mark, nearer by several weeks. However much the bears may growl over the "large surplus on hand" the fact remains that this has been a year of short crops, and all who have held their wheat and continue to do so, are bound to make money by it, although they may have to hold until spring, or early summer.

The One Crop Idea.

When the writer first came to the Red River Valley, in 1872, he came as did every-body else, filled with the idea that, whatever else the soil might produce, the crop best adapted and in which the most money was to be made in was wheat. Filled with that idea every settler, as soon as he has located his claim, at once set to work to do all the breaking he could the first year, so as to have a large tract of land to sow to wheat in 78 and either bought teams for the work or hired it done at five dollars per acre. In the spring of 1878 the majority of the settlers bent every effort to the task of sowing as much land to wheat as he had broken the year previous, even neglecting in many cases to sow even oats to feed the teams, "for," they argued, "if we can get twenty bushels per acre and $1.00 per bushel we can buy our oats cheaper than we can raise them." So they went to work planning not only to buy their oats, but also all of the provisions necessary to run the farm. Many ran deeply into debt for teams and machinery, making their obligations due on the first of Oct[illegible] generally. In those days provisions were high and every thing the settler needed was high, and he found in the fall that his "twenty bushels per acre and $1.00 per bushel" would not begin to pay the fiddler. Lumber was also very high, and he saw that he would have to economise somewhere, as he drew the line at lumber, and neglected to run into debt for sufficient lumber to build sheds to house his valuable machinery. Result—a larger wear and tear on machinery in one year, than should have been in four with proper care. Then came on the era of hard times all over the country, and the consequent low price for wheat. Closely upon the heels of this era, came the giant monopoly system of handling wheat, that robbed the farmer of his legitimate share of the profits for raising the wheat. Up to this time the farmer had stuck faithfully to his text and was trying vainly to make his wheat crop pay for every thing he consumed, while making his crop pay his notes and support himself and family during the long winter months, when he was necessarily idle. It was not until the giant monopoly forced him to the conclusion that he began to realize the folly of his course, and to see that he must adopt some other plan, if he would succeed. Then we began to see more cows, more hogs, more poultry and more colts. When we take a retrospective view of the early methods pursued, the only wonder is, that the country survived the effects of the system universally pursued, and we are forced to the conclusion, that we owe it to the wonderful capacity of our soil, that we were not totally wrecked. Wheat was the only money crop thought of, and it was supposed that wheat would pay the whole expenses on the farm during the summer time, support a large family in comparative idleness during the long winter months, and make one independently rich besides. This was found to be a serious mistake, and men began to see that they must come as near making the farm raise all of the provisions needed, as it was possible for it to do, and pay the expenses of the wheat crop besides, thus making the wheat crop come pretty near being all profit, then, and not till then did the dawn of prosperity begin. The cow was brought to the front, and right nobly has she performed her work. Men not only got the idea that they must have the cow to help in the development of the great resources of the country, but the idea obtained, that the very best cows must be had. The native scrub would not do, and as a result, we see a representative of almost every breed of cows known, and the demand is for good cows. The idea has not obtained that we must abandon wheat entirely, but the idea that one can, with the aid of good stock, raise as much wheat as he has been doing on about half the land he has been using, is gaining ground and is becoming a settled fact. It has been proved in the history of the country, that it will not pay to raise wheat alone. It is now being proved that, by farming properly as much money or more can be made on a Red River Valley farm as on any in the United States. But let no one make a mistake in the matter. It is one that requires as much brains, business capacity and good management as any business on earth, and if one thinks he can go into stock as he would go fishing, simply buy anything with hide and hair on, with no more care or forethought than he would bait his hook and throw it into the water, he is very liable to be bitterly mistaken. There are cows that will not pay for their keeping—such are very dear at any price. There are cows that will make two pounds of butter a day and upwards, and furnish milk enough to raise a good calf besides. Such cows are not dear at any reasonable price. Better to try such a cow at $200 than to take the former as a gift, and keep her. The rate at which good cows have been brought into the country the past year, shows that the one-crop idea is getting played out, and will soon be wholly abandoned, for the safe and sure plan of diversified husbandry.

WILL IT PAY?

An English farmer figures his profits on his dairy at 8 per cent. When we consider the greater cost of land, and hay and grain and everything necessary to conduct the business in England we can easily figure out how we could double that percentage in the Red River Valley where land and hay and grain are so cheap and so cheaply raised. Our markets are equal to those in which this English farmer sold his dairy products. Our hay can be procured for the labor of cutting, our land is at present the cheapest on earth for so fertile a soil as we have, and since we got into the habit of sinking artesian wells, the water procured through them is the very best that could be had, and especially adapted to dairy purposes. Our English farmer reported a loss from disease and death equal to 20 per cent of his whole herd. Here is another proof of vantage for the Red River Valley farmer, for in our healthy climate we are subject to very few losses by disease, not one tenth part of that sustained by our English friend. To sum the whole matter we can say that if our English friend can make a profit of 8 per cent, the Red River Valley Farmer upon the same capital invested could reap 20 per cent. by adopting the same methods.

[illegible] to loan on a good farm. No bonus [illegible]

It seems to be now a settled fact that there will be no extra session of the Legislature called unless some new demand arises that should be deemed a sufficient cause. There is a subject of great importance to the dairy interests of the State that should be brought before the next one, i. e. the manufacture of butterine and oleomargarine. This matter was brought up at the last session and received a little attention, but not enough. The manufacture of bogus butter, while it cannot be prevented by law, could and should be so hampered as to render it impossible to compete with genuine butter in the market. No one wishes to eat the vile stuff if he knows it and it has to be sold disguised as butter, if at all, to the consumer. A law should be made requiring the maker to stamp its name on every roll, print, or in whatever way the stuff is put up, in such a manner as that when offered to the consumer the name should appear plain and legible upon the stuff, so that the buyer may know that it is bogus, also every tub, firkin, or package should be so plainly marked that no hoops or any other device could cover up the brand of Cain. Then let a good stiff tax be placed upon its manufacture. Furthermore, oblige every landlord, boarding house keeper, restaurant or any other man, offering it upon his table to inform his guests that he sets up bogus butter for his guests. Why, if a man should go to a hotel to dinner, should put up a twenty dollar bill to pay for it and receive in the change a lot of counterfeit money, he would raise no end of a howl, but let the landlord pass a lot of counterfeit butter on him and THAT is all right. But is it all right? Have we not as much right to demand genuine, unadulterated butter for good money as to demand good money in change? To give bogus butter for good money is as bad as to give counterfeit change, and a great deal meaner and smaller, as the latter is more easy to detect than the former. Let as severe a law as can be made be placed upon our statutes and then and not till then can the dairyman be protected in his rights.

Duluth Tribune: "Senator Comstock of Moorhead has changed front and now advocates an extra session. He gives the tax discussion as his reason."—Fergus Falls Journal. Alas, too late. Beg your pardon, gentlemen, he has done nothing of the kind. He has maintained all along that the demand for greater representation was not a sufficient reason for incurring the expense of an extra session, and he has not changed front on the question, but he has said that the tax title business furnishes the only good reason why the Legislature should be convened. There is nothing two-sided about Senator Comstock, who is one of the ablest statesmen in the North West to-day.

A Bonanza to Every Farmer.

We offer a premium which will prove a bonanza to every farmer who accepts our offer. Farm, Stock and Home is a Minnesota institution, adapted to our soil and climate, edited by a life long Minnesota farmer and a paper that is invaluable to every progressive farmer. We have made such arrangements as will enable us to give every subscriber of THE JOURNAL a copy of this valuable agricultural paper

FREE FOR ONE YEAR.

This offer must be accepted before January 1st 1886. If you wish to secure lots of reading matter for the coming year, subscribe for THE JOURNAL and Farm, Stock and Home at just the price of THE JOURNAL.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultry-men, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support, yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.50.

STOP.

Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents, or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.50. [23-tf]

Taken Up.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it, with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added, 15 cents, if sent outside of the county.

It will fight Monopolies.

It will fight Intolerance.

It will fight Illiberalism.

It will fight Malefaction in whatever party found.

While it is Democratic to the back-bone, it is broad and liberal in its political views and tolerant toward those who differ from it in opinion, and is an especial representative of the non-office holding and non-office seeking people.

It is not an organ, except of MORAL FORCES and LIVING IDEAS. It will stand manfully by President CLEVELAND in his struggle to restore honesty to the Government service, and in his declared war upon party bossism and the rule of partisan cliques.

As a Newspaper, the GLOBE shall not be excelled in either the East or the West. It is a member of the Western Press Association and has the exclusive franchise for this territory of the United Press Association. The Ada Convention.

From the Ada Index, we learn the result of the recent convention held at that place to determine whether the "Injuns" should all be planted on the White Earth Reservation or not. Fifty-one delegates were present, from Becker, Hubbard, Norman and Polk Counties, and after a lively discussion the following Memorial to Congress was unanimously adopted:

Your memorialists, the people residing in the Counties of Polk, Norman, Becker and Hubbard, each contiguous to the White Earth Indian Reservation by their delegates in convention assembled, at Ada, Norman County, Minn., on Dec. 1, 1885, do hereby respectfully represent: That there are now 6198 Chippewa Indians on the Leech Lake, Mille Lac, Red Lake, Winnebagoshish and White Earth Indian Reservation in Minnesota. That the White Earth Indian Reservation, proper contains 1,091,923 acres, mostly the best agricultural lands in the state of Minnesota. That the area of the Leech Lake reservation is 94,440 acres. That the area of the Mille Lac Indian reservation is 61,414 acres. That the area of the Red Lake Indian reservation is 3,200,000 acres. That the area of the Winnebagoshish reservation is 320,000 acres that the lands in the said Leech Lake Mille Lac and Winnebagoshish reservations are mostly unfit for agriculture and valuable only for the pine that grows thereon and that not more than 120,000 of said Chippewa Indians live on the said White Earth reservation and that 4498 of said Chippewa Indians are living a nomadic life in bands on the other named reservations, under different chiefs and although called Chippewas they are in fact foreign to each other and might properly be called Leech Lake, Mille Lac, Red Lake and Winnebagoshish Indians; that the Indians on White Earth reservation are cultivating not more than three townships out of the vast amount of agricultural land contained in said reservation and they are willing to sell the great part of said reservation to the United States to be opened for settlement. That a scheme is on foot to take the Indians from the Leech Lake, Mille Lac, Red Lake and Winnebagoshish reservations and place them on the said White Earth reservation. That the said project or scheme is impracticable and unjust, not only to the citizens of the United States but also to the Indians living on the White Earth reservation for that it will place a vast quantity of rich agricultural land virtually forever out of market and the Indians who live on said Leech Lake, Mille Lac, Red Lake and Winnebagoshish reservations will never submit to settling down and resign their trapping and hunting which is their principal ocupation where they are now, but on the contrary they will be a source of trouble to not only the Indians now on the White Earth reservation, but they will prey upon and make trouble with the citizens living in the counties adjacent and bordering on the White Earth reservation in case of such removal, that the citizens of Northern and Western Minnesota are against the placing of any more Indians on the said White Earth reservation. Your memorialists therefore most earnestly appeal to your honorable body to prevent any removal of the said Indians and request that measures be taken by the government to purchase such lands of the White Earth Indians as are good for agricultural purposes which the said Indians do not need for their welfare.

Resolved, that the copy of the memorial to Congress which has been adopted by the convention to be delivered to the Hon. Chas. [illegible] to be by him presented to the Legislature in case an extra session be called this winter.

Resolved, that the memorial to Congress of the United States, which has been adopted by the convention, be delivered to the Hon. Knute Nelson to be by him presented to Congress this winter.

Bogus Butter.

It is claimed by the manufacturers of butterine that they cannot be prevented by law from making their infernal stuff because pure lard and pure tallow has been pronounced healthy. It is possible, but how are we to know that pure materials are always used? We know that those who make the stuff will brand the packages to suit their buyers, call it "creamery," "best dairy" or anything else you like. This is a palpable cheat and a fraud and the manufacturers know it and since they show this willingness to cheat in this respect how can we trust them to be honest in the kind of ingredients they use? Animals die in great numbers every year of cholera and other diseases and what is to prevent these manufacturers obtaining these carcasses and working them up into "first-class butter?" Certainly not their "honesty!" It has been more than hinted that they do so obtain a great deal of their so-called "pure lard" and this suspicion is so well grounded that but few would eat the vile stuff if they knew it, and if it is true that the manufature of the stuff can not be stopped by law then the law should regulate the manufacters so effectually that it could not be offerred under any other name save its own. Make it a penal offence, also attach a heavy fine, said fine to go to the person who gives information which leads to the detection of the offender, thus raising a powerful weapon against the infernal business. Then tax the business to the utmost limit. Cause all packages marketed to be plainly branded, under a heavy penalty. Oblige all who cater to the needs of the hungry public to inform their customers that they use the stuff on their tables, attaching a heavy penalty in case they "forget" to do so. It may be possible that the law is powerless to eradicate this crying evil but we firmly believe that the law is able to give it a mighty black eye if the people will insist upon giving it a good healthy try.

A dweller in the Keystone State, a farmer near Warren, writes to inquire our opinion as to the advisability of his coming to Minnesota. We never advise anybody on that question. We have done it before now but have noticed that everybody don't see with our eyes, consequently some might be disappointed in some things that we natives take as a matter of course. Our friend says that he is a young man, just married a few months and has saved up his earnings as a farm hand until he has enough to enable him to come to Minnesota and have about $1,500 cash left and his wife has $600 that she had saved up before their marriage. One thing impresses us very favorably in the outset, and that is the habit of saving their earnings carefully, which they have both acquired, will be a valuable one to them wherever they may locate and we can hardly get too many of that class of people among us. He further says that they are both thoroughly acquainted with farm life and work and are anxious to find some locality where their little means will secure them a good farm, an ox team, a cow or two and an opportunity to obtain a competence by hard work and economy. Well, now, we should say, if we ever advised anybody to come here that is just the kind of people we should try to induce to come, but as we have gone out of the advising business we can only tell him a little of what can be done and let him decide for himself. Government claims, yet to be had, as a rule, are too far from railway to be desirable, but plenty of land, eligible to good markets, can be had for from $[illegible] to $[illegible] an acre. Railroad lands from $3 to $[illegible] on [illegible] years time at 7 per cent. with a rebate of $3 per acre for cropping on an amount equal to three fourths of the land purchased. The land will produce from 15 to 20 bushels of wheat per acre and can be made by proper cultivation to do very much better. All small grains and vegetables do exceedingly well. Heretofore wheat has been the chief staple production but it has been found that dairying will pay as well and more attention is being paid to that industry. Wheat will bring in this market from 60 to 90 cents, although it has been lower and it has been higher. For a year or two there has been no good market for oats. Barley brings from 35 to 60 cents. But little corn has been raised. Hogs are readily fattened on barley and peas. Groceries, clothing and such things are as cheap here as at many places east. Horses can be bought for from $200 to $500 per span. Oxen are not very generally used but can be had at reasonable figures. [illegible] schools abundant and good. [illegible] we think our [illegible] when we consider the [illegible] improvement we have made in Crookston within a decade and we have very many. The city of Crookston, not ten years old, contains about 5,000 inhabitants, nice graded streets with good wide sidewalks, has eight churches, a large main school building, costing about $25,000 and three ward school houses, lumber and flouring mills, two National Banks and a large number of business houses too numerous to mention, is the county seat of Polk County and the supply depot for a large tract of country. Has one railroad north and south and one west and good prospects for another at an early day. Has a mayor and common council, uses electric lights and is putting on metropolitan airs at a rapid rate. While farming is the chief industry, manufactories have been established and more will be as the times demand. Of course we have our drawbacks to contend against but the most serious of these are such that time will effect a cure. Men do not become millionaires here all of a sudden but by good, steady hard work, good management and economy they do acquire a competency in a short time. We know of some who come without a cent of money to start with to-day are well to do and we know of some who come with comparatively a good start who are to-day not worth a dollar—except what they owe. The majority of these latter cases are men who would never succeed anywhere for some cause or other inherent in themselves. No one who is industrious honest and economical need fear disaster, as that is the very material the country needs to develope its wonderful resources and make it the richest country on earth. We think we have fully answered the questions and will only add that we shall be pleased to give our friend or anyone all the aid in our power at any time and in any manner.

The Milton Nobles Comedy Company presented Phoenix to a small audience on Saturday evening. Mr. Nobles is a born comedian and did himself proud as "Carroll Graves." If we had any fault to find it would be that his articulation was not distinct enough, rendering it impossible to hear all he said in the back part of the hall. Max Fehrman as "Moses Solomon" was inimitable and brought the house down every time. The part of "Leslie Blackburn," the heavy villain was well taken by Frank E. Aiken, while Dollie Nobles left nothing to be desired in her presentation of "Sadie," the flower girl and "Effie Elmore," the actress. The Company go to Winnipeg and may stop on their return.

Christmas Charity.

"He who giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord." It has been our object for some time to contribute in a substantial manner to the poor and needy of this city, and vicinity and in doing so, have concluded to pursue the following plan: We will furnish gratis to each and every poor, or needy family, their Christmas dinner, consisting of turkeys, chickens and the substantials therewith. It is our aim to dispense this charity where it properly belongs, and in view of that fact; beg of the Clergy and others, who feel interested in our object to send such persons to us and have them receive our gifts. We shall be prepared to dispose of the above, the day preceding Christmas, and trust that the people will have no hesitancy in coming forward, and receiving what we most heartily wish and give them. Should they have any delicacy in the matter, if our citizeens will but furnish us with the names of such poor or needy people, we will deliver our charity at their door.

C. O. D. One Price Clothing House.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for January is received, excelling even itself. It is the finest number we ever saw. It has two splendid steel-engravings, either worth the price of the number. Every mother will be in love with the one called "The Little Gardner," and every heart will beat sympathetically with "Homeless." The mammoth colored fashion-plate, engraved on steel, and colored by hand, is a marvel of beauty and taste. A colored pattern in Berlin-work is also given—a most exquisite affair, that would sell at retail for fifty cents. In addition, there are some fifty other illustrations, including several ver fine ones in an article on "Damascus." The stories, if possible, are better than ever. Two thrilling novelets are begun: "The Millionaire's Daughter," by Ann S. Stephens, and "The Cedar Swamp Mystery," by Jane G. Austin. "Under a Cloud," by Lucy H. Hooper, is also an unusually powerful tale. Besides these, there are stories by Frank Lee Benedict, by the author of "Josiah Allen's Wife," and nearly a dozen others, all original. The Work-Table department, with its patterns in embroidery and all kinds of fancy-work, is very full, and profusely illustrated. As we have often said before, every lady ought to take this magazine. The price is but Two Dollars a year, with liberal deductions to clubs. How the publisher can afford it so cheaply is a marvel, and can only be explained by its immense circulation. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for in good faith. Address CHARLES J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Council Proceedings.

City Council met in regular session last night with six members present. President Fontaine in the chair; minutes of previous, regular and special meetings read and approved. After the usual preliminaries, the ordinance fixing the amount for auctioneers was passed, the substance of which, is that parties wishing to run an auction store, must pay a liscense of $100. and those wishing to sell stock, farm machinery or household goods, at auction, the parties auctioneering the same, must pay a liscense of $50. per anum. Liscense to begin on the first of May. Then the question of locating a wood and hay market was brought up, Alderman Bigham proposed Main St., south of Fletcher as a temporary market, when Alderman Terry came down on him like a thousand of brick, with Stuart & Lawrence's lumber yard to back him up; quite a lively discussion issued, which brought out a very instructive and highly entertaining speech from P. J. Lachapelle, in the course of his remarks he tried to show to the council that the centre of Crookston was over by the McDonald brick yard. Is it not strange that in a little thing like locating a hay and wood market, so many have an "ax to grind." A petition for a rebate of $25 per month on skating rink liscense to the band boys was read and on motion by Alderman Bigham, the same was allowed. A committee was appointed to investigate the claim of Mertell & Welsh against the city for injuries to a horse, after which council adjourned.

OFFICE OF CHIEF DEPUTY INSPECTOR,
Duluth, Dec. 6th, 1885.

H. E. Cooke, Crookston:

I am getting along pretty well considering the position I hold, which is a hard one to fill, and do justice, and at the same time, satisfy all concerned. We have a hard crop to grade, on account of smut, shrunken, bleached and frosted wheat. A large amount of the wheat in Northern Dakota and Minnesota is badly frosted and I would advise shippers to send that class of wheat to Minneapolis and have it sold by sample before warm weather sets in. Duluth is now getting to the front in good shape in the wheat business. The wheat in store here shows an increase of over 1,000,000 bushels during the past week, which I dare say is the largest increase of any wheat market in the United States during the same time. The general opinion among grain men here is that wheat is bound to be higher, but with the Minneapolis mills closed and nearly 60,000,000 bushels of wheat in sight, the prospects for a rise soon are not flattering. Receipts in the country will soon fall off, and after this month the visible supply will be apt to decrease and prices will be apt to stiffen, and if I were a farmer I would hang to my wheat for better prices or until the Sheriff called for it. With good crops in the Red River Valley next season I look upon it as one of the most prosperous years the Valley farmers have ever had for the reason that on account of the 40,000,000 bushels of wheat carried over from the crop of 1884, the effects of our wheat crop this year will not be felt until next summer, or about the time another crop comes around.

Respectfully,

JOHN SHELY.

MARRIED

LANGTON—SCRIBNER.—At the Baptist parsonage, in Carman, on Nov. 25th, by the Rev. F. K. Roberts, MR. HENRY LANGTON to MISS MARY SCRIBNER, all of Polk County.

The above notice reached us last week too late for publication.

THE PEOPLE OF LABRADOR.

Their Homes and Occupations—Precarious Living Gained by Fishing and Sealing—Hard and Dangerous Mode of Life With But Few Enjoyments.

If environment moulds a people, then the Labradoreans should have strong traits. The climate, the unique features of the country, the undisputed supremacy of the sea, the isolation from the world—all their circumstances, indeed—are so strongly marked as to be irresistible. The population of the Canadian part of the coast—down to the boundary line at Blanc Sablon—is of French origin, Canadian and Acadian; the Newfoundland part of Labrador—the Strait of Belle Isle and the Atlantic coast—is inhabited by English-speaking people. Moravians and Esquimaux are found in the far North. The French Canadians consist of two classes; a part of them come here every spring to fish for the merchants, and return every fall to their families and small homesteads between Quebec and Gaspe; others live here permanently, own little isolated establishments, and fish on their own account. The Acadians have collected in two principal settlements, Esquimaux Point and Natashquan, where they have their schools, priests, churches, and some other features of village life.

I was fortunate in being storm-stayed at a few of these French Canadian homes, where I found how and then a person able to give me some account of the summer and winter life of the people. To begin with external and material things, the average home of Labrador generally consists of a rough board dwelling, with two rooms and a garret, a small dock and store-house for receiving, cleaning, curing, and storing fish, and two or three open fishing boats. All these buildings perch like anxious water-fowls on the bare rocks; they never impress me as homes, for they make for themselves no niche or place in the surface of the earth; you expect them to be washed or blown away at the next gale—as they sometimes are. For the sake of being near the fishing grounds these shelters are generally established on some outlying island offering a mooring or else a beach for the boats; they seem to be banished from the earth as far as possible seaward. They stand up gaunt, stark, naked in the gales, in the midst of a desert of sea and rocks.

In the best places there may be in a hollow a little sand, enriched with decaying fish, where a few turnips and cabbages manage to show themselves during a brief season. You get a gleam of hope and horror an beholding a guant scaffold about 18 feet high; but it is not a gallows for the ending of life, only a platform for keeping the frozen fish for dogmeat. The interior of these homes is not quite so distressing as these hard surroundings, for the human hand in-doors can make its mark, which is not always a clean one. The furniture, diet, costumes, are rough and common-place; but the people are courteous and kind, and they observe well their religious rites. Their isolation is such that they keep the run of time by marking the days of the week on the door-post. An exception to this dreariness is to be met here and there, at a light-house, or at the home of a merchant. I asked an intelligent fisherman how he could content himself in such a place.

"Well, sir, I expect we're fools to stay here. The worst of it is, our children are growing up as ignorant as we are—just like the dogs. Hardly any of us can read or write. Our houses are too far apart to get the children together for school, excepting at Esquimaux Point, Natashquan, and Mutton Bay. Then, too, we can't see the priest more than once or twice a year, and that's very inconvenient about dying, for pleurisy and consumption are very headstrong. And there's no doctor at all, nor any roots or herbs or medicines. We keep alive on pain-killer and salts that the traders sell. It's a hard life, and we don't live to be very old. We have to do all our own work—jack of all trades, you know. When we came here to live, my wife and I cut all the timber in the winter for building these houses, sawed it by hand in a pit, and in the spring rafted it down the river."

Sealing, one of the peculiar industries of Esquimaux Point and Natashquan, is the most venturesome occupation of the Labrador coast. Seals are taken in three ways—by hunting them along the bays and shores in boats or on the ice, by netting them as fish are taken, and by following them out to sea in vessels and killing them on the floes. I sometimes met a boat sailing about the islands and bays with two men aboard eagerly watching the water and the rocks for the harbor seals. Dressed in coats and skull-caps made of seal-skin, they often creep along the rocks with the motion of the seal, and decoy the animal by calling. Some of them have a trained dog.

"What is he good for in such work?" I inquired. "He can hardly be a retriever for an animal weighing hundreds of pounds."

"Yes, he is, sir; if seals are fat when killed, they float, but even if they are very poor it takes but little to float them. And the dog jumps off and catches them often before they sink, or he'll dive for them in shallow water. When they sink in deep water we often 'jig' them—haul them up with a fish-hook and line. Some seals dive when wounded, and swim off to sea; others turn to the shore and crawl up on a rock to die."

In the spring of the year they hunt seals on the ice when it drifts against the shores. Cape Bauld, Newfoundland, is a noted point for this kind of sealing. The floes coming from the northern seas strike on this cape and divide into two parts; one enters the Strait of Belle Isle, and the other goes southward along the coast of Newfoundland.

The people told me that hundreds of hunters come there in March with dog-sleds from the settlements about Hare Bay, etc. Each gang of men brings a skiff, provisions, etc., and many camp in little huts, and remain till the 8th or 10th of May. They keep a constant watch over the drifting fields of ice. When seals are discovered on a floe touching the shore or near it, the men put off to it in their skiff, haul the boat upon the ice and then go about clubbing the seals. They soon return to the shore with blubber and hides, which they bury under snow for keeping until a trading schooner calls. Sometimes the wind or the current suddenly loosens the ice and carries it out to sea and the sport is then quite perilous. The netting of seals is not unlike the taking of fish in nets. A strong net may be moored off a favorable point or in a channel, or several nets are combined and moored to form a kind of pound. At La Tabatiere Cape Mecatina, a noted resort of seals, the combination of net measures about seven hundred fathoms. When seals are abundant, several hundreds and even thousands were taken there in a season. In a favorable cove a net may be sunk on the bottom until the seals enter; then it is raised with a windlass to close the entrance, and the men in the boats row about the bay and drive the seals into the meshes.

The ocean sealing is the most costly and productive method. Powerful steamers, built expressly for this work, and manned by 200 to 300 men, are sent out every year from St. John's, Newfoundland, and Dundee, Scotland. The sealing fleet of Esquimaux Point and Natashquan numbers about forty small schooners. In 1881 they took 30,000 seals, but in 1882 only 3,000. The strength of these vessels is remarkable. The one I saw building at Esquimaux Point had timbers 12 inches square laid in solid, and bolted one to the other, and the bow was a mass of beams and braces. The oil is tried out in furnaces along the beach; the hides are sent to London for tanning.

The social season of Labrador is the winter. There is no fishing then to keep people at home; cutting wood and a little hunting are the only occupations. Winter lasts about eight months; when the channels among the islands and the bays are frozen over, dog teams can run up and down the coast for 300 miles—from Mingan to Bonne Esperance. People then go visiting; they carry no provisions, for everybody keeps open house, and the little cabins are often packed with people and dogs. The winter homes, as a rule, are back some miles from the coast, where wood is handy. Several families who fish at Whale Head live on a swamp in winter, where the tread of a man along the street shakes every house. The Abbe Ferland says that in his time—about fifty years ago—the hospitality of the coast was such that the people on going away from home used to leave food, and sometimes even money, on the table, and the doors unlocked, that needy travelers might enter and help themselves. But the advent of more travelers in these days has led to more caution and less generosity.

It is not surprising to find all seamen superstitious; the irresistible and whimsical forces of the ocean must appear to them supernatural, and their changing fortunes must often seem the result of some unfathomable mystery. Could events so supernatural as those told by the Ancient Mariner be so appropriate to a landsman. These fishermen are not behind other sea-faring men in either the number of their superstitions or the faith they repose in them. But Labrador, in time, will doubtless produce more astonishing results in this regard; for what other region on earth offers such elemental powers, such weird scenes, such impressive hardships and horrors? Here is a region without a mile of road in 3,000 miles of coast; I never elsewhere appreciated a wheel and a horseshoe. Some of these people have no idea of the shape and size of a cow or a horse, and they flee like hares at the coming of a stranger. I have stated elsewhere that lawlessness often prevails, and that those who are in need do not hesitate to break open stores and help themselves. But their most astonishing traits are laziness and improvidence here in sight of heart-rending hardship and want. Labrador, however, was formerly a sea of plenty; fishing, sealing, trapping, gave even the indolent a sure, though a miserable living. In a few weeks the average man could catch fish enough to exchange with traders for the necessaries of life. This enabled him to idle away three-fourths of the year, and relieved him of any sense of responsibility. But now fish, oil and fur are no longer so abundant. The average family spends about $100 per year to get only the absolute necessities of life; and yet the government is obliged, very often, to distribute flour and pork to prevent actual starvation; and it offers free passage and work to those who will leave the coast. The lazy depend upon the industrious, the provisions are shared, and if navigation is tardy, the first sail is watched for in the spring with eagerness.—C. H. Farnham, in Harper's Magazine for October.

She Found Pietro.

A few days ago there arrived Miss Holga Gerberora from Sabine, a small village in Austria. She carried a small bundle of clothing, and could not speak English. Her face was wan and pale but she was very pretty. She was a finely formed, stalwart young woman, and attracted considerable attention at the depot. When spoken to she produced a card bearing the inscription:

"J. H. Leamer, book-keeper, First National Bank, Columbia, Pa., U. S. A."

She was at once taken in charge by a railroad official and conducted to the bank clerk, who explained that as an agent he received a cash deposit from a stalwart young Hungarian six weeks ago, in payment for a ticket for one passenger from Austria across the Atlantic to this town, and he had enclosed it as per directions, sent it by mail to Miss Holga in Austria, and had given her directions how to come written on the bank's note paper. The next step was to find the young lover who had sent so far for his bride. A messenger was sent to Chestnut Level, where he was employed in the ore mines. After considerable search among the foreign squatters scattered over a wide territory, Pietro Pollaca was found. He was brought to Columbia, where his bride was awaiting him at the residence of Mr. Detwiler. When the two lovers first met a touching scene followed as they clasped each other heartily in a warm embrace. A priest was sent for and the two were married at once. An interpreter was also present, and learned the girl's story as she simply told it:

"I got the letter with the money and ticket from Pietro. My parents did not want me to come away so far from home alone. I believed my lover to be true, and knew he would be waiting for me. I gathered what little clothing I could, and left home to face the world. At Bremen I was put on a steamer. I did not know any one. When I got to New York my money was all gone. They put me on a train and took me too far. Then they sent me back. I could understand no one. For nearly two days I had nothing to eat, and could not beg. O, I wondered whether I could find my Pietro. I thank God I did." The assembled bride wept with joy, and the assembled spectators promised that the young couple should be assisted in their new life.

UNDER THE GALLOWS.

Frightful Condemnation of a Mother by Her Son—What Does it Mean.

Not long ago a weeping mother called to bid good bye to her only son who was soon to be executed.

"Woman," he exclaimed in a momentary frenzy, "Woman, I would never have been here had you done your duty by me when I was young!"

This was a terrible parting! It horrified the spectators, it nearly crazed the conscience stricken mother.

One can scarcely overestimate the mother's influence in the moulding of the character of her offspring. But how often, oh, how often, do mothers seem to ignore this responsibility.

During a recent trip on the rail the writer made the acquaintance of Dr. A. J. Benedict, of Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., a person who has made a study of human development. Referring to the murderous tendency of the times, we asked that eminent man if the outlook was not discouraging?

"It looks so," he said, "but I fancy we have a cause and the remedy for such evils. In my professional career I have found by hard study that we have emerged from savagery by development of the nervous system and the intellectual life, and we return to savagery as we ignore the fact that without the solid, trustworthy nervous system, we cannot hope to save the race. Boys stuff dime novels, and the pistol is to them the only respectably glorious instrument to secure fame. Women read trashy literature and straightway try to murder their husbands and friends by poison. Business men yield to the tempter, and forge and steal and default. Ministers, charmed by beauty, forget the behests of conscience. On every side we see the weakness of personal integrity."

"Do you regard it as a disease?"

"More especially as the result of disease which, however, may be prevented."

"Please define how."

"I cannot now enter into details. Our people can see their bodies, their blood, their bones. They never see their nerves and consequently many do not suppose they have any. The farmer's wife rejoices in a big, physical frame, and yet she dies prematurely. The nerve cannot stand the strain of continual work. The minister falls dead in his pulpit, but he never did a day's physical work in his life. The lawyer faints in the presence of the court and is soon a wreck or a corpse, and yet the work is nerve work. The man of affairs is overcome with apoplexy; the politician and publicist, with Bright's disease. The mind of the untutored man is fired by the exploits of crime and he longs for such fame. These persons overwork or over-excite the nervous system and this fact kills or demoralizes them."

"If all this be so how would you rectify it then?"

"Let me tell you. A few years ago I had a lady patient who was an utter wreck. She was the mother of several children. She lost her mind and imagined she was cursed of God. She was a farmer's wife, and worked early and late. I never saw a finer specimen of physical womanhood than she, but she was a nervous wreck! She became bloodless, had the very worst of female disorders and was in the last stages of albuminuria or Bright's disease. This latter disease works particular havoc with the nervous system and produces insanity and despair. She was insane and desperate and I fear tainted the blood of her offspring with these terrible tendencies. I treated her for several years. One by one the standard remedies of the schools failed, but I finally cured her with Warner's safe cure, and she is to-day strong and well. Yet thousands of women like her, every year bring ill-formed and criminally-inclined children into the world. Is it any wonder that nervous diseases prevail and that the whole moral sense is demoralized? If that remedy were generally used, we would have stronger mothers, stronger children, stronger men and women, and with perfect physical and mental health, crime would decrease and society be more secure."

Such candid opinions are surely worth considering.

The Standard Western Joke.

The following paragraph had the run of the papers:

A Kentucky congressman's pretty daughter visited Washington recently. She went up to President Cleveland upon the occasion of a White House reception, and said: "I'll bet a horse you don't know who I am." The President was equal to the occasion. "No," said he, "I don't know who you are, but I'll bet a horse you are from Kentucky." "Shake," said the young lady, and she has been on good terms with the President ever since.

Now it must be remembered, says the Kansas City Journal, that as long as the young lady had a horse to bet she represented the elite of Kentucky, and was a specimen of its culture, stable culture, we might remark. How different it would have been had she been a Boston girl. She would have said: "I venture to indulge in the unflattering belief that your excellency will fail to accord to me that recognition which the vanity of woman is supposed to demand after having been seen by any one, and especially by one occupying the exalted position you honor. In fact, Mr. President, I am willing to wager a complete set of the Cyclopædia Brittanica that my name has escaped from the recesses of your memory." There are different kinds of "culchaw," and we bet the majority of mankind would give the cake to the Kentucky lass.

In the impeachment trial of Andrew Johnson Mr. Evarts, one of the counsel in the case, took the ground that the present law of succession is unconstitutional. Since the death of Vice President Hendricks, Senator Evarts has reiterated this opinion, saying that the Constitution does not give Congress the power to declare who shall be in the line of succession, but only what officer shall fill the vacancy, and, second, that the same instrument prohibits members of Congress from holding office under the government.

Bowen Smith, who took poison at Sioux Falls a few days ago, is dead. He was owing a large amount of money; his creditors were pushing him for payment, and he saw no way out of his trouble but suicide.

Land Decision Modified.

Commissioner Sparks, of the general land office, has promulgated the following important order, modifying his order of April 3 last, to suspend final action in issue of patents on settlement and improvement claims for examination, with respect to compliance with the law. The order of April 3, 1885, is modified as follows: The commissioner will certify to and request the issue of patents upon all entries not subject to reasonable doubts. (1.) In contests where the rights of successful parties have been established; (2.) where examinations have been made by government agents and no fraud appears; (3) homestead entries where residence of improvement and cultivation have been made according to law, and a board to consist of the assistant commissioner, chief clerk and chief law clerk, is hereby organized to pass upon and report said cases to the commissioner.

Pretty Near Bigamy.

New York Special:—Eighteen months ago William Kruger was married to Miss Rosenbaum in this city. A few months ago Kruger became acquainted with a Miss Blume of Brooklyn, and as she was not aware that he was married, they became engaged. He wrote out and gave to his wife the following paper:

I do hereby certify by the Almighty God above me, that I, William Kruger, will forever release you, Maggie Rosenbaum, that you may marry any man of your choice, and should you die I will take the child which was born to us and try to be a father to it after your death.

After doing this Kruger told his wife that henceforth she must consider him merely a boarder. When Kruger went to Brooklyn his wife followed him and introduced herself to the bride elect. A scene followed, and the woman had Kruger arrested.

Best Shot in the Army.

From a letter received by Lieut. L. R. Hare, the department inspector of rifle practice, it is learned that the best individual score thus far reported during the present year is that made by Maj. Andrew S. Burt, Eighth infantry, who has a national reputation as a crack shot, and is now stationed at Fort Bidwell, Cal. The records show that he has made a perfect score (100) at each of the 200, 500, 600 and 800-yard ranges, 96 at the 800-yard and 98 at the 1,000-yard range, making a total of 594 out of a possible 600, or 99 per cent. The total is slightly in excess of the score made last season at Fort Missoula, Mont., by Lieut. M. C. Wilkinson, Third infantry, who headed the list of sharpshooters with a percentage of 98.32.

Man's inhumanity to woman makes countless thousands mourn, would be an applicable rendering of Pope's line, in view of the indignities she has suffered and pains undergone at the hands of unskillful physicians and quacks. All this embarassment can be avoided and a cure effected by purchasing Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" of your druggist, and taking as directed. Price reduced to one dollar.

A TRIP TO COLFAX SPRINGS.

Collax Springs, on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, is a popular health resort to which many Western people go to try the waters, which are noted for their healing properties. They are claimed to be beneficial for rheumatism and kindred troubles. Mr. Charles P. Griffin, a butcher of Stuart, Ia., recently made a trial of them and, while they appear to have done him some good, he afterwards discovered a cure which proved infinitely more efficacious. He gives this account:

"My attack was a very severe one, and for three months I was compelled to close my store, as I was not able to attend to business at all. My joints were swollen and there did not seem to be any part of my body that did not ache. After suffering in this way until the pain was almost beyond endurance I went to Colfax Springs to try the effects of the waters. The day I left home I had to be carried down stairs. After remaining at the Springs a month I came home feeling somewhat better. A few weeks later, however, I had a relapse which prostrated me the same as before. It was at that time that I learned of Athlophoros. I sent for a bottle of it, and in fifteen minutes after I had taken the first dose I felt the effects of it, and when I had finished my third bottle I was well. I have not had any rheumatism since and have attended to my business every day, which is a thorough test, as I am obliged to be out all kinds of weather and at all seasons of the year. If I had known of Athlophoros in the first place, it would have saved me hundreds of dollars and the detriment to my business in closing my store. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."

Dr. L. D. Rounds, a dentist, for sixteen years a resident of Oskaloosa, but for the past three years of Albin, Ia., relates an equally pleasant experience with Athlophoros:

"Rheumatism," he says, "has been my most serious trouble until about a year ago, when I used a bottle of Athlophoros. Since that time I have not had a twinge of it. Previously I had been subject to sciatic rheumatism for several years, many times so badly that I could scarcely drag myself around. When I commenced with Athlophoros my legs were so stiff that I could scarcely get up the steps to my office. But I am not troubled that way now, and the joints of my legs are as free as they ever were. I had tried so many remedies before that I had no faith in Athlophoros when I began with it, but I changed my mind after I had taken a few doses and found relief. All I used was one bottle. It is the grandest medicine ever heard of for rheumatism. My wife has also used Athlophoros with success equal to mine."

"During the years I have been in business," says O. E. Givins, a druggist at Stuart, Mr. Griffin's home, "I have sold many different kinds of proprietary medicines but none that has given such universal satisfaction as Athlophoros has for rheumatism. I always feel when I hand out a bottle of that medicine to a customer that I am giving him the full value of his money. Since I have seen its wonderful effects among my customers I gladly recommend it in every instance for rheumatism."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us, as directed. ATHLOPHOROS Co., 112 Wall Street, New York.

The reason why so many die with consumption, is because they neglect to use the proper remedy in season. Scrofula of Lungs.

I am now 49 years old, and have suffered for the last fifteen years with a lung trouble. I have spent thousands of dollars to arrest the march of this disease; but temporary relief was all that I obtained. I was unfit for any manual labor for several years. A friend strongly recommended the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), claiming that he himself had been greatly benefitted by its use in some lung troubles. I resolved to try it. The results are remarkable. My cough has left me, my strength has returned, and I weigh sixty pounds more than I ever did in my life. It has been three years since I stopped the use of the medicine, but I have had no return of the disease, and there are no pains or weakness felt in my lungs. I do the hardest kind of mechanical work, and feel as well as I ever felt since I was a boy. These I know, are wonderful statements to make, but I am honest when I say that I owe my existence and health to-day to S. S. S. I would be recreant to the duty I owe to humanity if I failed to bear this cheerful testimony to the merits of this wonderful medicine.

H. C. Gifford, representing Shortwell, Clerihew & Lothman, dry goods, Faribault, was interviewing our merchants last week. He reports trade very much better than he expected to find it.

Wm. H. Vanderbilt, the great railroad king, died suddenly in New York, at 2:20 p. m. on Tuesday. The full particulars have not been received. He was born in 181 makingf him about 64 years of age at the sudden time of his death.

My competitors are complaining hard times while I am kept busy by waiting on customers. C. H. Saake, the jeweler.

Congress re-assembled on Monday. In the Senate John Sherman was elected temporary chairman. Elsewhere will be found a full report of the Congressional proceedings, and this feature will continue during the session. THE JOURNAL intends to give all of the news of the day if we don't lay up a cent.

Remember that my prices are marked in plain figures and guaranteed the lowest for quality. C. H. Saake, Main Street.

Red Lake Falls will vote on the 15th inst. to see whether $10,000 shall be voted to aid in building the Duluth & Manitoba Railroad. Now we shall have a chance to see how badly our neighboring village wants a road. We are informed, by competent authority, that the proposed line has good prospects of success and will be built if a little friendly aid is given now. It would seem to be an opportunity that the village can hardly afford to let pass.

I guarantee a positive saving on every article purchased at my store. C. H. Saake, the jeweler.

Elsewhere in this issue, Messrs. Rosenthal & Wile announce that they will set up a free dinner to all who find it pretty tough sledding to get on. This is a new departure, entirely original with them but we are not surprised at it because it tallies with their well-known reputation for generosity and public spirit. They not only spend a great deal of money in advertising their goods but they keep in stock only the best quality and sell at prices that can not be beat in St. Paul or Minneapolis. This is surprising but we personally know it to be a fact. Their generous offer of a big Christmas dinner to their friends and patrons is not intended in the light of an ostentatious charity but is a spontaneous offer of a generous nature, and made in such a spirit that none can take offense at it. For instance, they know that many a worthy settler has a hard time to pay his debts and support his family and as a consequence can not afford to invest in any superfluous chicken-fixens and sich. To this class they have determined to give a benefit on Christmas Day and they have made ample arrangments to supply the demand.

I do not advertise goods that I cannot show customers and will sell fine goods for the same money as other dealers ask for inferior goods. C. H. Saake, jeweler.

Not long since the body of a man was found at Duluth, in a car of wheat, had been shipped from Lisbon, D. T. No clue to his identy was found but it was evident that he had been murdered for his money. It has been learned since that when the car arrived at Brainerd it was discovered that the seals were broken and the car was re-sealed without further examination, and when it left Fargo it was sealed all right. This would seem to show that the bloody deed was done somewhere between Fargo and Brainerd. Since that event a man was found in a caboose at Perham, covered up with bedding and in an insensible condition. He was placed under the care of a physician and in time recovered sufficient to give an account of himself. He said that he had been robbed of a sum of money and a watch, that the last he he remembers he was a Detroit, drinking with two strangers; he says that he was drugged and remembers nothing to account for how he came in the caboose. Is it not possible that the same gang of thugs had interviewed the man found in the wheat car, had done him up and loaded him into the car when the train reached Detroit? It seems to us that there is similarity enough between the two cases to warrant the presence of a detective in Detroit.

The open secret of my success is easily explained. I keep goods of the highest order and very low prices, besides my facilities being such as to enable me to undersell my competitors. C. H. Saake, opposite Merchants Nat. Bank, Main Street.

M. E. Bartlett reports a loss of seven fine spring pigs by what appears to be blind staggars. They lasted too quick as soon as taken down. A post-mortem examination seemed to show the trouble to be caused by not a sufficient diversity in the food. Barley and oats had been the regular diet, and this event seems to show the necessity of frequent changes.

—Herb has ordered TWO TONS of candy and a TON of assorted nuts for his Christmas stocking—i. e. STOCKING the Branch—and if ever the time was when he should have a larger store that time is now—Christmas 1885. We don't see where he is ever going to put it all for the short time before it will all be sold. And this reminds us that Herb is doing a big business first you know. In a conversation which we had with one of the members of Pratt, Gilman & Francis, in Minneapolis, that gentleman informed us that his firm ships more goods to Herb during the year than to any other retail house in the Northwest. "Why," said he, "in the matter of grapes alone we shipped Herb during the month of October 1200 baskets, and you would be surprised to see his orders filled for the past six months. He seems to be doing a good business and we are glad of it for he deserves every bit of it. Besides having a large and a choice lot of candies, confectionaries and toys, he has a fine assortment of albums, plush goods, vases, cups and saucers, fans and a thousand and one articles to suit the fancy of all. It don't matter what you want Herb can supply it. Call and see.

OVER SIX TONS

ON TO WINNIPEG.

The Construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad Inevitable.

FAVORABLE REPORTS BY MR. OPPERMAN.

Duluth Daily Herald.

When the revival of railroad building begins in earnest, the construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg line must follow as a matter of course. It may not be built for some time beyond the American border at St. Vincent but its extension to the Manitoba capital is also certain. All conditions are favorable to the success of this road and all the leading reasons which impel people to build American railroads might be cited in its favor. It is needed primarily to provide a short haul from the great grain growing regions and the immense area of arable land which lie between this city and Winnipeg. Without this railroad the enormous natural wealth of that region must remain undeveloped, for cultivation cannot be carried on when the cultivators cannot send their produce to market.

Every reason which has been put forward so strongly for the building of a railroad from Crookston to Duluth may be advanced in favor of the Duluth & Winnipeg, which is essential to the completion of that vast railroad system that extends like branches of a great river through the fertile lands of northern Minnesota and Dakota. The difficulty of procuring capital so far for the very best enterprise alone accounts for the tardiness capitalists have displayed in not carrying out this splendid project which with its immense land grant, affords one of the finest opportunities for making a sound investment.

It is known that Mr. Barnum, who is noted as a capitalist and railroad builder, is now interested in the Duluth & Winnipeg enterprise which, after undergoing the delays and disappointments that beset, the best enterprises, may he on the threshold of success.

EXPLORATIONS UNDERTAKEN.

Last summer, Mr. Barnes instructed Mr. Opperman of this city, to examine the region from here to Leech Lake. Mr. Opperman was well qualified for this work by extensive experience as civil engineer on the Lehigh Valley railroad, and by long residence in the oil regions of Pennsylvania on whose geology he prepared a report of great merit for the United States census. It is understood that he has compiled elaborate reports for Mr. Barnes as the result of his explorations. He is very raticent as to the nature of these reports, but he confirms freely some well-known facts regarding the region he traversed.

GOOD OPINIONS OF THE LAND.

Mr. Opperman says that as regards the character of the ground over which this route passes, the soil, growth of timber, etc., that the portion lying east of the Cloquet River is with the exception of some swampy land at the very source of the St. Louis, capable of being converted into excellent farms, which, for grazing, dairying, wheat growing and raising vegetables of almost every kind would, under the management and industry of first-class farmers, compare favorably with many other well established farming districts.

Mr. Opperman says, in effect, also, that a better grade of wheat and as much, if not more, of it to the acre can be raised on this land when properly cultivated than in the noted grain growing country to the Northwest, and as for grass, potatoes and garden vegetables, no one can visit the hillside of Duluth without being impressed with the remarkable fertility and productive porer of the soil, even where scantily between or in shallow layers over the underlying rock. It is a gross mistake, he holds, to suppose that this land is of a barren nature and may not within a reasonably short time be converted into productive farms. Its full development may be retarded by the labor needed to clear the land of the dense growth of heavy timber and underbrush with which it is almost wholly covered, but this growth in itself affords convincing evidence that the soil is not poor.

Mr. Opperman, who looks also at the subject on its commercial aspects, considers that Duluth possesses a crowning advantage as the terminus of this line in her splendid harbor which is entirely protected from the lake by Minnesota Point, a natural bar over seven miles in length, forming a perfect breakwater which would cost millions of dollars if it were to be constructed artificially. Within the bounds of this point there is thirty miles extent which may at reasonable cost for dredging be rendered available for dockage. This frontage might be increased to fifty, or if needs be to seventy-five miles, so that the facilities for commerce are almost unlimited.

Mr. Opperman also confirms the previous surveys as regards the practibility of the projected railroad. No tunnels or expensive bridges will be needed, nor will there be any steep grades. He considers that the land beyond the Mississippi, on the proposed route, is better than that traversed by the Northern Pacific in the region to the south. Regarding Duluth with the calm judgment of an engineer, he considers that she is destined to be the focus of an extensive system of trunk lines which will be extended here by causes as powerful as those which have created the vast system controlled by the Pennsylvania railroad.

TABLEAU AND PANTOMIME.

"IN HOC SIGNO."

The central figure in this tableau is a young person who, having become tired of the vanities of life is seeking real and lasting happiness. "WEALTH" comes with treasures, which are eagerly grasped but soon rejected. "ART" "MUSIC," "BEAUTY" and "LOVE" seek to win her with their various gifts, but all are rejected. "RELIGION" appears, holding up the "Cross," which she accepts, finding in that alone the solace she has been seeking.

Comic Duet—"Happy Married Life"...................Minnie Mix, Willie Cooper.

TABLEAU—"THE SCULPTOR'S STUDIO,"

Showing in the foreground the celebrated Statue of "Galatea." This beautiful piece of marble was fashioned by "Pygmalion" a sculptor of the ancient classic period, and was so idolized by him on account of its great beauty that he prayed daily to the "Gods" to give it life and thereby make his work immortal. His prayer is answered and the tableau shows the marble coming to life. Miss Grace Page will assume the roll of "Galatea."

Juvenile Duet—"When your heart goes pitipat."......Grace and Arthur Beirley

Grand Tableau—"Shower of Gold."

By the kindness of Mr. M. R. Brown we are enabled to present our readers with a synopsis of the proceedings of the Farmers' Congress, taken from the Farmers Home Journal, of Louisville Ky., as follows:

"The organization of Farmers' Congress of the United States held its annual session at Indianapolis, Ind., this week. Over seventy delegates, from twelve States, were present.

Col. Robt. Beverley, of Pa., president, was present, and after calling the Congress to order, introduced Gov. Gray of Indiana, who extended a cordial welcome to his State. The President then returned thanks, on behalf of the Congress, to the Governor and citizens of Indiana. The President then delivered his address which was referred to the appropriate committee.

Col. N. N. Cox of Tennessee, delivered the annual address and received great applause. It was pronounced to be a very able speech. The principal measures befor the Congress were discussed and resolutions adopted as follows:

1. Asking our Secretary of State to instruct our ministers to France and Germany, to use all means to get those governments to remove the restrictions from the imports of American hog products.

2. Requesting the government to extend the Signal Service reports to every station reached by the telegraph.

3. Requesting Congress to restore the tariff on wool to what it was in 1867. This brought out a heated discussion but was adopted by a large majority.

4. Asking Congress to make the office of Commissioner of Agriculture a Cabinet position.

5. Instructing the President of the Congress to lay before the Congress of the United States, the measures adopted at this session.

6. Fixing the Minnesota State Fair Grounds between Minneapolis and St. Paul, and Aug. 31, as the place and time of next annual Congress.

7. Asks Congress to amend and make more effectual its laws for exterminating pleuro-pneumonia by placing the control in the hands of cattle feeders and owners instead of veterinarians.

8. Requesting Congress to pass laws regulating inter-State commerce.

9. Empowering the President of this Congress to appoint four essayists to prepare papers to be read at next session."

Just received at Van Dyke & Co's, the finest line of holiday goods in the city.

We have received a hint of a blackmailing affair which is about to be unmasked, through the nerve of one of our most public-spirited citizens, the full particulars of which are promised us for next issue. The contemptible habit of backbiting is one that, we find, we are not free from even in this great Northwest and we are truly glad that there is one man with independence enough to stand up to maintain his integrity.

Call early and make your selection of Christmas and New Year's cards, at Van Dyke & Co's.

We send out this week a lot of complimentory papers, and invite all who get them to call in and subscribe, or send in your order. Remember you get two papers for the price of one.

Arne Higdem was interviewing his old frieds in the city this week.

For fine albums, toilet cases and holiday cards go to Van Dyke & Co.

At the coming Catholic Fair a beautiful silk banner is to be voted. Post No. 90 G. A. R., St. John Baptiste, and other organizations will contest.

If you want to purchase a fine Christmas or New Year's card go to Van Dyke & Co.

The grand jury have indicted John Hutchinson the East Grand Forks murderer.

Cards, cards, cards, cheaper than ever at Van Dyke & Co.

On Wednesday the grand jury found indictments against P. J. LaChapelle, Chris Greenhalgh and a man known as Dutchy, for blackmail.

It is with pleasure that we point to the broad gauge ad of Herb's Branch this week. Commencing, as Herb did, with only a pack of fire-crackers and a glass of cider and building up such a splendid trade as he has, we think Herb has reason to feel very well satisfied with the results. In the outset he occupied a small corner in the post-office, now he has a large business on Main and Robert Streets his name has become a household word and everybody knows where "Herb's Branch" is. Rest assured that anyone liberal enough to take a whole page ad. is liberal enough to deal honorably and justly by all. Go to Herb's Branch and see his grand display.

ROUND HOME.

Andrew Eaken is away for St. Paul. This means more goods and lots of em.

J. C. Davis, the St. Hilaire boomer favored our city with a visit this week. He's waked up.

John Dowling went to St. Paul on Friday evening to meet his better half who has been away on a visit.

$500 to loan on a good farm. No bonus! STEENERSON & MCMANUS.

John Crawford & Son have a one cent counter, which is the delight of the little folks. Oh such a sight. The thousand and one articles there displayed and Oh, My! All for ONE CENT——apiece.

H. C. Gifford, representing Shortwell, Clarihew & Lothman, dry goods, Faribault, was interviewing our merchants last week. He reports trade very much better than he expected to find it.

Wm. H. Vanderbilt, the great railroad king, died suddenly in New York at 2:20 p. m. on Tuesday. The full particulars have not been received. He was born in 181 making him about 64 years of age at the sudden time of his death.

My competitors are complaining hard times while I am kept busy by waiting on customers. C. H. Saake, the jeweler.

Congress re-assembled on Monday. In the Senate John Sherman was elected temporary chairman. Elsewhere will be found a full report of the Congressional proceedings, and this feature will continue during the session. THE JOURNAL intends to give all of the news of the day if we don't lay up a cent.

Remember that my prices are marked in plain figures and guaranteed the lowest for quality. C. H. Saake, Main Street.

Red Lake Falls will vote on the 15th inst. to see whether $10,000 shall be voted to aid in building the Duluth & Manitoba Railroad. Now we shall have a chance to see how badly our neighboring village wants a road. We are informed, by competent authority, that the proposed line has good prospects of success and will be built if a little friendly aid is given now. It would seem to be an opportunity that the village can hardly afford to let pass.

I guarantee a positive saving on every article purchased at my store. C. H. Saake, the jeweler.

Elsewhere in this issue, Messrs. Rosenthal & Wile announce that they will set up a free dinner to all who find it pretty tough sledding to get on. This is a new departure, entirely original with them but we are not surprised at it because it tallies with their well-known reputation for generosity and public spirit. They not only spend a great deal of money in advertising their goods but they keep in stock only the best quality and sell at prices that can not be beat in St. Paul or Minneapolis. This is surprising but we personally know it to be a fact. Their generous offer of a big Christmas dinner to their friends and patrons is not intended in the light of an ostentatious charity but is a spontaneous offer of a generous nature, and made in such a spirit that none can take offense at it. For instance, they know that many a worthy settler has a hard time to pay his debts and support his family and as a consequence can not afford to invest in any superfluous chicken fixens and such. To this class they have determined to give a benefit on Christmas Day and they have made ample arrangements to supply the demand.

I do not advertise goods that I can not show customers and will sell fine goods for the same money as other dealers ask for inferior goods. C. H. Saake, jeweler.

Not long since the body of a man was found at Duluth, in a car of wheat, had been shipped from Lisbon, D. T. No clue to his identity was found but it was evident that he had been murdered for his money. It has been learned since that when the car arrived at Brainerd it was discovered that the seals were broken and the car was resealed without further examination and when it left Fargo it was sealed all right. This would seem to show that the bloody deed was done somewhere between Fargo and Brainerd. Since that event a man was found in a caboose at Perham, covered up with bedding and in an insensible condition. He was placed under the care of a physician and in time recovered sufficient to give an account of himself. He said that he had been robbed of a sum of money and a watch, that the last he remembers he was at Detroit drinking with two strangers; he says that he was drugged and remembers nothing to account for how he came in the caboose. It is not impossible that the same gang of thugs had interviewed the man found in the wheat car, had done him up and loaded him into the car when the train reached Detroit. It seems to us that there is similarity enough between the two cases to warrant the presence of a detective in Detroit.

The Open Secret of my success is easily explained. I keep goods of the highest order and very low prices, the [illegible] my facilities being such as to enable me to undersell my competitors. C. H. Saake, opposite Merchants [illegible] Bank, Main Street.

M. E. Bartlett reports a loss of seven fine spring pigs by what appears to be blind staggers. They lasted too quick as soon as taken down. A post-mortem examination seemed to show the trouble to be caused by not a sufficient diversity in the food. Barley and oats had been the regular diet, and this event seems to show the necessity of frequent changes.

ON TO WINNIPEG.

The Construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad Inevitable.

FAVORABLE REPORTS BY MR. OPPERMAN, [illegible]

Duluth Daily Herald.

When the revival of railroad building begins in earnest, the construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg line must follow as a matter of course. It may not be built for some time beyond the American border at St. Vincent but its extension to the Manitoba capital is also certain. All conditions are favorable to the success of this road and all the leading reasons which impel people to build American railroads might be cited in its favor. It is needed primarily to provide a short haul from the great grain growing regions and the immense area of arable land which lie between this city and Winnipeg. Without this railroad the enormous natural wealth of that region must remain undeveloped, for cultivation cannot be carried on when the cultivators cannot send their produce to market.

Every reason which has been put forward so strongly for the building of a railroad from Crookston to Duluth may be advanced in favor of the Duluth & Winnipeg, which is essential to the completion of that vast railroad system that extends like branches of a great river through the fertile lands of northern Minnesota and Dakota. The difficulty of procuring capital so far for the very best enterprise alone accounts for the tardiness capitalists have displayed in not carrying out this splendid project which with its immense land grant, affords one of the finest opportunities for making a sound investment.

It is known that Mr. Barnum, who is noted as a capitalist and railroad builder, is now interested in the Duluth & Winnipeg enterprise which, after undergoing the delays and disappointments that beset the best enterprises, may be on the threshold of success.

EXPLORATIONS UNDERTAKEN.

Last summer, Mr. Barnes instructed Mr. Opperman of this city, to examine the region from here to Leech Lake. Mr. Opperman was well qualified for this work by extensive experience as civil engineer on the Lehigh Valley railroad, and by long residence in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, on whose geology he prepared a report of great merit for the United States census. It is understood that he has compiled elaborate reports for Mr. Barnes as the result of his explorations. He is very reticent as to the nature of these reports, but he confirms freely some well-known facts regarding the region he traversed.

GOOD OPINIONS OF THE LAND.

Mr. Opperman says that as regards the character of the ground over which this route passes, the soil, growth of timber, etc., that the portion lying east of the Cloquet River is with the exception of some swampy land at the very source of the St. Louis, capable of being converted into excellent farms, which for grazing, dairying, wheat growing and raising vegetables of almost every kind would, under the management and industry of first-class farmers, compare favorably with many other well established farming districts.

Mr. Opperman says, in effect, also, that a better grade of wheat, and as much, if not more, of it to the acre can be raised on this land when properly cultivated than in the noted grain growing country to the Northwest, and as for grass, potatoes and garden vegetables, no one can visit the hillside of Duluth without being impressed with the remarkable fertility and productive power of the soil, even where scantily between or in shallow layers over the underlying rock. It is a gross mistake, he holds, to suppose that this land is of a barren nature and may not within a reasonably short time be converted into productive farms. Its full development may be retarded by the labor needed to clear the land of the dense growth of heavy timber and underbrush with which it is almost wholly covered, but this growth in itself affords convincing evidence that the soil is not poor. [illegible]

Mr. Opperman, who looks also at the subject on its commercial aspects, considers that Duluth possesses a growing advantage as the terminus of this line in her splendid harbor, which is entirely protected from the lake by Minnesota Point, a natural bar over seven miles in length, forming a perfect breakwater, which would cost millions of dollars if it were to be constructed artificially. Within the bounds of this point there are thirty miles extent which may at reasonable cost for dredging be rendered available for dockage. This frontage might be increased to fifty, if need be, or to seventy-five miles, so that the facilities for commerce are almost unlimited.

Mr. Opperman's work confirms the previous surveys as regards the practicability of the projected railroad. No tunnels or expensive bridges will be needed nor will there be any steep grades. He considers that the land beyond the Mississippi on the proposed route is better than that traversed by the Northern Pacific in the region to the south. Regarding Duluth with the [illegible] the Pennsylvania railroad.

TABLEAU AND PANTOMIME.

"IN HOC SIGNO."

The central figure in this tableau is a young person who, having become tired of the vanities of life is seeking real and lasting happiness. "WEALTH" comes with treasures, which are eagerly grasped, but soon rejected. "ART" "MUSIC," "BEAUTY" and "LOVE" seek to win her with their various gifts, but all are rejected. "RELIGION" appears, holding up the "Cross," which she accepts, finding in that alone the solace she has been seeking.

Comic Duet—"Happy Married Life" .... Minnie Mix, Willie Cooper.

TABLEAU—"THE SCULPTOR'S STUDIO."

Showing in the foreground the celebrated Statue of "Galatea." This beautiful piece of marble was fashioned by "Pygmalion" a sculptor of the ancient classic period, and was so idolized by him on account of its great beauty that he prayed daily to the "Gods" to give it life and thereby make his work immortal. His prayer is answered and the tableau shows the marble coming to life. Miss Grace Page will assume the roll of "Galatea."

Juvenile Duet—"When your heart goes pitipat." ...... Grace and Arthur Beirley

Grand Tableau—"Shower of Gold."

By the kindness of Mr. M. R. Brown we are enabled to present our readers with a synopsis of the proceedings of the Farmers' Congress, taken from the Farmers Home Journal, of Louisville Ky., as follows:

"The organization of Farmers' Congress of the United States held its annual session at Indianapolis, Ind., this week. Over seventy delegates, from twelve States, were present.

Col. Robt. Beverley, of Pa., president, was present, and after calling the Congress to order, introduced Gov. Gray, of Indiana, who extended a cordial welcome to his State. The President then returned thanks, on behalf of the Congress, to the Governor and citizens of Indiana. The President then delivered his address which was referred to the appropriate committee.

Col. N. N. Cox of Tennessee, delivered the annual address and received great applause. It was pronounced to be a very able speech. The principal measures befor the Congress were discussed and resolutions adopted as follows:

1. Asking our Secretary of State to instruct our ministers to France and Germany to use all means to get those governments to remove the restrictions from the imports of American hog products.

2. Requesting the government to extend the Signal Service reports to every station reached by the telegraph.

3. Requesting Congress to restore the tariff on wool to what it was in 1867. This brought out a heated discussion but was adopted by a large majority.

4. Asking Congress to make the office of Commissioner of Agriculture a Cabinet position.

5. Instructing the President of the Congress to lay before the Congress of the United States, the measures adopted at this session.

6. Fixing the Minnesota State Fair Grounds between Minneapolis and St. Paul, and Aug. 31, as the place and time of next annual Congress.

7. Asks Congress to amend and make more effectual its laws for exterminating pleuro-pneumonia by placing the control in the hands of cattle feeders and owners instead of veterinarians.

8. Requesting Congress to pass laws regulating Inter-State commerce.

9. Empowering the President of this Congress to appoint four essayists to prepare papers to be read at next session."

Just received at Van Dyke & Co's, the finest line of holiday goods in the city.

We have received a hint of a blackmailing affair which is about to be unmasked through the nerve of one of our most public spirited citizens, the full particulars of which are promised us for next issue. It is with pleasure that we point to the broad gauge ad of Herb's Branch this week. Commencing, as Herb did, with only a pack of fire-crackers and a glass of cider and building up such a splendid trade as he has, we think Herb has reason to feel very well satisfied with the results. In the outset he occupied a small corner in the post-office, now he has a large business on Main and Robert Streets his name has become a household word and everybody knows where "Herb's Branch" is. Rest assured that anyone liberal enough to take a whole page ad. is liberal enough to deal honorably and justly by all. Go to Herb's Branch and see his grand display.

This is a new departure, entirely original with them but we are not surprised at it because it tallies with their well-known reputation for generosity and public spirit. They not only spend a great deal of money in advertising their goods but they keep in stock only the best quality and sell at prices that can not be beat in St. Paul or Minneapolis. This is surprising but we personally know it to be a fact. Their generous offer of a big Christmas dinner to their friends and patrons is not intended in the light of an ostentatious charity but is a spontaneous offer of a generous nature, and made in such a spirit that none can take offense at it. For instance, they know that many a worthy settler has a hard time to pay his debts and support his family and as a consequence can not afford to invest in any superfluous chicken-fixens and sich. To this class they have determined to give a benefit on Christmas Day and they have made ample arrangments to supply the demand.

I do not advertise goods that I cannot show customers and will sell fine goods for the same money as other dealers ask for inferior goods. C. H. Saake, jeweler.

Not long since the body of a man was found at Duluth, in a car of wheat, had been shipped from Lisbon, D. T. No clue to his identy was found but it was evident that he had been murdered for his money. It has been learned since that when the car arrived at Brainerd it was discovered that the seals were broken and the car was resealed without further examination, and when it left Fargo it was sealed all right. This would seem to show that the bloody deed was done somewhere between Fargo and Brainerd. Since that event a man was found in a caboose at Perham, covered up with bedding and in an insensible condition. He was placed under the care of a physician and in time recovered sufficient to give an account of himself. He said that he had been robbed of a sum of money and a watch, that the last he he remembers he was a Detroit, drinking with two strangers; he says that he was drugged and remembers nothing to account for how he came in the caboose. Is it not possible that the same gang of thugs had interviewed the man found in the wheat car, had done him up and loaded him into the car when the train reached Detroit? It seems to us that there is similarity enough between the two cases to warrant the presence of a detective in Detroit.

The open secret of my success is easily explained. I keep goods of the highest order and very low prices, besides my facilities being such as to enable me to undersell my competitors. C. H. Saake, opposite Merchants Nat. Bank, Main Street.

What did you say? Can't find a teasett "toney" enough? Go and see that silver sett at Berthiaume Bro's, 12 pieces—AND ONLY NINETY-FIVE DOLLARS. Geewhilikins! it would take a thoroughbred Jersey cow to furnish cream slick enough to do with that outfit.

We received a neatly gotten up invitation to attend the opening reception of the Hotel Ryan, in St. Paul, which event took place last evening but owing to circumstances over which we had no control were unable to be present. As near as we can ascertain it was a grand affair.

M. E. Bartlett reports a loss of seven fine spring pigs by what appears to be blind staggars. They lasted too quick as soon as taken down. A post-mortem examination seemed to show the trouble to be caused by not a sufficient diversity in the food. Barley and oats had been the regular diet, and this event seems to show the necessity of frequent changes.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of he State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it, with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

We should all turn out to the Little Red Riding Hood entertainment tomorrow evening. The little folks have become quite proficient, showing the effects of great skill in their training and will do themselves credit. They should be greeted by a large house and and we think they will be as everybody and his folks cal-lates to be thar.

We must have gilt-edge security and "real farmer" borrowers, but you betcher life to such we can make any loan to suit, and won't burst him by charging an exhorbitant commission.

We congratulate all who have aided us in this matter on being able to read a paper that has been paid for in advance. Remember you get two papers for one price this year, and while you are helping us a great deal you are getting full value received in every particular. Our premium paper, Farm, Stock and Home, is one of the best if not the best agricultural papers in the State and you get 24 numbers of it and 52 numbers of THE JOURNAL for only the price of THE JOURNAL paid one year in advance. Send in your orders early.

Herb has ordered TWO TONS of candy and a TON of assorted nuts for his Christmas stocking—i.e. STOCKING the Branch—and if ever the time was when he should have a larger store that time is now—Christmas 1885. We don't see where he is ever going to put it all for the short time before it will all be sold. And this reminds us that Herb is doing a big business first you know. In a conversation which we had with one of the members of Pratt, Gilman & Francis, in Minneapolis, that gentleman informed us that his firm ships more goods to Herb during the year than to any other retail house in the Northwest. "Why," said he, "in the matter of grapes alone, we shipped Herb during the month of October 1200 baskets, and you would be surprised to see his orders filled for the part six months. He seems to be doing a good business and we are glad of it, for he deserves every bit of it!" Besides having a large and a choice lot of candies, confectionaries and toys, he has a fine assortment of albums, plush goods, vases, cups and saucers, fans and a thousand and one articles to suit the fancy of all. It don't matter what you want Herb can supply it. Call and see.

OVER SIX TONS

ON TO WINNIPEG.

The Construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad Inevitable.

FAVORABLE REPORTS BY MR. OPPERMAN.

Duluth Daily Herald.

When the revival of railroad building begins in earnest, the construction of the Duluth & Winnipeg line must follow as a matter of course. It may not be built for some time beyond the American border at St. Vincent but its extension to the Manitoba capital is also certain. All conditions are favorable to the success of this road and all the leading reasons which impel people to build American railroads might be cited in its favor. It is needed primarily to provide a short haul from the great grain growing regions and the immense area of arable land which lie between this city and Winnipeg. Without this railroad the enormous natural wealth of that region must remain undeveloped, for cultivation cannot be carried on when the cultivators cannot send their produce to market.

Every reason which has been put forward so strongly for the building of a railroad from Crookston to Duluth may be advanced in favor of the Duluth & Winnipeg, which is essential to the completion of that vast railroad system that extends like branches of a great river through the fertile lands of northern Minnesota and Dakota. The difficulty of procuring capital so far for the very best enterprise alone accounts for the tardiness capitalists have displayed in not carrying out this splendid project which with its immense land grant, affords one of the finest opportunities for making a sound investment.

It is known that Mr. Barnum, who is noted as a capitalist and railroad builder, is now interested in the Duluth & Winnipeg enterprise which, after undergoing the delays and disappointments that beset the best enterprises, may be on the threshold of success.

EXPLORATIONS UNDERTAKEN.

Last summer, Mr. Barnes instructed Mr. Opperman of this city, to examine the region from here to Leech Lake. Mr. Opperman was well qualified for this work by extensive experience as civil engineer on the Lehigh Valley railroad, and by long residence in the oil regions of Pennsylvania on whose geology he prepared a report of great merit for the United States census. It is understood that he has compiled elaborate reports for Mr. Barnes as the result of his explorations. He is very raticent as to the nature of these reports, but he confirms freely some well-known facts regarding the region he traversed.

GOOD OPINIONS OF THE LAND.

Mr. Opperman says that as regards the character of the ground over which this route passes, the soil, growth of timber, etc., that the portion lying east of the Cloquet River is with the exception of some swampy land at the very source of the St. Louis, capable of being converted into excellent farms, which, for grazing, dairying, wheat growing and raising vegetables of almost every kind would, under the management and industry of first-class farmers, compare favorably with many other well established farming districts.

Mr. Opperman says, in effect, also, that a better grade of wheat and as much, if not more, of it to the acre can be raised on this land when properly cultivated than in the noted grain growing country to the Northwest, and as for grass, potatoes and garden vegetables, no one can visit the hillside of Duluth without being impressed with the remarkable fertility and productive porer of the soil, even where scantily between or in shallow layers over the underlying rock. It is a gross mistake, he holds, to suppose that this land is of a barren nature and may not within a reasonably short time be converted into productive farms. Its full development may be retarded by the labor needed to clear the land of the dense growth of heavy timber and underbrush with which it is almost wholly covered, but this growth in itself affords convincing evidence that the soil is not poor.

Mr. Opperman, who looks also at the subject on its commercial aspects, considers that Duluth possesses a crowning advantage as the terminus of this line in her splendid harbor which is entirely protected from the lake by Minnesota Point, a natural bar over seven miles in length, forming a perfect breakwater which would cost millions of dollars if it were to be constructed artificially. Within the bounds of this point there is thirty miles extent which may at reasonable cost for dredging be rendered available for dockage. This frontage might be increased to fifty, or if needs be to seventy-five miles, so that the facilities for commerce are almost unlimited.

Mr. Opperman also confirms the previous surveys as regards the practibility of the projected railroad. No tunnels or expensive bridges will be needed, nor will there be any steep grades. He considers that the land beyond the Mississippi, on the proposed route, is better than that traversed by the Northern Pacific in the region to the south. Regarding Duluth with the calm judgment of an engineer, he considers that she is destined to be the focus of an extensive system of trunk lines which will be extended here by causes as powerful as those which have created the vast system controlled by the Pennsylvania railroad.

TABLEAU AND PANTOMIME.

"IN HOC SIGNO."

The central figure in this tableau is a young person who, having become tired of the vanities of life is seeking real and lasting happiness. "WEALTH" comes with treasures, which are eagerly grasped, but soon rejected. "ART" "MUSIC," "BEAUTY" and "LOVE" seek to win her with their various gifts, but all are rejected. "RELIGION" appears, holding up the "Cross," which she accepts, finding in that alone the solace she has been seeking.

Comic Duet—"Happy Married Life" .... Minnie Mix, Willie Cooper.

TABLEAU—"THE SCULPTOR'S STUDIO,"

Showing in the foreground the celebrated Statue of "Galatea." This beautiful piece of marble was fashioned by "Pygmalion" a sculptor of the ancient classic period; and was so idolized by him on account of its great beauty that he prayed daily to the "Gods" to give it life and thereby make his work immortal. His prayer is answered and the tableau shows the marble coming to life. Miss Grace Page will assume the roll of "Galatea."

Juvenile Duet—"When your heart goes pitipat." .... Grace and Arthur Beirley

Grand Tableau—"Shower of Gold."

By the kindness of Mr. M. R. Brown we are enabled to present our readers with a synopsis of the proceedings of the Farmers' Congress, taken from the Farmers Home Journal, of Louisville Ky., as follows:

"The organization of Farmers' Congress of the United States held its annual session at Indianapolis, Ind., this week. Over seventy delegates, from twelve States, were present.

Col. Robt. Beverley, of Pa., president, was present, and after calling the Congress to order, introduced Gov. Gray of Indiana, who extended a cordial welcome to his State. The President then returned thanks, on behalf of the Congress, to the Governor and citizens of Indiana. The President then delivered his address which was referred to the appropriate committee.

Col. N. N. Cox of Tennessee, delivered the annual address and received great applause. It was pronounced to be a very able speech. The principal measures befor the Congress were discussed and resolutions adopted as follows:

1. Asking our Secretary of State to instruct our ministers, to France and Germany, to use all means to get those governments to remove the restrictions from the imports of American hog products.

2. Requesting the government to extend the Signal Service reports to every station reached by the telegraph.

3. Requesting Congress to restore the tariff on wool to what it was in 1867. This brought out a heated discussion but was adopted by a large majority.

4. Asking Congress to make the office of Commissioner of Agriculture a Cabinet position.

5. Instructing the President of the Congress to lay before the Congress of the United States, the measures adopted at this session.

6. Fixing the Minnesota State Fair Grounds between Minneapolis and St. Paul, and Aug. 31, as the place and time of next annual Congress.

7. Asks Congress to amend and make more effectual its laws for exterminating pleuro-pneumonia by placing the control in the hands of cattle feeders and owners instead of veterinarians.

8. Requesting Congress to pass laws regulating inter-State commerce.

9. Empowering the President of this Congress to appoint four essayists to prepare papers to be read at next session."

Just received at Van Dyke & Co's, the finest line of holiday goods in the city.

We have received a hint of a blackmailing affair which is about to be unmasked, through the nerve of one of our most public-spirited citizens, the full particulars of which are promised us for next issue. The contemptible habit of backbiting is one that, we find, we are not free from even in this great Northwest and we are truly glad that there is one man with independence enough to stand up to maintain his integrity.

Call early and make your selection of Christmas and New Year's cards at Van Dyke & Co's.

We send out this week a lot of complimentary papers, and invite all who get them to call in and subscribe, or send in your order. Remember you get two papers for the price of one.

On Wednesday the grand jury found indictments against P. J. LaChapelle, Chris Greenhalgh and a man known as Dutchy, for blackmail.

It is with pleasure that we point to the broad gauge ad of Herb's Branch this week. Commencing, as Herb did, with only a pack of fire-crackers and a glass of cider and building up such a splendid trade as he has, we think Herb has reason to feel very well satisfied with the results. In the outset he occupied a small corner in the post-office, now he has a large business on Main and Robert Streets his name has become a household word and everybody knows where "Herb's Branch" is. Rest assured that anyone liberal enough to take a whole page ad. is liberal enough to deal honorably and justly by all. Go to Herb's Branch and see his grand display.

The report of the statistician of the agricultural department shows that since 1870 the acreage devoted to cereals in the United States has increased from 69,000,000 acres to 180,000,000, or 97 per cent.

St. Paul is to have a grand ice-palace—similar to the ice-palaces of Montreal which have usually attracted many thousands of visitors—but St. Paul is in trouble lest the ice should not be of the right thickness. Her citizens should be consoled by the reflection that the ice crop has never yet failed within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

Wood intended for paper pulp is shaved so finely by an ingenious machine devised for the purpose that it takes 750 thicknesses to make an inch. The fineness of this cutting can be appreciated when it is understood that 200 thicknesses of ordinary paper make an inch. The cutting knives of the machine are kept sharpened while in operation by a unique arrangement of whet stones which are constantly at work upon them.

The proposition to reduce the Mexican standing army to 15,000 men seems to meet the approval of everybody not connected with the Administration. At present, with a population less than one-fifth that of the United States, Mexico has a standing army of 22,000 men, kept up at an annual cost of over $8,000,000. The Mexicans consider this number of men unnecessary and their yearly cost extravagant.

There is another through railway line to the Pacific just completed. The Southern California railroad company's line has been extended to San Diego, on the southern coast, its eastern connection being the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road. San Diego is preparing for a great celebration of the event. Counting the Canadian Pacific, there are now five lines to the Pacific, but the absence of competition is everywhere remarked. The traveler can have a choice of routes but not of prices, which are nearly identical with all.

Mr. Robert Bonner, it is said, has made provisions to continue his story paper after his death in the same style in which he has been conducting it for about thirty years. He has begun to collect extra material with the design of securing enough to last three years after his death. It is also said about copy for one year, or fifty-two numbers has been accumulated. Pursuing the same line of reasoning, some of our magazines must be in pretty good shape for running another century. Some of them have enough material in their safes to last them four and five years.

According to the report of the British Registrar General, the highest rate of mortality among any class of people is that of those engaged in the liquor trade, while it is lowest with clergymen. Taking 1,000 as the average mortality rate among males, the deaths among clergymen are 550, among publicans 1,521, and among inn and hotel servants 2,205. As the report truly says, the mortality of men who are directly concerned in the liquor trade is truly appalling. The Registrar finds his statistics amply confirmed by the records of the Scottish Amicable Life Insurance Society. These show that the mortality among inn-keepers and publicans is 52 per cent. above the mortality of all males.

A mysterious case of small-pox in Northern New York is believed to be traceable to the use of certain bank bills which came from Montreal. The supposition as to the origin of this particular case may be incorrect, but there is much room for speculation afforded by the incident, since people are every day compelled to handle greasy silver coin and filthy bills which have, perhaps, passed through the hands and pockets of persons afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases. There is no known means of prevention, since no one can decline to receive whatever change may be offered to him, provided it is correct in amount and of legal value, but the thought that one may be handling or carrying in his pocket-book the germs of disease, is far from pleasant.

General Hancock's recent visit to the historic field at Gettysburg brings vividly to the mind of a writer which he designates as one of the greatest of the lost opportunities of the war, and one which no doubt would have been utilized had not a rebel bullet found its billet in Hancock's body. As he was borne from the field wounded, after the repulse of the rebel charge under Pickett, Hancock sent a message to Meade urging that the whole Union line advance and pierce the Confederate position in the confusion of the retreating column. Lee and the rebellion could have been crushed at one blow, but Meade would not take the responsibility, and Lee crossed the Potomac leisurely, though with only three rounds in his caissons and almost empty cartridge boxes. The great opportunity, according to Hancock's belief, was lost.

General News Condensed.

A Plucky Badger Boy Kills Two Indians.

News has reached Marshfield, Wis., of a startling tragedy that occurred about ten miles west of there, in the dense forests near Nasonville, Wednesday 2nd inst. It appears that a boy, about sixteen years old, named George Andrews, was out hunting deer, and, striking a trail, followed it until the deer was started, when Andrews fired twice, badly wounding the deer, which, nevertheless broke and ran. Young Andrews at once followed the trail, and, after about two hours' tramping, on coming to a small clearing found two Indians busily engaged in dressing the deer. The Indians had previously killed Andrews' dog. Young Andrews, however, nothing daunted, at once ordered them to abandon the deer, telling them he had shot it, but they refused. On the boy again demanding the deer, one Indian advanced toward him with a knife and told him to leave or they would "nepo" (kill) him. But young Andrews, instead of retreating, at once shot the advancing warrior dead, shooting him through the heart. The other Indian jumped for his gun, but young Andrews was too quick and shot him through the head, killing him instantly. He then went to the settlement and told his story, which was at first discredited, but, on going to the spot, the dead bodies of the braves were found where they had fallen. The pluck and clear grit of young Andrews, who is small in size and only sixteen years old, are warmly praised, and he is the hero of the hour. He has not been arrested, and doubtless will not be. The Indians belonged to a wandering band of Chippewas, here on a deer hunt.

On the first bill day in the senate Senator Dawes will introduce a bill to open the Big Sioux reservation. It is substantially the same as the bill he introduced in the first session of the Forty-eighth congress, which passed the senate April 16, 1884, and was never brought to a vote in the house. Some amendments have been made in the bill to be introduced this session, but they are material. The proposition is to open to settlement the region lying between the Cheyenne and White rivers, and reduces the reservation around the Cheyenne agency. In all, about 18,000 square miles are embraced in the tract proposed to be opened.

The presidential succession bill which the republican caucus senators decided to introduce in the senate, is that known as the Honr bill of the last congress. It confers the succession to the president and vice president upon the secretary of state, or, if that office is vacant, then upon the secretary of the treasury, the succession passes to the other members of the cabinet in turn in cases of vacancy. The electoral count bill also to be reintroduced by order of the republican caucus, is that known as the Edmunds bill of the last congress. Its pivotal feature is a provision that each state may by its own tribunals determine controversies with regard to its electoral vote.

The Liberals will outnumber the Tories and Parnelites combined, and will be the only party independent of unworthy motives to court the Parnelites for support.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

Promptly at noon on the 7th, Gen. McCook, secretary of the senate, called the body to order and prayer was offered by the chaplain, Rev. Mr. Huntly, after which Mr. Edmunds offered a resolution declaring John Sherman the president pro tem of the senate.

Mr. Voorhees moved to amend, to strike out the name of John Sherman and insert instead the name of Isham Harris.

The amendment was voted down by a party vote—yeas 29, nays 34, and Sherman was without division declared duly elected president pro tem.

Mr. Sherman and Mr. Harris both abstained from voting.

Upon the request of Secretary McCook Mr. Sherman was escorted to the chair by Edmunds and Voorhees and the oath of office was administered to him by Edmunds.

Mr. Cullom presented the credentials of Mr. Logan's re-election as senator from Illinois, and Mr. Pike presented those of Mr. Blair from New Hampshire.

The credentials were received, and Messrs. Logan and Blair were at once sworn in by the president.

Noon (12 o'clock) was fixed as the hour of daily meeting unless otherwise ordered.

The secretary was instructed to inform the president of the United States and the house of representatives that the senate had chosen John Sherman as president pro tempore.

Messrs. Edmunds and Harris were appointed a committee to join such committee as may be appointed by the house of representatives to wait upon the president and inform him that a quorum of each house had assembled and that congress was ready to receive any communication that he may be pleased to make.

Mr. Voorhees offered the resolutions regarding the death of Mr. Hendricks, prefacing them with the remark that in doing so he was performing the sadest duty of his public life.

Mr. Harrison then moved an immediate adjournment of the senate, "out of respect to the memory of the late vice president."

At precisely noon the house was called to order by J. B. Clark, its clerk.

When order was secured the clerk proceeded to call the roll of members-elect.

While the roll was in progress a page entered with a huge floral design, representing a section of a canal navigated by a canal boat laden with diminutive bags of grain, the whole being inscribed "Hennepin."

As he placed it on the desk of Mr. Murphy (Iowa), the especial champion of the Hennepin canal project, the house broke out into applause and laughter.

The call disclosed the presence of 300 members, the only absentees being Miller (N. Y.), Henderson (N. C.), Aiken (S. C.), Page (Texas), and Croxston (Va.)

Nominations for speaker were then in order, and Mr. Tucker was recognized, who presented the name of John Griffin Carlisle (Ky.).

Messrs. Hiscock and Cannon then rose, but the latter was recognized, and he placed the name of Thomas B. Reed, (Me.) in nomination.

Messrs. Morrison, Tucker, Hiscock, and Brown (Ind.) were appointed tellers to count the vote.

The result was announced as follows: For Carlisle, 177; for Reed, 137; and amid loud applause the clerk declared Mr. Carlisle elected, and appointed Messrs. Tucker and Reed as a committee to conduct the speaker to the chair.

On taking the chair Mr. Carlisle made a short address.

The members were then sworn in and proceeded to draw for seats.

Resolutions in regard to Vice President Hendricks were passed and the House adjourned.

Men Who Own Horses.

New York Sun.

"There's no mistaking the owner of a fast horse, or a road horse of any kind, no matter where you may meet him in New York," said the proprietor of a big livery stable up town. "In the country nearly every man of reasonable means can afford to keep at least one horse, but in New York it is rather an expensive luxury. To be the owner of a roadster argues that you're a man of means, and as every one wants to appear wealthy I suppose that it is the reason one hears so much horse talk. They talk about yachtsmen being unable to talk of anything but their own particular form of sport, but that's nonsense compared to the enthusiasm of a horseman. Yachts are out of commission six months in the year, but a horse is always ready.

"The horse fever usually affects men about as it has effected a friend of mine who started in a year ago. He has charge of a department in a big commission house down town, and his salary was recently increased from $3,500 to $5,000 a year. Then he decided to keep a horse. He bought a light road wagon, looked about, took the advice of half a dozen friends who didn't know anything about it and finally secured a horse that was worth about $300 for $500 cash. His expenses for keeping the whole outfit here amounted to about $35 a month, but that's the light part of the entertainment. The expense begins above McComb's Dam bridge. For the first two months the young commission merchant was up here every day about 5 o'clock, wearing a frock coat, a high hat and driving gloves, and regularly took some young lady out to drive. The young ladies worked pretty lap robes for him and he was quite a go with them for a time.

"Then one day he went up the road alone, and after that he never took a lady with him. Now he has the regular horseman manner. He wears a big linen duster, a low hat, goggles, and rides with bent shoulders and his head pushed forward. One would think, to look at him when he stalks out, that he is driving Maud S. He sits with round shoulders and an intent look, and nothing new comes up in the way of fixings for horses that he does not adopt. His slang is as steep as a jockey's, and his knowledge so profound that the oldest horse doctor in New York seems like a novice when compared with him. You can't learn all about horses in a year, nor be a good judge of horseflesh without immense experience and study; still every New Yorker that owns a horse apparently knows it all, and to sit on Gabe Case's or Judge Smith's porches and hear the one-year-olds talk about trotting stock makes us veterans feel so ashamed that we all go off in corners and talk to ourselves."

A Scotch Sacrament.

Sacrament seasons with the churches of Edinburgh in olden times were no cold water affairs. The city paid the bills for the wine used on such occasions, and in the Dean of Guild's accounts for 1590 the following entries occur: "First communion, ane puncheon of claret wine, £36 10s. 9d.; nine gallons mair, £16 16s.; second communion, ane puncheon of claret wine, cost £35 6s.; two gallons mair, £14 6s." The same condition of things existed at Glasgow. In 1641 there was paid by the town of Glasgow to Robert Campbell and others for 'wyne to the communion' the sum of £84 10s. 8d., while in 1656 there was purchased by the same liberal corporation, for the same purpose, a hogshead of wine at the cost of £160. The Covenanters were evidently no more total abstainers than Cromwell's Ironsides.

Sherman President and Carlisle Speaker.

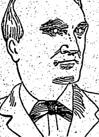
In the Senate republican caucus upon a ballot being taken for President of the Senate, Mr. Sherman received all the votes but three, and upon motion of Mr. Edmunds the nomination was made unanimous. Mr. Sherman, rising, said:

Senators: I return my hearty thanks for the high honor you propose to confer upon me. Your choice, no doubt, has been influenced by the fact that I have long been a member of the senate. Still, my duties heretofore have not given me the practical experience necessary for a good presiding officer. I can only say that I will do all I can fairly and impartially to observe and enforce the rules of the senate, and shall rely greatly upon your forbearance and courtesy.

The votes against Senator Sherman were cast by Senator Morille, of Vermont, and Senator Riddleburger, of Id.

The Democratic members of the House, in common, nominated Hon. John G. Carlisle of Kentucky for speaker. Mr. Carlisle made quite a lengthy speech, on accepting the nomination, in which he "trusted that during the time we are associated in the Forte-ninth congress we may be able to diminish the expenditure of the government, lighten the burdens of the people, reform business in the public service, complete the restoration of confidence among the people in all divisions of the country, and give such assurances of a wise and patriotic policy as will guarantee a long line of Democratic administrations. There is much to be done, and the responsibility for its accomplishment rests largely on the gentlemen who are assembled here this evening."

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE.



JOHN G. CARLISLE OF KENTUCKY.

The caucus then proceeded to nominate the minor officers, as follows:

John B. Clark, Missouri, the present incumbent, clerk of the house; Mr. Leedom, Ohio, renominated sergeant-at-arms; Samuel Donelson, Tennessee, doorkeeper.

The republicans of the house, gave the complimentary nomination for Speaker to Thomas B. Reed of Maine. Reed received sixty-three, Hiscock forty-two, and Ryan of Kansas three. The balloting for the minor offices of the house was then proceeded with, and the following ticket was nominated:

For clerk, Col. W. O. Crosbie, Iowa; sergeant-at-arms, Capt. Albert O. Marsh, Indiana; doorkeeper, Col. Joseph K. Selden, Connecticut; postmaster, A. W. Adams, Maryland, chaplain, Rev. Dr. F. F. Bitt, Nebraska.

Mr. Price offered the following, which was adopted without opposition:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this caucus that immediate action be taken by the Forty-ninth congress to provide for the presidential succession.

On motion of Mr. Thomas of Illinois the following was adopted: Resolved, That the caucus favors the passage of a properly guarded Mexican pension bill, with provisions for pensions for Union soldiers of the late war, their widows and orphans, similar to the bill passed by the senate during the Forty-eighth congress, and we declare in favor of the unconditional repeal of the limitation on the payment of arrears of pension.

The Land Commissioner's Report.

The report of Commissioner Sparks is too long for entire publication. Most of it is devoted to expositions of frauds and abuses, for which he proposes the following amendments to the laws:

I respectfully recommend that the homestead law be so amended as to provide that the public lands of the United States, other than mineral or reserved timber lands, shall be disposed of only under its provisions, and that these be strengthened to secure actual inhabitancy, improvement and cultivation, as precedent conditions to the acquisition of any rights thereunder, and absolutely prohibiting and rendering nugatory for any purpose whatever any sale or transfer of the homestead privilege, or of title derived or to be derived thereunder, prior to the issue of patent. The law should provide for substantial and not merely pro forma proofs, and applications and proofs should not be permitted to be made before any other officer than the land officers of the United States. No change of the time within which proof is required to be made appears to me necessary or expedient but I regard it as of first importance that no entry or application should be allowed before the actual establishment of a permanent residence on the land, and that proof should not be permitted before the expiration of the prescribed period of five years from date of actual entry. Neither should preliminary applications of entries, unaccompanied by actual settlement, be regarded as a segregation or reservation of the land, but all actually uninhabited public lands should be free to the appropriation of any bona fide settler actually establishing a home upon the land, improving it and making use of it for his subsistence and the support of his family or dependents. The requirement that actual homes should be established and permanently maintained on homesteads taken up under the act, should be made imperative and evasions of the law, or a merely constructive compliance with its provisions, should work an absolute forfeiture of the homestead privilege. The sale of relinquishments as a matter of business or speculation should be made a penal offense, and attorneys or land brokers buying or selling homestead relinquishments, or otherwise engaged in speculating in homestead rights, or knowingly aiding in such speculation, should thereby be rendered incapable of practicing as attorneys before this department or local land offices, and inhibited from access to the records. The second section of the act of June 15, 1880, which allows the purchase of lands embraced in abandoned homestead entries made prior to 1879, has proved unqualifiedly pernicious, and should be repealed.

The subject of land office fees is provocative of unceasing dispute. The whole system of the payment of public services by fees is antiquated, cumbrous and uneconomical. I recommend the abolishment of the fee system for entry on public lands and the substitution of fixed salaries to registers and receivers.

William M. Evans, ex-treasurer of Grant county, Dak., was arrested at Milbank and brought before Justice Neill, of Big Stone City, on a charge of embezzlement preferred by J. R. Taylor. Evans waived examination and was bound over to appear at the next term of the district court. Bail was fixed at $3,000. This case is one of the outgrowths of the bitter and unfortunate county seat war between Big Stone City and Milbank, which, commencing in the spring of 1881, continued for nearly three years and was only ended by legislative enactment which divided the county.

A dispatch from San Francisco to the Kansas City Times says that private advices received by friends of the celebrated wrestler in that city report the death of Clarence Whistler, the champion Greco-Roman wrestler of the world, known as the "Kansas City Cyclone," at Melbourne, Australia, but that no particulars were given.

THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

The Secretary of the Interior Makes His Report, Which is of Peculiar Interest to Northwestern People.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 6.—The report of the secretary of the interior was given to the press this evening. The statistical portions of the report have been covered in previous dispatches, but more than the usual interest is manifested in what Secretary Lamar would say on the Indian, the public land, the pension and kindred questions. After summarizing the reports as to the condition of the several Indian tribes, the secretary takes up the question of Indian schools. There are now eighty-six day schools, with an average attendance of 1,840; eighty-four boarding schools, with an average attendance of 4,066; seven industrial and training schools, with 1,425 pupils; and twenty-three contract schools, with 709 pupils. The amount of cost of all the schools is $897,276. On the general policy of educating the Indians, and on other questions relating to the welfare of the Indians, the report says:

The schools established by the Indians in the territories of the five civilized tribes afford conclusive proof of their capacity to educate their children up to the requirements of an advanced civilization. This home education includes seminaries for pupils of the higher grade, where they receive a liberal, academic course of instruction, and a common school system in which the children are taught the rudiments of the English course. Many of the teachers are Indians, some of whom are graduates of our best colleges. The seminaries are all boarding schools, and are provided with suitable arrangements for the purpose. The children live in them, and are trained in domestic duties and taught the habits of civilized people. The chief difficulty is gaining the consent of Indian parents to have their children educated in district schools in their fear that they will be made to perform menial labor for white people. The feeling would not exist if their children were to be educated among the people of a kindred race, where no feeling of caste would depress them or excite their race aversions. The institution of the system in the Indian Territory would bring the wild Indians into friendly contact with those who are civilized, and would induce them to accept the course that has so greatly benefited the five civilized tribes.

THE SECRETARY RECOMMENDS.

I therefore recommend that authority be given under which the proper department, to be designated by congress, can arrange with any of the five civilized tribes for the education of the Indians of the Western reservation in the Indian country, and that a sum of money be appropriated to give the effort a fair trial. The policy of allowing the Indians to lease their lands for grazing purposes does not seem to have been announced until April 25, 1883. It, however, appears that as early as Jan. 8, 1883, the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians had entered into such agreements with seven individuals for the exclusive use and occupation of as many distinct tracts in the reservation. I found, upon assuming charge of this department, that not only the large tracts of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations referred to were in the possession of the cattlemen, but that other Indian tribes, located within the Indian Territory, had entered into similar arrangements with individuals and associations of individuals, whereby they were granted the exclusive privilege under pretended leases, to occupy large tracts of the reservation of the various tribes, and to hold their herds thereon for grazing purposes. These alleged leases were made to cover periods of five or ten years at yearly rentals varying in rates from 1½ to 6 cents per acre. The ruling rate appears, however, to be above two cents per acre. From all the facts developed on the subject, I am convinced that the assistance rendered by the respective Indian agents in the making of these alleged lease were directed more for the interest of the cattlemen, than that of the Indians placed under their care and supervision. And in many instances they have shared in the profits of these speculative transfers. The alleged leases being held to be without warrant of law, and as their existence upon the Cheyenne and Apache reservation had been found to the main cause of the complaints of these Indians, the president, after full consideration of the matter, declared them void and no effect, and determined that all unauthorized persons upon that reservation, including the cattlemen, with their herds of cattle, should remove therefrom, and he accordingly issued his proclamation on July 23, 1885, to that effect. I now have the satisfaction to state that the reservation is entirely free from cattlemen and their herds.

THE BEST AND WISEST COURSE.

The question as to what is the best and wisest course to pursue relative to these surplus lands in the Indian reservation not required for the present wants of the Indians is one demanding careful and serious consideration. If it shall be determined that for the present it is for the interest of the Indians that the reservations shall be held intact, that the land should be used for grazing purposes, and that white men with their herds of cattle shall be permitted to occupy large tracts of these reservations, a law should be enacted for that purpose, clear and comprehensive, fully defining the power and duties of this department in the matter; if, however, it shall be decided that the welfare of the Indians, as well as the public interests, will best be served by opening the surplus lands of these reservations to public settlement, it should be done in good faith, under the general land laws of the United States. With my convictions, I can not recommend such legislation. It is in direct contravention of the policy of keeping the Indian reservations free from the settlements of white men; the policy which, in my opinion, should be more rigidly enforced. The secretary estimates that the Indian service has cost the government an average of $3,870,629 per year, from the year 1832 to the present time. It now costs $6,000,000 per annum. All the expenditures of money, effort and organization is for the control, protection and management of 200,000 men, women and children. The question arises, "What is the purpose sought to be accomplished?" I have not been long enough in this office to become so thoroughly acquainted with the characteristics, customs, habits and wants of the Indians as to feel myself competent to propose any general plan.

FOR A SOLID FOUNDATION.

There are, however, some measures which I think are necessary to lay a solid foundation for Indian civilization. I recommend that a portion of every reservation be divided up into separate tracts of suitable size for farms, to be allotted to each individual as his sole and separate estate. Provision shall be made against the power (until after a time limited) of selling or mortgaging the same, or even leasing it to any but Indians living within the same reservation. I favor the policy recommended by my predecessor in this office, Secretary Kirkwood, of reducing to proper size the existing reservations, when entirely out of proportion to the number of Indians thereon, with the consent of the Indians, and upon just and fair terms; and, second, of placing by patent the titles to these diminished reservations as fully under the protection of the courts, as are titles of all others of our people to their lands. The surplus portion cut off would be subject to sale, and the proceeds invested for the benefit of the Indians. In noticing the president's action in the matter of the Winnebago and Crow Creek reservations in Dakota, the secretary concedes that many of the settlers went on the reservation in good faith, and adds: The case requires legislation. In regard to the Oklahoma lands the secretary favors the law passed by the last congress and says: "The unlawful combinations above referred to have rendered it, in my judgment, unwise to appoint this commission. That which gives security to life and property is the spirit of the law. Nothing is more dangerous, more fatal to rights of property and personal safety and public order than a spirit of lawlessness. The manifestations of the latter danger should be checked at all times, until the rule of law becomes the daily rule of conduct for our people. Mr. Lamar closes his noteworthy report with a recommendation to increase the powers of bureaus of education. He says: "If the bureau is to be confined within its present insignificant scope, and yet be regarded as a representative of the nation's thought and action, on the general subject of education, I am of the opinion that it should never have been established, and ought to be abolished. If the various commissions, bureaus and divisions of the executive department at Washington, which have for their object the prosecution of scientific research could be combined as integral parts of one scientific institution, such an institution would be of greater proportions and more comprehensive than any other in the world, and should a university be erected with a superstructure commensurate with the foundation, it would be without a rival in any country, and whether through a national university or in fragmentary institutions in the several states, sooner or later, a higher education—higher than the common school or the academy or the college can furnish—will alone realize and express the higher aspirations of American democracy.

King Milan has retired from the command of the Servian army in favor of Col. Horvatovitch. The latter has appointed Milan his chief of staff and Franasovic, the Servian envoy to Italy, a divisional commander. The people are clamoring for war, in order to regain their prestige, but King Milan is doubtful of the success of the Servian arms in case hostilities continue. Prince Alexander demands an indemnity of 42,000,000 francs. This amount the Servian government refuses to pay, hoping that Austria's support of Servia will compel Alexander to make peace.

A decree signed by King Alfonso, of Spain, dated Nov. 5, assenting to the marriage of his sister, Princess Eulalia, to Prince Antoine, son of the duc de Montpensier, is gazetted. The princess was born in 1864, and the prince on Feb. 23, 1866.

CROOKSTON, MINN., DEC. 10.

OUR BIG OFFER.

As an inducement for settlement of all over-due subscriptions we have made arrangements with Farm, Stock and Home, of Minneapolis which enables us to give that paper free to all our subscribers. At our own expense we have placed a sample copy of that excellent paper in the hands of all of our subscribers and others and we ask them to look it over and if they like it to call and subscribe. We will also accept payment on all back subscriptions at the regular advance rates. We have moreover prepared a list of some of the best papers with which we will club, thus giving our patrons an opportunity to obtain a great deal of reading matter for a little money. You will do well to call at the office of THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and see what we can do for you.

The Prairie Farmer, of Chicago, says that the Red River Valley will be as noted for its thoroughbred stock in a few years as now it is for its No. 1 Hard wheat. This prediction has often been made by THE JOURNAL and we are pleased to be thus endorsed by so high authority as the Prairie Farmer. Polk County will be found to be in the front ranks in a few years.

Extra Session.

Governor Hubbard has been censured vere severely for not calling an extra session of the Legislature but in this matter the Governor is in the right, and we are pleased to see that he has the back-bone to stand up for it. While the need of legislation is apparent enough the people themselves, and not the Governor are to blame because we cannot have it. Let it be remembered that it was THE PEOPLE and not Governor Hubbard, who, by law provided for bi-ennial sessions and now the people should abide the results of that action. Governor Hubbard is right. The needs, of a new country like this demand an annual session and the best way to repeal an obnoxious law is to enforce it. The bi-ennial session business should not have been adopted when it was and if this lesson serves to correct that mistake it will be worth its cost.

The Farmers' National Congress.

The Farmers' National Congress met in Indianapolis on Wednesday Dec. 2d a great many States being represented. The farmers will ask for the creating of a Secretary of Agriculture as a Government department; the extension of the benefits of the signal service and the suppression of pleura pneumonia among the cattle of the country.

J. D. Ball's photograph gallery, at Grafton, D. T., was set on fire by some miscreant, last week and entirely consumed. It was insured for only $400 and Ball's loss is said to be severe. J. D. will be remembered by the early settlers of Crookston as one of the finest artists who used to visit Crookston periodically. We are sorry to hear of his loss.

A Bad Joke on the Globe.

Ever since the death of Vice-President Hendricks the St. Paul Globe has shrieked itself black in the face trying to kill off John A. Logan as the probable successor. The Globe accused Senator Logan of "laying the wires for the Vice-Presidency before the corpse of Hendricks had grown cold, and thought that for that reason Logan would be defeated!" It now transpires that Logan does not want the position at all. He was tendered the speakership of the Senate, at the Republican caucus and peremptorially declined to accept it. This is a huge joke on the Globe that has had all of its fine-spun agony for nothing.

Believers in Civil Service Reform.

Crookston, Dec. 1. Ed. Pioneer Press: Heartily in sympathy with the civil service reform movement I read with delight your article in Monday's Pioneer Press, on the formation of civil service reform organizations in the Northwest. To join in an effort having for its object such a noble and patriotic cause would give me great pleasure, and I hasten to act on your suggestion, and send in my name as one willing and anxious to unite with such other fellow citizens as desire to see the system of civil service reform prevail. Hoping that your efforts to encourage the friends of civil service reform to active work for the good may prove eminently successful, I remain,

Another Big Stock Farm.

And still the good work goes on. Mr. A. Olds informs THE JOURNAL that he has leased his farm seven miles from this city to a Wisconsin farmer, who will put on twenty-five cows in the spring and start a dairy and stock farm. Mr. O. says the man is an experienced stock man and intends to stock the farm up to its fullest capacity.

THE JOURNAL has received from C. H. Warren, Gen'l. Pass. Agt., St. P., M. & M. R. R., a neat folder which shows what the Red River Valley is doing in stock. It contains some figures on wheat also and shows the amount of government and railroad lands yet in the market. We would advise the friend who writes from Warren, Pa., and all others of an inquiring turn of mind to procure one of these folders. They can get one by addressing Jas. B. Power, Land Commissioner, St. P., M. & M. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

"Penny Wise and Pound Foolish."

A spasm of economy came over the State and the bienaial system was inaugerated. Well, we have tried it and found that we are losing hundreds of dollars while we are saving hundreds of cents. Will the people learn wisdom from the past and come back to their annual sessions as they should?

We have received from George Stinson & Co., of Portland, Maine, the well-known Art Publishers, a magnificent, full-length, steel engraving of General Grant. It is after Anderson's celebrated photograph, which was made while the general was still in full vigor, and represents him in his sturdy, manly strength, as the people wish to remember him. It is, undoubtedly, the best portrait ever made of the general.

Messrs Stinson & Co., are in need of agents for several important, popular, new publications, and offer inducements that should be heeded by those in need of profitable work; those who write to them will receive, free, full particulars.

Mistletoe for Kissing Purposes.

No English lady considers her home decorations for Christmas complete, until a little sprig of Mistletoe, no matter how small, is hung over one of the doors on the inside of the house. Upon this day, "if a gentleman discovers a lady standing under the Mistletoe, he has a right to kiss her."

If this ancient and honored custom becomes as popular in America as it has been in Europe for centuries, it will be largely due to the Emporia (Fla.) Gazette, which by the way, is published in Volusia County, Florida, which is famous for its Summery Winters and Orange Groves; for this Journal has prepared packages of Mistletoe (a parasite and a native of Florida) which it will send to any address upon receipt of five 2 cent stamps to cover postage, &c. The Gazette has published a "Florida Catechism," that gives full and acurate information upon all subjects of interest to tourists or settlers, which it will mail to any applicant, with a sample copy of this paper upon receipt of 2 two cent stamps.

A Bonanza to Every Farmer.

We offer a premium which will prove a bonanza to every farmer who accepts our offer. Farm, Stock and Home is a Minnesota institution, adapted to our soil and climate, edited by a life long Minnesota farmer and a paper that is invaluable to every progressive farmer. We have made such arrangments as will enable us to give every subscriber of THE JOURNAL a copy of this valuable agricultural paper

FREE FOR ONE YEAR.

This offer must be accepted before January 1st 1886. If you wish to secure lots of reading matter for the coming year subscribe for THE JOURNAL and Farm, Stock and Home at just the price of THE JOURNAL.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultry-men, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.50.

STOP! Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published, and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM STOCK AND HOME of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents, or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.50. [25-tf]

Fergus Falls Journal: There arrived on the train from St. Paul last night a mysterious party of about twenty who disembarked at the old depot and took the train for Pelican Rapids. On investigating a little it was found that it was a party of surveyors who, with their cooks and helpers, had been detailed by the Manitoba road to make the preliminary surveys for the extension of the Pelican Rapids branch in the direction of Red Lake Falls. They were fitted out with all the camping utensils for a winter's camp, and it is supposed that they will work right along until the survey is completed. Their movements are not known and will be watched with interest.

Seventy Bushels of Apples.

Fargo Argus: Mr. Andrew Holes of Fargo, has one of the best gardens and young orchards in the northwest. Last year he harvested about seventy bushels of apples, and any amount of plums, currants, gooseberries, and raspberries. Mr. Holes has shown that fruit can be successfully produced in the Red River Valley. He states the main reason why fruit has not succeeded better here is that the ground is too raw, and there is too much undecayed vegetable matter in the upper mold that must first be subdued by cultivation, dig a large hole for the tree, throw in some of the top earth, then place the roots on top of this, and add some of the cultivated earth around the roots, putting the bottom earth on top. Don't mulch the trees during the summer, as it makes the roots grow so near the surface that they winter-kill. A little mulching does no harm during the fall and winter. With this treatment, Mr. Holes believes all the hardier trees will thrive in the valley.

Sheep Flourish in this Valley.

Grand Forks Herald: For some time Mr. John Birkholz, one of our leading real estate and insurance men of this city, who likewise farms on a large scale, being the owner of several extensive and productive farms a few miles east of us on the Minnesota side of the river, has been turning his attention to sheep raising, by way of diversity. Yesterday he added another picked lot from a drove brought here a short time ago by the butchers, and he now has about fifty sheep in his flock, which, instead of being any additional expense to speak of, are self sustaining in summer, and during the winter, run with his cattle and live off hay and straw, with no more than the ordinary attention given a farmer's herd. Their shelter consists of the ordinary cattle shed, from which they are turned out into the open air, being able to endure the coldest temperature to which the valley is subject, and fatten on the nutritious native hay. There is no domestic animal that will prove more profitable to the farmers of this valley since sheep can be bought in Southern Minnesota and Iowa for from $2 to $3 per head, and if freight amounts to $1 per head, they will still become paying stock. For, not to speak of their wool, an article so largely consumed in this latitude they bring the highest price for mutton. The farmers who follow the example of Mr. Birkholz in this branch of agricultural industry will find themselves amply repaid, and it does not require a small fortune to buy a handsome flock for a beginning.

Superior News: Tank Kee's lectures in the opera house Wednesday and Thursday evening were both very entertaining and instructive though delivered to small audiences. He is certainly thoroughly informed on all points of Chinese life and history, and accompanies his lectures by an abundance of valuable matter in the shape of pictures, charts, and specimens of armor, coins, etc. One can learn very much of China by an evening spent under his direction. We are sorry that the Woman's Home for whose benefit the entertainment was given did not profit by it to a greater extent.

The Breeder's Gazette.

Published at Chicago, by J. H. Sanders & Co., is quite generally regarded as the leading live-stock paper in America. It is a large, beautifully printed, and elegantly illustrated weekly paper of from thirty-six to forty-four pages; original in both matter and illustrations and especially designed for live-stock breeders and such farmers as make some branch of stock breeding the leading feature of their business. Hon. D. W. Smith, Pres't of the National Cattle Growers' Association of America, says of it: "The wonderful success it has achieved in its special field of journalism only proves the old, old lesson, which is yet so hard for fools and knaves to learn, that honesty is the best policy. Its fearles condemnation of wrong and its hearty indorsement of right make it really and truly a great moral engine." And Col. Harris, Director in the American Short-horn Breeders' Association, says: "If it could take the place of the hundreds of wishy-washy things that call themselves stock and farm papers I would regard it as a National blessing." The subscription price of this great weekly is $3 a year; clubs of five, $2.50; clubs of ten, $2.00. Specimen copy free. Address J. H. Sanders & Co., Publishers, Chicago, Ill.

We have received from George Stinson & Co., of Portland, Maine, the well-known Art Publishers, a magnificent, full-length, steel engraving of General Grant. It is after Andersen's celebrated photograph, which was made while the General was still in full vigor, and represents him in his sturdy, manly strength, as the people wish to remember him. It is, undoubtedly, the best portrait ever made of the General. Messrs. Stinson & Co., are in need of agents for several important, popular, new publications, and offer inducements that should be heeded by those in need of profitable work; those who write to them will receive, free, full particulars.

Superior News: While conversing about Duluth a wealthy business man of the East, a man who has made his money by his own labors, yesterday said, "I would not give a fig for a town who does not support her newspapers well. Show me any city that has thriving well-supported papers and I will show you a place where a man can invest money safely. And the reverse is also true in nearly every case. When you have knocked about the world as I have you will see the force of this." These remarks are decidedly to the point and are thoroughly true. What this man states is fact, and has much weight in deciding outside capital to enter a place as any other one thing.

Forty-Eighth Volume

OF THE NEW YORK

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Unprecedented Attractions for 1886.

In addition to WILKIE COLLINS' great serial (just commenced, and back numbers of which can be furnished to all new subscribers who desire it) arrangements have been made for

A New Novel by Mrs Oliphant,

to be commenced in April, as well as

A Brilliant Romance by Wm. Black,

to follow in the month of July, together with

Another Sterling Story by Miss Braddon,

But, besides the works of these distinguished authors on the other side of the Atlantic, new stories have been secured from the following noted American writers:

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT,
FRANK R. STOCKTON,
CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK,
J. T. TROWBRIDGE,
EDWARD EVERETT HALE,
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS,
ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS,
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD,
SIDNEY LUSKA,

and others of distinguished fame, making altogether an unprecedented combination of talent unequaled by any of the leading magazines of the metropolis.

The Opening Story of the New Volume (for January 3, 1886) is entitled

MUCH ADO

BY FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,

Author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," "Through One Administration," "A Fair Barbarian," &c., &c., &c.

In presenting these superior attractions, the New York Sunday Mercury will not lose any of those varied and attractive features which, for nearly Fifty Years, have made it a welcome guest to a Hundred Thousand Families throughout the length and breadth of the land. It will continue as heretofore to make a which it will furnish more accurately than any of the so-called dramatic journals—mere trade papers, which have no influence with the theatrical profession and no circulation among the people.

ALL THE BEST HUMORISTS OF THE COUNTRY

Including Bill Nye, F. E. Huddle, Opie P. Reed, Elie Adams, Alex. E. Sweet, are regular contributors to the New York Sunday Mercury, which far surpasses in merit and variety any humorous paper in the world.

The same attention will be paid as heretofore to all the

and, in fact, those who subscribe for the New York Sunday Mercury will have a combination of first-class reading matter such as no other paper in the country can present. In fact the New York Sunday Mercury offers all the literary features of a First-class Magazine, the News Features of a Leading Daily, and the Combined Attractions of a Family Newspaper.

The New York Sunday Mercury, for 1886 will be mailed, postage free, to subscribers in any part of the United States for $2.00 per annum or $1.00 for six months. Sample copies sent free to any address.

The National Tribune

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Is one of the less than half-a-dozen really great family papers in the country.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
Published at the National Capitol.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
Devoted to a history of the war.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
Devoted to the interests of ex-soldiers and sailors.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
That makes a bold and persistent fight for their rights.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
That continually insists on justice being done the country's defenders.

A SPLENDID EIGHT-PAGE, 56-COLUMN PAPER,

Printed on fine white paper, edited with signal ability, and filled with the most interesting matter that can be procured.

ONLY $1 A YEAR—TWO CENTS A WEEK.

The National Tribune is the result of years of earnest, thoughtful effort, accompanied by a heavy expenditure of money, to build up at the Capital of the country a

which should be a welcome weekly visitor at every fireside from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and champion effectively the cause of loyalty and good government, and of justice to the soldiers and sailors of the late war, their widows, children and dependent relatives. How well this has been done is best indicated by the wonderful success of the paper which has attained popularity and circulation more rapidly than any other in the history of American journalism.

FEATURES OF THE PAPER.

The National Tribune makes a special feature of the history and reminiscences of the war for the preservation of the Union. It publishes in fact the

of that gigantic struggle, for its history is not a warped and biased panegyric of some particular man or men, who are given credit for everything that succeeded. It is made up of the testimony of a multitude of witnesses, the plain unvarnished stories of men in every rank and degree who did the marching, digging and shooting and carried forward the war through all its varying phases to a glorious success. The great value of The National Tribune's history is everywhere recognized, and its files a e carefully preserved in every large library and historical collection in the country—north or south.

Besides this it presents every week a splendid array of Editorials on current Topics—Stories by the Best Authors—Wit, Humor and Information—Agricultural Notes of the Greatest Value—Household Hints and Suggestions—Synopsis of the News of the Week—Answers to Correspondents—Bright Miscellany, etc., which will interest, amuse and instruct every member of the family.

GEN. JOHN A. LOGAN,

the grand soldier and statesman, will shortly begin a series of intensely interesting articles descriptive of the stirring and important events in which he shared and played a leading part. These alone will be worth vastly more than the price asked for the paper.

John McElroy, whose "Andersonville" had a sale exceeding that of any book published since "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and whose "Red Acorn" and other war writings have given him a place in the front rank of American authors, will contribute a series of humorous military sketches, entitled "The Reminiscences of an Army Mule."

In the case of Ed. Charboneau, charged with forgery the defendent was admitted to bail in the sum of $250.

The "Bee Hive," Hack & Gallasch' store, is the best and cheapest in the city.

An indictment was brought in charging Messrs Rosenthal & Wile with carrying the largest, finest and cheapest line of Christmas presents it the County. We tried to "quash" the above but the peoplesay "it goes" C. O. D. Clothing House.

Look over Hack & Gallasch' Xmas goods and prices before buying elsewhere.

In the case of the State vs. John Ralston, charged with lareeny, the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty," the evidence being insufficient to convict.

Wanted, at the Bee Hive, 1,000 bushels of oats and potatoes in trade.

Thos. Herschberger, of Fosston, was in as a witness in the Dr. Nelson case and gave THE JOURNAL a pleasant call. He reports business in the Thirteen towns flourishing.

Xmas goods, the best and cheapest at Hack & Gallasch'.

Mr. A. Kaiser, the genial editor of the Thirteen Towns, dropped into our den a minute while off guard duty at the court house. Al. holds down his end of the jury with grace and dignity.

If you want to purchase a fine Christmas or New Year's card go to Van Dyke & Co.

The project of forming a dramatic club for the winter has been broached. Why not? There is plenty of good dramatic talent in the city if it could be utilized.

Wheat does not seem to wobble up toward the $ mark alarmingly fast yet we see no reason to be alarmed. It has got to get there sooner or later and we confidently expect it will be there ere winter closes.

Remember the poor; send them to the C. O. D. Clothing House.

We understand the inaugural ball given by the Masonic Lodge of this city will be one of the finest features, socially speaking, ever given in this city. "Tone your-self up" by buying a dress suit at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

Look over our stock of Holiday goods before buying and save money. C. O. D. Clothing House.

Dr. Thomas says that "you can tell the people that, bein it is Christmas time you can have your teeth extracted by the use of nitric oxide gas." The doctor is too well-known to need an introduction and seems bound to keep up with all of the improvements in his line as we see by the above.

In the blackmailing case, the defendants, P. J. LaChapelle, Christopher Greenhalgh and Melchoir Kundest, by the advice of their attorneys, Steenerson and Watts withdrew their plea of not guilty and interposed a demurrer to the indictment on the grounds that the indictment does not state a public offense. Case submitted to the judge for decision on the point raised.

Cards, cards, cards, cheaper than ever at Van Dyke & Co.

Dr. A. Nelson returned to his home on Tuesday, having won his case against the Board of County Commissioners. This action was brought to collect a bill which the doctor had against the county for attending to small pox cases in Fosston. The Board would allow but $100 of it and the jury awarded the doctor the full amount claimed with interest on the same from the time the bill was first presented to the Board.

Finest line of gentlemen's slipper in the city suitable for a Christmas present, at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

The result of the raid upon the innocent deer, made by Messrs. Cowing, Houston and Chase was one buck and one very small doe. The party disembarked from the cars at New York Mills, on the Northern Pacific, and went north from that point. They report having had a grand time, saw lots of deers, also met the St. Paul party of hunters who had been having a grand hunt. They report the St. Paul party in excellent SPIRITS (and lots of it) fun being the main object everybody seemed well satisfied.

In recommending the building of a new jail on the court house grounds the Grand Jury did a wise thing, which we doubt not will meet the hearty approval of every taxpayor in the county. The need of such an institution is indeed very great for the reasons they give and we trust their suggestions will be acted upon at once.

Lookout for our grand display opening Dec. 21st 1885; C. O. D. Clothing House.

The open secret of my success is easily explained. I keep goods of the highest order and very low prices, besides my facilities being such as to enable me to undersell, my competiors. C. H. Saake opposite Merchants National Bank, Main Street.

The several committees, who have in charge the details in connection with the Masonic dedication festival are working like bees to get everything in readiness and the program marked out will be strictly adhered to in every particular. The Masons will leave no stone unturned to provide an elegant reception, and at the small price charged, $2.50, should and doubtless will have a large attendance.

C. B. Rockwood, formerly of Fisher, now special U. S. Pension Examiner, located at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Carey, and looking after his farming interests near Fisher. He is well pleased with the out-put of his last season's crops and is like many others interested here in wheat raising holding his crop for the $ mark, and feels confident it will reach that point before another harvest.

Remember our "Christmas charity" and send the people to the C. O. D. Clothing House.

Old settler evidently got the idea that he was slighted, got his back up about, got the wrong pig by the ear and pitched into McKenzie—fired a whole dictionary at him in one solid chunk—in fact SWORE at him—called him "ct dominoes" or some blood-curdling monster like that. Mac did not die right off pretty quick, but bobbed up serenely, slode it off up Broadway a bit—and kept right on with his knitting without dropping a stitch. Now if we were to have our say we should say that "Old Settler" never wrote that article "in-pro-pria personnae et dominoes"—that is not to any ALARMING extent and we have a suspicion that the joke rather falls on the fellow what did!

We extend a special invitation to the ladies while doing their Holiday shopping to examine our line of suitable Christmas presents for gentlemen. C. O. D. Clothing House.

The murder trial called out a large crowd on Tuesday.

The Masons anticipate a good time at their entertainment on New Years Eve.

H. J. Kertson grouped the baby-by's in a combination. They are little darlings.

The Sons of Vets are growing, i. e. the lodge, by accessions at each meeting.

Thos. Wallace left for Zumbro Falls, Wabasha Co., early this week to spend the winter.

Wood finds plenty of buyers nowadays. It is selling on the street from $3 to $4 per cord.

This term of court bids fair to be a lengthy one, chance if the Judge takes his Christmas dinner at home.

The County Treasurer gave us (what he calls) an "effusion" on taxes. Owing to lack of time it has to stand over till next issue.

Judge Stearns is pronounced the ablest Judge in the State. His rulings are almost universally approved by the legal fraternity.

The band boys report good success in selling tickets for their dance on Christmas night. They will have a good time and desire to do well out of it, which we doubt not they will.

John Crawford & Son have a one cent counter, which is the delight of the little folks. Oh such a sight. The thousand one articles there displayed and, Oh, My! All for ONE CENT——apiece.

C. W. Kimberly says that this has been one of the best seasons for threshing he ever saw anywhere. He put in 91 days at the machine which he justly considers a remarkable feat, Minnesota weather beats the world.

Lew Freeman says that his short-horns are going into the winter in good shape and are a choice lot of animals. We have not seen them but believe that he is right about their excellence for when Lew "hollers it's law."

C. H. Saake shows his faith in the country by purchasing a farm, up near Ive's station, on the Black River. He has a good house and stable upon it, a good share of it broken and is in the market to give somebody a good bargain to go out and make a stock farm of it.

I guarantee a positive saving on every article purchased at my store. C. H. Saake the jeweler.

The Farm, Stock and Home has become the leading agricultural paper of the State. It is a paper that should be in every household. We will send it, with the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, to any address in Polk County for $1.75. Postage added (15 cents) if sent outside of the county.

Dr. Dunlop went up to Fosston recently, whereat the Fosston paper began calling him names——saying that he was "the best doctor in Crookston" and all that.. Well, we have got some pretty good doctors here, but one would have to get up early in the morning to beat Dunlop, and that is a fact.

My competitors are complaining of hard times while I am kept busy by waiting on my customers. C. H. Saake, the jeweler.

Dr. Just, having JUST threshed his crop of No. 1 Hard FIFE potatoes, and picked his pumpkins, dug his corns out and got ready for winter has got tired with farming and sold his farm, and will now have more patience with his patients. The doctor would have made a first class granger if he had had patience enough.

Remember that my prices are marked in plain figures and guaranteed the lowest for quality. C. H. Saake, Main Street.

The Dr. Stewart case, came to a sudden end by the doctor's pleading guilty to manslaughter in the fourth degree. He was fined $500 which he promptly paid. The Index claims that his true name is Frank Fields; that he is living in this country under an assumed name, and if all it says is true, the doctor, or Fields as the case may be, is not the most respectable person on earth.

I do not advertise goods that I cannot show customers and will sell fine goods for the same money as other deslers ask for inferior goods. C. H. Saake, jeweler.

A team belonging to Mr. Leo, that was hitched as he supposed in the shed adjoining Pinkerton's & Stone's warehouse, last Monday became untied in some unaccountable manner and started off on their own hook to take in the town, they crossed Main Street and up Fletcher Avenue as far as the alley leading to the barn of the Scandinavian Hotel, where they were stopped in their reckless career, before damage was done.

Charley Bailey, met with a serious accident, in the lumber woods last week. He was assisting in loading logs and while loading on the last log, his companion's cant-hook slipped, letting the log roll back on Charlie who failed to hold it, was thrown and had his leg broken. He was brought to the city, a distance of 100 miles, when, after the swelling had been reduced the leg was set and at last accounts he was doing well as could be expected.

Lots of Grand Forkers were over to the trial on Wednesday.

The Valley mills suffered a broken shaft and were closed for repairs. Morrisey Bro's soon remedied the difficulty and put them in ship shape again.

Immediately after the noon recess on Wednesday the case of the State vs Nellie Richardson charged with keeping a house of ill-fame at East Grand Forks, was called. County Attorney Leo appeared for the State and A. H. Noyes, of Grand Forks and Judge Montague, of this city for defense. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Paul Bataglia is on deck with a fine lot of Holiday Goods. He has a lot of lovely pictures, with beautiful frames, center tables, rocking chairs and easy chairs, rocking horses, and lots of that sort of thing that would make pretty presents, and parlor setts, rich enough for a king, sofa beds, mattresses and everything conceivable in the line of furniture. Call and look him over.

A variety troupe came over from Grand Forks to "entertain" the festive sports of this city by an exhibition of their arts at the saloons. Whilst in the midst of a can-can, Marshall Dowling appeared upon the animated scene remarking "you can't can't come that joke in this city!" Whereupon the "young lady" peeled her raiment and appeared before the audience in her natural garb of a beardless youth, whereupon the crowd wilted and the match was declared a draw. No cards.

On Wednesday, Chief Dowling arrested Martin Olson, Gilbert Olson, Peter Nelson and Andrew Bakken, and brought them before Esq. Lilly, charged with stealing whips, robes, blankets, a sack of oats and sundry articles, from wagons at Terry & Collins' barn, sundry articles from Rauenbuchler's harness shop, clothes from clothes-lines and other articles too numerous to mention, which said articles were found in possession of defendants at Johnson's place, on Broadway. Martin Olson was fined $50 and costs and the balance of interesting quartette $20 each and costs.

The Murder Trial.

The case of the State of Minnesota vs John Hutchinson, for murder in the first degree came up for trial on Tuesday. A special venire for 48 was issued and out of the number a jury was selected as follows:

John Clulback, J. O. Sargent, Moses Allard, F. R. Smith, Geo. H. Holt, C. Houston, H. C. Scribner, Wm. Kertson, E. R. Fisk, Chas. Truax, A. L. Mitchell, F. W. Benedict. When the jury had been duly impanneled, the County Attorney opened for the prosecution in a very eloquent and forcible address to the jury, after which the witnesses for the prosecution were called, the first witness, John Otto Burns, testified that he was acquainted with the murdered man a short time previous to the murder; that he went with McLain to the house of John Hutchinson's; that as they came into the room where Hutchinson was, he saw a knife in Hutchinsen's hand and before he could warn McLain, Hutchinson had struck the fatal blow. McLain said: Jack, I am stabbed, let us go; they went outside when McLain said, "Oh! God! I am dying, send for a doctor!" walked a few rods further and fell; expired in a few minutes; think he did not live longer than five minutes after the blow was struck; saw Hutchinson strike the fatal blow; no one else struck McLain; after he died I went and called constable Murray; we got a board and carried McLain's body into an old building; he was dead when we took him up. A searching cross-examination by the defendants council, John N. Ives, did not vary this testimony. Martin Kelley was called, whose testimony was in corroboration of the above. Constable Murray was called, who related the particulars of the arrest, who said that when arrested, John Hutchinson confessed that he did it. Dept. Sheriff Dwyer, sworn, said he was awakened by a peron rapping on his window, who told him to get up and come quick that a man had been stabbed; got up as quickly as possible, went with the person to the house where they had carried McLain's body; saw that he was dead, and asked if the party who did it had been arrested, ordered all present to go with me; we went to the Hutchin house; upon arrival Mrs. Hutchinson called out "Is that you Sheriff Dwyer?" At that instant saw John dart into an out house, and called out to him to come up and surrender; had a revolver; John came as I ordered and I took from him the knife; (producing a barlow-knife) it had a handkerchief upon it, just as it has now; it had blood upon it; more than it has now; I took Hutchinson into custody and delivered him at the jail in Crookston, after the coroner's inquest. Dr. Wheeler was sworn, who testified as to the nature of the wound, said that it was about 2½ inches in depth; that it had severed an artery; that with such a wound a man could not live to exceed 15 minutes. The wound was the cause of McLain's death. Here the prosecution rested its case and the defendant's attorney addressed the jury, picking to pieces the testimony of the witnesses for the State, and briefly outlining the defense. When he had finished, the Judge cautioned the jury against conversing with any person upon the case, and the court was adjourned until 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning.

Upon re-assembling on Wednesday morning, John Hutchinson, the defendant, was put upon the witness stand who swore that he was not there at the time of the murder; that he was at the mill at Grand Forks from 7 o'clock until after 12:30 that when he returned, upon entering the house he struck his right foot against something, which, upon picking up and examining he found to be a knife; the knife that was subsequently taken away from him by Dwyer; had no knife of his own, the prisoner's mother, Mrs. Hutchinson testified that her son was not at home when the fatal blow was struck; he was at the mill at Grand Forks; Five of them broke the door in and rushed in, took the lamp and looked through the rooms; soon as I went to the door they catched me and said: "You know what we want!" I struck him; I had a knife in my hand and struck him; I don't know whether I killed him; I don't care; John was not there at that time, came in about 15 minutes; I told him I had had an awful row and I expected trouble; I don't call it an arrest; I was dragged out without hardly any clothes on; I was never arraigned; never had a chance to give bail; told the sheriff I would like to see the lawyer that defended me last term of court; I meant Mr. Ives; that was not the knife (knife with which the killing was done being shown) I struck him with; the knife I used was a whitehandled one with four blades; I had been using it to cut tobacco either just as they pushed in the door or a short time before; I don't think he was very drunk nor very sober, they were all drunk enough to be ugly; there was five in there; a feller called Johnson, Jim Shannon, Burns, McLean and a fellow I don't know; I think it was Duffy; am pretty sure it was Duffy; don't think they lived anywhere; they were just bumming around; don't know that McLean was the man I struck; did not intend to inflict a serious wound; They pushed the door in; did not rap at the door; Lauchie McLean and Kelley first came in; don't remember which came in first; they both spoke; they catched up the lamp and went through the rooms; think it was Duffy that did this; they did not remain but a minute after I struck the blow, I struck the blow in the dark; it was dark when John came in; he struck his foot against something and said "what's that?" I said "I had a big row and expect trouble;" he said wait till I come in from the privy and then you can tell me about it;" am the mother of defendant; McLean said after I had struck him the blow: "Boys, I am stabbed; it was dark when the officers came and made the arrest;

Constable Murray recalled:—Have known defendant two years; saw him on the night of the row; he came to my saloon for a jug of beer, a few minutes before the affray; they commenced to come in while he was there and he said that crowd had better keep away from his house or he would fix them; remember the time because I was just going to close up the saloon; I was there when the arrest was made; there were six or seven others I guess. Here the defense rested and the County Attorney addressed the jury in summing up. He made a very eloquent and forcible speech, reviewing the salient points of the evidence. The defendants attorney, John N. Ives addressed the jury. He made a very eloquent appeal to their sympathies, trying to show how all of the powerful enginery of the State had been rolling up the evidence to convict for all of the intervening time, while his client, poor and friendless languished in the jail. He made a brilliant effort considering the ground that he had to work on.

The Judge charged the jury and at 12:30 the jury retired to their room.

At 6 p. m., the jury had reached no verdict and as we go to press are still in their room considering what they are going to do about it. It seems a little singular to us, in the light of the evidence how the case is susceptable of but one conclusion. We do not see how any jury can acquit, and the result will probably be that they will fail to agree.

The Journal has received a copy of the American Newspaper Annual, published at Philadelphia, Pa., by N. W. Ayer & Son. It is an immense work, showing a vast amount of labor in its compilation, but if it is as inaccurate in all of its reports as it is in its report of the Journal, it is the biggest work on blunders we ever saw. For instance it reports the Journal to be 22x31, whereas our size is, and has been for years 24x35. It is a matter of very small importance, however, as the class of work these annuals bring is such that no paper can accept without an act of gross injustice to its home patrons, of whom it in every case expects full rates. A newspaper that will charge its home patrons full rates while it fills its advertising columns with ads for outsiders at from one-fourth to one-third said rates, is a glaring fraud, and no earthly good. These foreign advertisers NEVER pay more than one dollar per inch per annum and it is because there are fools enough among publishers to accept such ads at any rate that may be offered. Publishers should learn to serve their patrons all alike, then they could, at least, have the consciousness of doing an honest business, and should they all adopt this system the foreign advertisers would soon come up to the standard. We believe that those firms who publish these large annual reports get from those for whom they do business a far greater rate than they represent to the publishers, and this enables them to do all of this work, and wax wealthy at the expense of the country publishers. Will these same country publishers ever learn wisdom? Will they never learn to use a little common sense in their business and save the large profits that now goes into the pockets of the go-betweens? That is a question that those publishers alone can answer.

City Occurrences.

Edna, Dec. 15, 1885.

Our little town is in a flourishing condition now, owing to the central location in which it is situated, being the wheat market for the farmers both east and west. Our merchants, N. A. Mott and C. M. Ohl, are doing a rushing business, as it is nearing the holidays, and they both have a full supply of holiday goods which will please all.

Beltrami is still improving. Mr. Tim Sullivan is building a mansion on Railroad avenue.

Mr. Thompson is doing a big business at the gallery.

Eddie Body was unfortunate the other day. While chopping wood he cut his foot badly, but he is improving.

Master Harold Budd has been on the sick list, but is better now.

D. T. Thurston and C. M. Ohl, have dissolved partnership, Mr. Thurston retiring.

Mrs. C. W. Kimberly and children have returned from their eastern trip.

Mrs. O. Height is below visiting.

Miss Jennie Anderson and Gus Christianson were married at the residence of D. H. Herriott, by C. W. Kimberly, Esq. Being the Justice's first attempt, he did well.

Beltrami has lost one of her fairest daughters, formerly Miss Ida Murphy, but now Mrs. C. S. Shearer. They will live in Columbus, Ohio, this winter. They have the best wishes of the many friends they leave in the far west.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Herriott expect to start east soon, where they will spend the winter in Ohio.

A. L. Jackson expects to start for New York where he will remain the rest of the winter.

I. W. Webb and family will spend the winter in St. Paul.

Mr. Body will leave soon for Florida for his health, and Mrs. Body for Canada to visit her old home.

C. M. Ohl is going east to spend the holidays. Mr. Churchill will accompany him. Mr. H. B. Budd will take charge of his store during his absence.

There was a grand masquerade ball at the rink on Thanksgiving night. The most conspicuous characters were Lady Washington, represented by Mrs. H. B. Budd; Columbia, Miss E. L. Ingrehem; a Swede lady, Mrs. Winslow; and several others which we have not space to mention. There is to be another one Dec. 25th, and I hope all will do as well again and make it a success.

Report of the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury closed their labors and rendered their report as follows:

To the Hon. O. P. Stearns, Judge of the District Court, for the 11th Judicial District, State of Minnesota:

The Grand Jury for the December term of court in Polk County, respectfully report that we have examined the county jail in said county, and find it unfit to be used as a public prison. Its sanitary condition is defective. The building occupies a low tract of ground which has no drainage whatever. The accumulations from the water closet saturate the ground underneath the jail and render it offensive and unhealthy. The prison part is too small. The sexes should be separated. Young offenders and those detained as witnesses ought not to be confined with hardened criminals. We therefore recommend the abandonment of the present jail, and the erection of a new one on court house square.

The matter of the safe keeping of the county records has received our earnest attention. We would recommend the construction of a large fire proof vault, with separate apartments, for the use of the County Auditor, Treasurer and Clerk of the Courts, as a safe depository for all theis surplus books and files. We further recommend that the court room, jury rooms, and county offices be heated entirely by stoves; that the use of the furnace be discontinued, and that a new floor be laid in all the rooms on the first floor of the court house.

Very Respectfully Submitted,
Wm. Anglim, Foreman.

The President's Message.

We were disappointed last week at not being able to secure the President's Message in time for last issue, but consoled ourselves with the idea that the Democratic organ would be sure to have it, and in that case we know that a very few would have the privilege of reading it. Vain illusion. The organ was too "much crowded" or the message cost too much or for some other equally good reason, doubtless, the message did not appear. Realizing that it will not do to have the Democrats of Polk County go without their mess of potage or pot of message (as you like it) and knowing that our Republican friends would like to know what like it is we have, "at great expense" procured and printed it entire and it will be found elsewhere in this issue. It has been said by some critics that "Elizabeth" wrote the Mormon business and that others chipped in on different features but we don't swallow that whole. However here's your message, and you will find it profitable reading whoever wrote it. It matters not who wrote it, THE JOURNAL, bound to give all the news, both good and bad, publishes it, and here you have it, at only $1.50 in advance.

Butterine Must Go.

The facts that are being developed in in the butterine business are of such a nature that if people do not become disgusted with the vile stuff and refuse to buy it—when they know it, they will at least be awakened to the necessity for a law that will regulate its manufacture and sale. It is being discussed at every agricultural meeting held this fall and winter and the outcome must be that butterine must go. It has been conclusively shown that the manufacturers are not as particular as they might be as to the kind of lard they use—they care not whether the hog died of disease or in the regular approved style—in fact rather prefer the former as it is CHEAPER for them. It is also strongly hinted pretty strongly that several dairymen are in the habit of using the stuff to help out the bulk of their sales. Whether this be true or not the fact remains that the temptation being so strong it ought to be removed. We see no reason why Congress should not regard it in the same light as the liquor interest and impose a good heavy tax of ten or twenty cents a pound. So rapid has the business grown that the stuff is sent everywhere throughout the Union and no place that imports butter but that uses more or less of it, so that it becomes a personal matter to everybody. Let everybody make it a personal matter to fight it and victory is sure and easy.

The Breeders' Gazette. The Gazette is rather inclined to encourage instead of disparage the extravagance in which its friends the breeders of the different descriptions of stock sometimes indulge in describing the virtues and claims of their favorites. A little enthusiasm in this direction is not only natural but in its general sense is gratifying to all who come within its range. It shows not only how honest and thorough are the friends of the various breeds in their beliefs as to the superior qualities of the breed which they are commending, but more than this, it shows that the breeds have solid and permanent merit upon which these preferences are based, and that while animals of this or that breed may not really be superior to all others, as their friends claim, they are close to the front, and so near a neck ahead that good men believe them really in advance of all others. No poor or indifferent stock, or stock that has many weak points in its make-up, will long deceive a good man as to its merits and fill his mouth constantly with praise—even if he does own it. It shows, too, that the whole live-stock question is on a satisfactory basis; for no one proclaims that among a lot of indifferent stock this or that one should be rejected because of its inferiority, but the inquiry is rather which among all these grand breeds should be crowned as superior? It is in fact choosing among pearls instead of worthless gravel. And when we see a man with his heart so full of his faith that he cannot keep still or find words sufficient to express it, we know that as he drives along over all obstacles he is probably pushing some one ahead of him who is equally determined to be eclipsed, and dragging a score or more after him who are anxious not to be left behing. We may not always be able to see just as this or that one sees, or to see as clearly, but we know he is doing good and that the general cause of live-stock improvement and the standard of all breeds is being advanced through his zeal. One man may blow the bugle, another beat the drum, another sound the cymbals, and each will blow and beat the harder if he thinks it all depends upon him; and so far from there being any harm from their pleasant concert, the only result so far as we can see is more music.

Mrs. O. Height is below visiting.

Miss Jennie Anderson and Gus Christianson were married at the residence of D. H. Herriott by C. W. Kimberly, Esq. Being the Justice's first attempt, he did well.

Beltrami has lost one of her fairest daughters, formerly Miss Ida Murphy, but now Mrs. C. S. Sheerer. They will live in Columbus, Ohio, this winter. They have the best wishes of the many friends they leave in the far west.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Herriott expect to start east soon, where they will spend the winter in Ohio.

A. L. Jackson expects to start for New York where he will remain the rest of the winter.

I. W. Webb and family will spend the winter in St. Paul.

Mr. Body will leave soon for Florida for his health, and Mrs. Body for Canada to visit her old home.

C. M. Ohl is going east to spend the holidays. Mr. Churchill will accompany him. Mr. H. B. Budd will take charge of his store during his absence.

There was a grand masquerade ball at the rink on Thanksgiving night. The most conspicuous characters were Lady Washington, represented by Mrs. H. B. Budd; Columbia, Miss E. L. Ingrehem; a Swede lady, Mrs. Winslow; and several others which we have not space to mention. There is to be another one Dec. 25th, and I hope, all will do as well again and make it a success.

Report of the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury closed their labors and rendered their report as follows:

To the Hon. O. P. Stearns, Judge of the District Court, for the 11th Judicial District, State of Minnesota:

The Grand Jury for the December term of court in Polk County, respectfully report that we have examined the county jail in said county, and find it unfit to be used as a public prison. Its sanitary condition is defective. The building occupies a low tract of ground which has no drainage whatever. The accumulations from the water closet saturate the ground underneath the jail and render it offensive and unhealthy. The prison part is too small. The sexes should be separated. Young offenders and those detained as witnesses ought not to be confined with hardened criminals. We therefore recommend the abandonment of the present jail, and the erection of a new one on court house square.

The matter of the safe keeping of the county records has received our earnest attention. We would recommend the construction of a large fire proof vault, with separate apartments, for the use of the County Auditor, Treasurer and Clerk of the Courts, as a safe depository for all their surplus books and files. We further recommend that the court room, jury rooms, and county offices be heated entirely by stoves; that the use of the furnace be discontinued, and that a new floor be laid in all the rooms on the first floor of the court house.

Very Respectfully Submitted,

WM. ANGLIM, Foreman.

The President's Message.

We were disappointed last week at not being able to secure the President's Message in time for last issue, but consoled ourselves with the idea that the Democratic organ would be sure to have it, and in that case we know that a very few would have the privilege of reading it. Vain illusion. The organ was too much crowded, or the message cost too much or for some other equally good reason, doubtless, the message did not appear. Realizing that it will not do to have the Democrats of Polk County go without their mess of potage or pot of message (as you like it) and knowing that our Republican friends would like to know what like it is we have, "at great expense" procured and printed it entire and it will be found elsewhere in this issue. It has been said by some critics that "Elizabeth" wrote the Mormon business and that others chipped in on different features but we don't swallow that whole. However here's your message, and you will find it profitable reading whoever wrote it. It matters not who wrote it, THE JOURNAL, bound to give all the news, both good and bad, publishes it, and here you have it, at only $1.50 in advance.

Butterine Must Go.

The facts that are being developed in in the butterine business are of such a nature that if people do not become disgusted with the vile stuff and refuse to buy it—when they know it, they will at least be awakened to the necessity for a law that will regulate its manufacture and sale. It is being discussed at every agricultural meeting held this fall and winter and the outcome must be that butterine must go. It has been conclusively shown that the manufacturers are not as particular as they might be as to the kind of lard they use—they care not whether the hog died of disease or in the regular approved style—in fact rather prefer the former as it is CHEAPER for them. It is also strongly hinted pretty strongly that several dairymen are in the habit of using the stuff to help out the bulk of their sales. Whether this be true or not the fact remains that the temptation being so strong it ought to be removed. We see no reason why Congress should not regard it in the same light as the liquor interest and impose a good heavy tax of ten or twenty cents a pound. So rapid has the business grown that the stuff is sent everywhere throughout the Union and no place that imports butter but that uses more or less of it, so that it becomes a personal matter to everybody. Let everybody make it a personal matter to fight it and victory is sure and easy.

The Breeders' Gazette: The Gazette is rather inclined to encourage instead of disparage the extravagance in which its friends the breeders of the different descriptions of stock sometimes indulge in describing the virtues and claims of their favorites. A little enthusiasm in this direction is not only natural but in its general sense is gratifying to all who come within its range. It shows not only how honest and thorough are the friends of the various breeds in their beliefs as to the superior qualities of the breed which they are commending, but more than this, it shows that the breeds have solid and permanent merit upon which these preferences are based, and that while animals of this or that breed may not really be superior to all others, as their friends claim, they are close to the front, and so near a neck ahead that good men believe them really in advance of all others. No poor or indifferent stock, or stock that has many weak points in its make-up, will long deceive a good man as to its merits and fill his mouth constantly with praise—even if he does own it. It shows, too, that the whole live-stock question is on a satisfactory basis; for no one proclaims that among a lot of indifferent stock this or that one should be rejected because of its inferiority, but the inquiry is rather which among all these grand breeds should be crowned as superior? It is in fact choosing among pearls instead of worthless gravel. And when we see a man with his heart so full of his faith that he cannot keep still or find words sufficient to express it, we know that as he drives along over all obstacles he is probably pushing some one ahead of him who is equally determined to be eclipsed, and dragging a score or more after him who are anxious not to be left behing. We may not always be able to see just as this or that one sees, or to see as clearly, but we know he is doing good and that the general cause of live-stock improvement and the standard of all breeds is being advanced through his zeal. One man may blow the bugle, another beat the drum, another sound the cymbals, and each will blow and beat the harder if he thinks it all depends upon him; and so far from there being any harm from their pleasant concert, the only result so far as we can see is more music.

'ROUND HOME.

The play of Red Riding Hood, given by the juveniles last Friday evening, was an epoch in the history of the little people long to be remembered. They were recieved by a crowded house to see the little performers present Red Riding Hood, in a manner that was highly appreciated by all. The y scene was one of happy childhood beauty and grace, with Bertha Chase as queen being arrayed in a beautiful and becoming attire. Emma Fortier as first lady to the queen was dressed in a most suitable manner, the little one performing her duty to the queen in a way that would do credit to one older by many years. Second lady to the queen Tillie Fortier, who was dressed in a cute and suitable attire, did great credit to herself. The queen's messengers, Aggie Kops and Clare Couvrette, performed their part in a ladylike manner; being arrayed in beautiful and facinating costumes. The Sprite of the queen's court Blanche Fontaine, did her part in a highly complimentary manner, her costume being such as to elicit observation. The ladies of the court, Ermine Fontaine, Minnie Kops, Lottie Anglem, Lena Sampson, Edith McGrew. Belle Hopkins, Mabel Holt, Jennie Carey and Lizzie Zarracher, were all arrayed and decked in various and becoming attires, every little Miss acting her part nicely and gaining applause by the audience. The Wood Nymphs, Hellen Munson Mabel Copeland, performed their parts in a way that won the admiration of all. The chorus of the fairies was sang by the following little girls: Flossy Peak, Nicoline Sletten, May Morris, Lilly Moeckel, Sophia Johnson, Emma Ruedy, May Finch, Gertie Ramshardt, Cora Hutchinson, Olive Fortier, Sadie Walker, Agusta Ackerlund, Annie Schuenemier, Agnes Godbout, Clare Maho, Selia Clements and Laura Martin. The vocal talent listened to in this chorus won loud and continued applause for the fairies, which goes to show that talent was not lacking in the least, for receiving sufficient instructions in the space of time which they have had for rehearsing. Minnie Mix of Grand Forks, represented little Red Riding Hood; being the possessor of a fine voice gained the little tot laurels and showers of approval showed her the star of the play. Miss Alice Reed performed her part, as mother of little Red Riding Hood in a womanly and unaffected way, which was suitable to the act in every respect and gained the admiration of all. Minnie Finch as Grandmother acted in a an old fashioned and grand-motherly way which was in unity and harmony with the success of the play. George Finlayson as the wolf, acted it in the grotesque and forcible manner necessary for the representation which gained him credit, it being the hardest part to perform in the play, which he did in a manner appreciated by all. The Baby Bye Chorus of "Kate Greenaway," was sang by Gracie Perry, Alma Fontaine, Gracie Brown, Mamie McGrew, Clipper Buckman, Jay Durand and Arthur Bierly in a charming manner, which was received by hearty and continued applause. Comic Duet, of "Happy married life," by Minnie Mix and Willie Cooper of Grand Forks, won unmeasured applause for the little couple which was acted to life, and showed that they were highly appreciated by their neighbors. Comic Duet "when your heart goes pitapat" by little Grace and Arthur Bierly, was rendered in a cute and unique manner, won admiration from all present, demonstrated by the applause given to the little ones. The closing act a tableau, "Shower of Gold" was a most exquisite scene showing a picturesque and beautiful sight, the gold which fell in dazzling splendor, like snow flakes in the finale struggle of one of our genuine blizzards to gain mastery over the peaceful elements, all of which was in harmony with the closing of the play, interwoven as it was with the juvenile talent of our neighboring city, placed on the boards a play that any city might well be proud of being under the able management of Miss Gorman, it could not help but meet with the success it deserves she being a lady of culture and refinement, who neither spared pains nor patience in teaching the little ones their respective parts, so as to merrit the approval of our city in one combined commendation for the little actors, who did their parts so successfully.

Tank Kee.

Winona Republican: An audience double the size of Wednesday evening greeted Mr. Geo. W. Bailey at Armory hall last evening to hear his second lecture on China and the Chinese. It proved to be even more interesting than the lecture the evening before and consisted of a description of the government, school system, laws, punishment and army of China. Tank Kee lectures again at Armory hall this evening. The sixth lecture on the religious beliefs and ceremonies of the Chinese will be given on Sunday evening, instead of Tuesday evening.

A matinee lecture will be given to-morrow, Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, for the benefit of children, at which the admission fee will be only 10 cents for old or young. All of the Chinese curiosities will be on exhibition.

Christmas Charity.

"He who giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord." It has been our object for some time to contribute in a substantial manner to the poor and needy of this city, and vicinity and in doing so, have concluded to pursue the following plan: We will furnish gratis to each and every poor, or needy family, their Christmas dinner, consisting of turkeys, chickens and the substantials therewith. It is our aim to dispense this charity where it properly belongs, and in view of that fact; beg of the Clergy and others, who feel interested in our object to send such persons to us and have them receive our gifts. We shall be prepared to dispose of the above, the day preceeding Christmas, and trust that the people will have no hesitancy in coming forward, and receiving what we most heartily wish and give them. Should they have any delicacy in the matter, if our citizeens will but furnish us with the names of such poor or needy people, we will deliver our charity at their door.

We have made such arrangments as will enable us to give every subscriber of THE JOURNAL a copy of this valuable agricultural paper

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultrymen, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.50.

STOP. Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME, of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves, and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents, or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.50. [25-tf.]

WHEN ARE TAXES DUE?

The frequence by which this question is asked, leads me to believe that a brief digest of Minnesosa tax law, as approved March 9th 1885, will be read with interest.

All taxes for the preceding year becomes due and payable in the County Treasurer's office on the first Monday in January each year.

The personal property taxes becomes delinquent on the first day of March following. A penalty of ten per cent. (one tenth of the whole tax) is added on all personal property taxes remaining unpaid on the lost day of February. All such tax penalties are used for defraying the expenses of the county and if the County Treasurer receives any personal property tax after the last day of February, without adding and collecting the penalty, the amount of such penalty shall be deducted from his salary.

On the first day of April following the County Treasuret shall make out and deliver to the Clerk of Court a certified list of all personal property taxes remaining unpaid on the last day of March and the Clerk of Court shall immediately issue his warrant to the Sheriff of the county, directing him to proceed to collect the same. If such taxes, with penalty and cost, are not paid on demand, the Sheriff shall distrain sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the person charged with such taxes, if within the county, to pay the same. The Sheriff shall immediately advertise such property for for sale, and, if such taxes are not paid before the day of sale, proceed to sell the same at public vendue, or so much thereof as will be sufficient to pay taxes with penalty and cost. The cost to the Clerk of Court is 25 cents for each warrant, and the Sheriff is allowed the same fees for collecting taxes and making distress and sale of property as are collected by law to constables for making levy and sale of property on execution. The traveling fee, 10 cents per mile, to be "computed from county seat to place of making distress." No personal property shall be exempt from seizure for the payment of such taxes.

If the Sheriff, for want of property whereon to levy, is unable to collect the taxes, he shall file with the Clerk of Court on the first day of June following a list of all such uncollected taxes with an affidavit stating that he had made diligent search and inquiry for goods and chattles, wherewith to satisfy such taxes, but was unable to find any. If the Sheriff shall have neglected to collect any taxes that were collectable, he shall be held liable to the county for the whole amount of such taxees.

The Clerk of Court shall deliver such list and affidavits to the Board of County Commissioners at their first session thereafter and they shall cancel such taxes as they are satisfied cannot be collected. Within ten days thereafter, the County Auditor shall file such revised list with the Clerk of Court, who shall, within ten days after the filing of said list, issue a citation to each dilinquent taxpayer, whose name is on the list reguiring him to appear on the first day of the next general term of the District Court in the county, and show cause, if any ther be, why such tax with penalty and cost should not be paid. If the taxpayer fails to do so, the county will obtain judgment against him for the full amount of such tax, penalty and cost. No property is exempt for the sattisfaction of such judgment.

The taxes on real estate are, as aforesaid, due and payable on the first Monday in January; if not paid before the first day of June following a penalty of ten per cent. will be added, and if not paid before the first Monday in January following five per cent. will again be added, making the penalty on the delinquent tax fifteen per cent. The County Auditor will then make out a list of all the delinquent real estate taxes, including penalties in the county, giving a full description of each piece or parcel of land on which such delinquent taxes are levied and deliver such list to the Clerk of the Court on or before the 20th day of January. The filing of such list shall have the force and effect of filing a complaint in an action by the county against each piece or parcel of land therein described for the amount of the unpaid tax and penalty. The Clerk of Court shall, within fifteen days thereafter, make and deliver to the County Auditor a copy of the list so filed and attach thereto a notice stating, that the owner or others who claim any right, title or interest in the land described in the list, are notified that judgment will be entered against such land for the full amount of taxes, penalties, cost and interest unless objection or defence in writing be filed with the Clerk of Court on or before the 20th day of March following showing cause, why such taxes or part thereof, shall not be paid. The County Auditor shall then have the notice and the list published once in each of two consecutive weeks in some newspaper designated by the County Commissioners and printed in the English language within the county. When such publication shall have been made, the notice shall be deemed to have been served and, if no answer is made, judgment will be obtained against the land for the taxes. No error, irregularity, or omission in writing or printing the list shall effect such judgment.

On the first Monday in May, in each year, the County Auditor shall commence to sell all pieces or parcels of land against which, judgment has been rendered for taxes and proceed with such sale, from day to day, for six consecutive days, or until the whole be sold. He shall sell each piece or parcel of land separately and for no less sum, than the amount of the tax judgment. If no bidder offers to pay such amount the County Auditor shall bid in the same for the State. At any time after the sale, and before the forfeiture of such land bid in for the State, the County Auditor shall convey all the right of the State to any person, who desires to pay the taxes, with penalty, cost and interest to the date of such conveyance.

County Auditors and County Treasurers, their debuties, or their clerks are not allowed to buy land at tax sales, or conveyance of land bid in by the State.

The amount for which the land is sold draws interest at the rate of one and one-half per cent per month from date of sale to date of redemption.

If the owner or others, that may have any title, or interest in the land, does not redeem the same within two years after date of sale, by paying the amount of judgment and interest, the purchaser will obtain full title to the property.

The redemption of the land sold for taxes, of 1883, will expire on the 15th day of September, 1886, but the delinquent taxes of 1884, coming under the new law, will be advertised in February and the tax sale commenced on the first Monday in May, 1886, the redemption will expire on the first Monday in May 1888.

It shall be the duty of the County Auditor, at least three months before the expiration of the time for redeeming lands, hereafter sold for taxes (commencing with the tax sale of 1884,) to publish in a newspaper, printed in the english language and published in the county, a list of all unredeemed lands as sold, giving full description of each tract or lot, and the amount required to redeem the same, together with a notice giving the date on which the time for redemption will expire. Said list and notice to be published once a week, in three successive weeks. The cost for entering judgment and advertising the delinquent tax list, before the tax sale is twenty-five cents on each parcel, lot or tract of land and the same fee for the last publication giving notice of expiration of time for redemption making the total cost, 50 cents for each description in the delinquent tax list.

This is only a short abstract of the tax laws, as they now stand on our own statute and I think it is sufficient answer to the question, as to the time the taxes should be paid.

Respectfully
O. H. LUCKEN.

Good Management Pays.

A Wisconsin dairyman uttered a great and pregnant truth, says the Rural New Yorker, when he remarked at a meeting of dairymen that "it was not by a special dispensation of Providence that a certain farmer received $98 per head for the yearly product of his cows while his neighbor recieved only $30 per head." "So it is not a special act of Providence," remarks Mr. Henry Stewart, "that on one side of the fence corn yields 80 bushels to the acre and the hay three tons, while on the other side the products are 30 bushels of corn and a ton of hay." An enterprising farmer writes that he is cutting his second crop of clover which yields one ton to the acre, and his neighbors wonder how it is. The secret is that this farmer used plaster on his clover, which made all the difference; his other crops are equally conspicuous and remarkable because he uses fertilizers liberally as well as manure. The rain falls on all alike, but the better farmer gets the most good from the rain and sun because he prepares the ground in enriching it, thus giving the natural elements a better chance to extend their benign influence.

to be commenced in April, as well as

A Brilliant Romance by Wm. Black,

to follow in the month of July, together with

Another Sterling Story by Miss Braddon,

But, besides the works of these distinguished authors on the other side of the Atlantic, new stories have been secured from the following noted American writers:

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT,

J. T. TROWBRIDGE,
EDWARD EVERETT HALE,
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS,
ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS,

The Opening Story of the New Volume (for January 3, 1886) is entitled

MUCH ADO

BY FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,

Author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," "Through One Administration," "A Fair Barbarian," &c., &c., &c.

In presenting these superior attractions, the New York Sunday Mercury will not lose any of those varied and attractive features which, for nearly Fifty Years, have made it a welcome guest to a Hundred Thousand Families throughout the length and breadth of the land. It will continue as heretofore to make a which it will furnish more accurately than any of the so-called dramatic journals—mere trade papers, which have no influence with the theatrical profession and no circulation among the people.

ALL THE BEST HUMORISTS OF THE COUNTRY

Including Bill Nye, F. E. Huddle, Opie P. Reed, Ella Adams, Alex. E. Sweet, are regular contributors to the New York Sunday Mercury, which far surpasses in merit and variety any humorous paper in the world.

and, in fact, those who subscribe for the New York Sunday Mercury will have a combination of first-class reading matter, such as no other paper in the country can present. In fact, the New York Sunday Mercury offers all the literary features of a First-class Magazine, the News Features of a Leading Daily, and the Combined Attractions of a Family Newspaper.

The National Tribune

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Is one of the less than half-a-dozen really great family papers in the country.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
Published at the National Capitol.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
Devoted to a history of the war.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
Devoted to the interests of ex-soldiers and sailors.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
That makes a bold and persistent fight for their rights.

IT IS THE ONLY ONE
That continually insists on justice being done the country's defenders.

A SPLENDID EIGHT-PAGE, 56-COLUMN PAPER,

Printed on fine white paper, edited with signal ability, and filled with the most interesting matter that can be procured.

ONLY $1 A YEAR—TWO CENTS A WEEK.

The National Tribune is the result of years of earnest, thoughtful effort, accompanied by a heavy expenditure of money, to build up at the Capital of the country a

which should be a welcome weekly visitor at every fireside from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and champion effectively the cause of loyalty and good government, and of justice to the soldiers and sailors of the late war, their widows, children and dependent relatives. How well this has been done is best indicated by the wonderful success of the paper which has attained popularity and circulation more rapidly than any other in the history of American journalism.

FEATURES OF THE PAPER.

The National Tribune makes a special feature of the history and reminiscences of the war for the preservation of the Union. It publishes in fact the

of that gigantic struggle, for its history is not a warped and biased panegyric of some particular man or men, who are given credit for everything that succeeded. It is made up of the testimony of a multitude of witnesses, the plain, unvarnished stories of men in every rank and degree who did the marching, digging and shooting and carried forward the war through all its varying phases to a glorious success. The great value of The National Tribune's history is everywhere recognized, and its files are carefully preserved in every large library and historical collection in the country—north or south.

Besides this it presents every week a splendid array of Editorials on current Topics—Stories by the Best Authors—Wit, Humor and Information—Agricultural Notes of the Greatest Value—Household Hints and Suggestions—Synopsis of the News of the Week—Answers to Correspondents—Bright Miscellanny, etc., which will interest, amuse and instruct every member of the family.

GEN. JOHN A. LOGAN,

the grand soldier and statesman, will shortly begin a series of intensely interesting articles descriptive of the stirring and important events in which he shared and played a leading part. These alone will be worth vastly more than the price asked for the paper.

John McElroy, whose "Andersonville" had a sale exceeding that of any book published since "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and whose "Red Acorn" and other war writings have given him a place in the front rank of American authors, will contribute a series of humorous military sketches, entitled "The Reminiscences of an Army Mule."

Holiday novelties in endless variety; C. O. D. Clothing House.

The village of Red Lake Falls voted $10,000 in aid to the proposed Lake Park road; and the town of Lake Pleasant followed suit with $4,000. We have reason to believe that every town asked to vote a bonus will do so with a good will and a large majority. The people are getting around to their interests at last.

Call early and make your selection of Christmas and New Year's cards, at Van Dyke & Co's.

The Norman County Index issued a 16 page edition last week. It looks like the Index must be doing a good business, when it is forced to print 96 columns to accommodate its advertisers and preserve its columns of reading matter. The Index is a strictly reliable newspaper; nothing trashy, sensational or frothy about it.

To be buoyant, bright and lively drink only Hack & Gallasch May Flower tea.

The dime sociable, given by the ladies of the Baptist society, at the residence of Mrs. Robert Houston on Friday evening last, was largely attended and a very pleasant and enjoyable time was had. A magnificent lunch was served to which all present did ample justice. The receipts, which are to go toward furnishing the new Baptist church, were very satisfactory.

One cup of Hack & Gallasch May Flower tea calls for another.

C. G. Rapp. a prominent merchant of St. Hilaire, started for a visit with friends at his old home, last Thursday evening. Well, Charlie deserves the best there is and we trust that he may not be disappointed in a matrimonial venture, provided he decides to embark.

J. B. Helmes the wide-awake and enterprising real estate agent, of Red Lake Falls, was in our city last Saturday, shaking hands with his many friends and in his genial way informed us that the bonds of the proposed railroad had been voted on by the village and was unanimously carried, not one single vote being cast in opposition, showing very plainly that the people know that they want a railroad to open up and develope their vast resources.

Christmas novelties in party ties, gloves, mufflers, kid and cashmere &c., C. O. D. Clothing House.

The jury in the Hutchinson murder case, after deliberating until 9 p. m., returned a verdict of "guilty as charged in the indictment." On Wednesday morning the prisoner was brought into court to receive his sentence which was to be confined in the County jail for a period of forty days, then, upon some day to be appointed by the Governor, to be taken thence to the place of execution, and hanged by the neck until dead. The prisoner received his sentence with stoical indifference, without even a change of color.

The "Bee Hive," Hack & Gallasch store, is the best and cheapest in the city.

Last Wednesday evening Master Gordon McGrew met with a very painful and most inconvenient accident by the explosion of a cartridge, with which he and some of his companions were drilling for the purpose of setting a slow match to, for a little sport as the boys express it and while in the act of putting the cotton string into the drilled part of the shell, with a match using the end that had the brimstone on (through mistake) it ignited at once, causing immediate explosion lacerating the thumb and forefinger of his right hand inflicting a most painful and dangerous wound.

Wanted, at the Bee Hive, 1,000 bushels of oats and potatoes in trade.

Stewart & Stanton have just recieved five car loads of fine dressed hogs for their large packing house.

Cards, cards, cards, cheaper than ever at Van Dyke & Co.

The JOURNAL received a call from W. H. Wallace of the Kittson County Enterprise, last week, shaking hands with us in our absence. Hope to be at home next time, Bro. W.

The people who went to the Southern States to escape the weather this winter are signyfing their intentions of returning at an early date to escape the gentle zephyr breezes of the orange groves intermingled with the howling blizzards which they are becoming used to, having had in the past few weeks storms and blizzards that makes the Northwest hide her face behind her mantle of the most pleasant weather that ever shown upon earth, and to withdraw her renowned glory of being first in the ranks as a blizzard producing country. But still holding her right and title of being the land and the leader of the renowned No. 1 hard wheat. Minnesota forever.

Look over our stock of Holiday goods before buying and save money. C. O. D. Clothing House.

Mr. T. Torgrimson of Maple Bay, was in the city last Friday and gave the JOURNAL a pleasant call. In conversation Mr. T. informed us that he has 40 acres under the plow, which he sows to wheat and three horses with which to do the work, and in connection with his wheat raising, has 13 head of cattle the latter he says is No. 1 hard in price and profit the year around. Looking at things in this way and understanding as he does the kind of farming which is sure of success in this country, which has been demonstrated by so many of our most successful farmers who are to day in good circumstances, and who came to this country with a small amount of cash and a good head upon their shoulders.

For fine albums, toilet cases and holiday cards go to Van Dyke & Co.

The social given by Mr. and Mrs. Stone, last Thursday evening at their residence was attended by a large number of friends, the evening was pleasantly and profitably spent. The older and more sedate ones providing ways and means to pay off the debt of the Congregational parsonage, and to resume worship in the church, which has been without a pastor for sometime past, while the younger and less careworthy indulged in a game of monograms, which was very progressive to the time at which supper was served by the hostess, consisting of a bounteous and most inviting repast of roast turkey, chicken, salads, pies, cakes, etc., after which the game of monograms and the business of the church was resumed and after a most enjoyable evening having been past the participators betook themselves to to their respective homes, acknowledging that Mr. and Mrs. Stone are excellent entertainers and that they spare no pains in having each and every one made at home.

An indictment was brought in charging Messrs Rosenthal & Wile with carrying the largest, finest and cheapest line of Christmas presents in the County. We tried to quash the above but the people say it goes. C. O. D. Clothing House.

By the courtesy of Assistant manager, Geo. Copeland, of the St. P. & D. R. R., it was our pleasure to visit the young giant of the Northwest—Duluth, last week. The last time we were there, in the spring of 1878, Duluth had scarce 3,000 inhabitants; the last census showed 18,000, which shows a most remarkable growth. It would be simply useless, in one short newspaper article, to tell all of the improvements made, in fact it would require many weeks hard work to gather them all up. On Superior street are many fine new brick blocks, and where once we used to see old wooden rat-holes now are fine brick business houses by the score. Everybody seemed contented, prosperous and happy and when we began to inquire into the cause of this state of things we found that it was caused principally through the handling of our wheat. This led us into a train of reflection and we tried to imagine what would be the effect if Duluth had access to our granaries by means of a canal, and if she were sufficiently alive to her interests to build flouring mills so that she could take a hand in the manufacture of all that wheat into flour. If the simple handling of our wheat in transit has had the effect to make a thriving city of 18,000 inhabitants in seven years, it would not be at all wild to predict a city of 100,000 in a short time after she had set her magnificent water-power at work grinding our wheat. Some may think the canal scheme chimerical, (but it is far from being so, and will some day be an established fact) well, what's the matter with a railroad then? Is that, too, a wild and chimerical scheme? If the Duluthians were sufficiently wide awake to their own vital interests they would not rest by day or night until one or both should be accomplished. As the water-route is by far the best that should be the burden of their song until they had secured it. With it their future would be absolutely certain; without it there is such an element of uncertainty as should spur up every public-spirited man to action until the canal is an accomplished fact. The canal and the flouring-mills would make of Duluth the largest and most prosperous city in the State. Of course, we dropped in to see our brethren of the press, and found them all jubilant over the prospects of the future and all unanimous on the necessity for direct communication with the Valley. Fred Reynolds has a flourishing law business, having recently bought into one of the leading law firms of the city, and we saw many other former residents of this city and vicinity now in business there, and all doing well. We did not stay long enough to thoroughly examine into the workings of the new grain law but saw enough to convince us that the farmers must not bury the tomahawk just yet, until a farmers' Legislature, elected to attend to the farming interests shall have doctored up the law a bit, while it is better than nothing, it is far from perfect, yet before we shall be able to obtain a perfectly free and open market.

DIED.

SMITH—At his residence on Houston Avenue, Friday, Dec. 18th 1885, of softening of the brain, MR. FREDERICK SMITH, aged 74 years.

The deceased was born in Conway, Mass., in 1811, and lived there with his parents until manhood, when he removed to Clinton, Mich., in 1836 and engaged himself in the wagon making business; two years later he was married to Miss Sitira Bivins, of a most highly respected family, living there and doing a thriving business for several years, at which time to better himself, he and wife removed to Wabasha Co., Minn., in 1868, when he again engaged in the manufacture of wagons more extensively, building up a large and prosperous business, at which time his health began to fail him and it became necessary for a change of climate, when he removed to Crookston and again engaged in the manufacturing of wagons accumulating considerable property. It will be remembered by many of our citizens that Mr. Smith had the misfortune three years ago of being smitten with softening of the brain and ever since being unable to labor, but was not confined to his bed until four days previous to his death, always bearing this burden uncomplainingly, having been a member of the Methodist church for the past 37 years and most devout and true christain worker. Thus another of our old and respected neighbors and citizens passes from our midst, revered and respected by all who knew him as a true friend and neighbor and a worker in the church.

Mr. E. D. Childs attended the meeting of the State Grange at Moorhead last week. He reports an interesting and instructive session. It is really too bad that there is not a grange, or some other kind of a farmers organization in every town in the Northwest. A vast amount of good could be accomplished.

Remember our "Christmas charity" and send the people to the C. O. D. Clothing House.

It is wonderful to see the amount of foul stuff that is shipped to Duluth in wheat. The elevators are using the chaff, straw and weed seeds for fuel to run their engines, and find enough to keep them almost entirely supplied. Will our farmers never learn to keep that stuff at home and save paying freight on it?

From a party just down from Maple Lake we learn that Uncle Knowles lost his little two-year-old child last week. He was down to Crookston and the child was taken with convulsions about midnight. Mrs. Knowles took the little one in her arms and went to a neighbors, about a mile, to get help. The child only lived until 7 next morning.

The Band boy's ball to be given in the opera house Friday evening bids fair to be one of the most successful and pleasant parties that have been given in our city this season. It deserves to be well atteneded to help maintain the band in which our city takes just pride by giving a helping hand. It will be first class in every respect.

LATER—We learn since the above was put in type that the band boys have postponed their ball until New Year's Eve.

Todd County Argus: THE POLK JOURNAY has received a letter from a young man in the east who wants to know if it would be advisable for him to come to Minnesota. He says he has saved enough money from his wages as a farm hand to bring him to this State and have fifteen hundred dollars left. He says he has but recently married and his wife has saved six hundred dollars of her wages. There is no need of giving any advice to such a couple. They could prosper in Minnesota or any other State. Such a couple could buy an improved farm of 160 acres in Todd County, paying half down and providing a team, cows, pigs, &c., for running the farm and be prosperous from the start. Their habits of industry would in five years put them ahead so far that they could live at their ease the balance of their lives.

Card of Thanks.

The Congregational Sabbath school desires to congratulate Miss Gorman upon her successful management of the juvenile opera—"Red Riding Hood" on the 11th inst., and to express its gratitude for the very enjoyable entertainment furnished the public, and especially for her generosity in dividing proceeds with the Sunday school.

D. N. TAYLOR, Supt.

A Comical Mistake.

Last week Tuesday, while the Hutchinson murder trial was in progress, our reporter was setting in the vicinity of two men who were discussing the case. They appeared to be strangers. One of them said: "which is the prisoner at the bar?" "I don't know, exactly," said the other, "but I think it is that fellow sitting inside the railing in front of the judge's desk. Yes, I am sure that's him by the villainous cast of his countenance!" "Yes," replied the other that must be him; his countenance is enough to convict him before any intelligent jury in the world!" And all the while deputy clerk of the court, Frank Montague, continued to sit in "the little railing" blissfully unconscious of his "villoinious aspect."

Gone to His Reward.

A. J. Underwood, editor of the Fergus Falls Evening Journal, died at his residence in that city at 3 o'clock a. m. Monday, Dec. 21st at the age of 53 years. In November he went to Kansas to benefit his health, which had been injured by over work, but failing to receive the benefit hoped for he returned, reaching home the Saturday before his death. He commenced the publication of the Journal, at Fergus Falls, in July, 1873, and has been one of the successful newspaper publishers of the State ever since. He was well known and highly respected throughout the State, a member of the G. A. R. and an humble, devoted christain gentlemen. All who knew him will regret to hear of his death, while yet in his prime.

We extend a special invitation to the ladies while doing their Holiday shopping to examine our line of suitable Christmas presents for gentlemen; C. O. D. Clothing House.

MINNESOTA'S DAIRY INTEREST.

St. Paul Dispatch.

The annual convention of Minnesota dairymen, which closed a three days' session at Red Wing last night, has been the largest and most important ever held in this State, and its records constitute an import index of the steady growth of the milk, butter and cheese industry in the State. In looking over the county papers of Southern, Southwestern and Central Minnesota during the past few months, we have been struck with the splendid evidence of thrift and prosperity which they present. They are for the most part crowded with local advertising many of them are greatly enlarged in size, and all are immensely improved as compared with what they were a few years ago. These signs of improvement and increased prosperity are especially noticeable in the weekly journals of Southwestern Minnesota, the region which some years ago was well nigh ruined by the grasshopper invasion and failure of the wheat crop. The country papers of that region were poor enough then and nearly all had a starved appearance. Now they appear plethoric with business, and they are filled with congratulatory articles upon the march of improvement in their respective localities. If the newspapers are prosperous it is an unfailing sign that the whole region is prosperous. The change noted has been brought about mainly by the substitution of dairying and stock-breeding in the region named for well-nigh exclusive wheat-raising. Southern and Southwestern Minnesota has not boomed and exalted itself like Northern Minnesota and Dakota, but it has been steadily growing rich until now the Northern region has caught the inspiration of its example and is largely increasing its cattle and dairy interests. We believe that Minnesota is destined to become, within comparatively a few years, the leading stock-raising and dairying State of the county.

The convention at Red Wing concluded its labers with the adoption of some wholesome resolutions on subject of adulterated and counterfeit products. As Judge Koon has pronounced the anti-butterine and oleomargine law unconstitutional some radical action is necessary to protect both the community and the producer of honest butter. The convention resolved to appoint a committee of three from different parts of the State to act with the dairy commission and his assistant to urge upon congress the passage of an act empowering the national board of health of the United States to appoint inspectors, who shall examine all the ingredients going into the manufacture of neutral oil used in the manufacture of artificial dairy products with a right to condemn anything injurious or detrimental to the public health, and to compel such manufacturers to keep a record of sales, with full names and address of purchaser; such record to be open to public inspection, and a revenue stamp of 10 cents per pound to be placed upon barrels or cans containing neutral oils, these regulations to be enforced by appropriate penalties. A United States law, which would be operative in all the States, would of course furnish the most effective protection, and the Dispatch desires to loudly call the attention of our Minnesota delegation in congress to the demand of the dairy interest for much needed legislation. No other one thing would do more to enhance the prosperity of Minnesota than effective regulations for the protection of our dairy farmers.

The Library Magazine.

Alden's Library Magazine is quite the peer of the great $4 monthlies, in the amount and high quality of the literature which it presents, though its cost is only the nominal sum of $1.50 a year. Among the contents in the current number are articles by such noted authors as Canon Farrar, Max Muller, the Bishop of Carlisle, Cardinal Newman, Schaff, and others. This magazine ought to have a circulation of a hundred thousand. You can get a specimen from the publishers, John B. Alden, New York, for the price of 15 cents.

"Elia" and Charles Lamb.

A unique genius, that of Charles Lamb. Just like nothing that ever appeared before them, or has since appeared, are the quaint and delightful "Essays of Elia," a new edition of which has recently been issued by Alden, "The Literary Revolution" publisher of New York. Turn to any of your cyclopedias and they will tell you that Charles Lamb was one of the most charming essayists that the English language has ever known, and also that his "Essays of Elia" are the choicest of his works. They are not merely the first work of their class, but, like "Pilgrim's Progress" and "Robinson Crusoe," they constitute a class by themselves. The volume is certainly one of the most delightful of the books described in Mr. Alden's 148-page illustrated catalogue, which he offers to send for 4 cents, or the 16-page catalogue which is sent free. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, New York City.

It was that successful dairyman, Holmes of Owatonna, who said "water must be warmed in some way, and I find it cheaper to warm it with wood than with hay or grain." The practice is now quite common of warming the water, and wherever tried, it has been found beneficial, and once tried never abandoned. Every farmer cannot conveniently warm the water for all of his stock, but most farmers could with a little labor and expense, water them without exposing them as is so cruelly done by many. It is not an uncommon sight to see a herd of cattle shivering, hooking, slipping and freezing around a pond hole half a mile from shelter, with the thermometer down 30 degrees below zero. Cattle watered in this way will always be humpbacked and be lean, roughhaired and scrubby. There is no profit in feeding them. O. C. Gregg, a very practical and successful dairyman, says his rule is always to keep the stable always above the freezing point and never let his stock out when it is below zero. There are days enough when the thermometer stands above zero to give the stock the necessary airing and exercise. Neighbor Slipshod remarks that it don't pay to take so much trouble; it is too much labor and expense for the profit there is in it. Now there is no doubt that he could make a plausable theory from his premises. The solid fact, however, that none can gainsay is that the men who take the trouble to care for the comfort of their stock, even to all the little details which Slipshod says are of no account, are the men who have the money, the pleasant homes, that are able to take papers, attend conventions and to do a hundred other things that Slipshod says don't pay and he can't afford to do.

We are not dead, nor are we sleeping, but have been so busy that we had no time for finding news.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

Our town is torn all up over railroad matters. First, along comes a corps of surveyors, who stake out, and level up, a line for the Duluth & Manitoba Company. An agent follows at once and secures the right of way. In every case, we believe, but six, the right is secured free, or at small cost, and they are now proceeding to condemn tracts over which they cannot otherwise secure the right of way. We are morally sure that this road is backed by the N. P. R. R. Co.

Now comes along the St. P. M. & M. surveyors, straggling about, crossing and recrossing the D. & M. lines, and for the last four miles north of here, running on their line, and we are informed, using their (the D. & M.) stakes.

Saturday, notice was posted for an election asking for $2,500 bonds from our town, to run 30 years, at 6 per cent., to be held in trust by the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company until the road is completed, which must be by December 1st, 1886. Then upon delivery of the bonds, we are to receive $2,500 in stock at par value of the D. & M. Railroad.

Now, let us look over the matter, Bro. Cooke, and make up our minds as to how we shall vote.

1. It costs every farmer five cents per bushel for every bushel of wheat he hauls to Beltrami, and this is a very low estimate, for now the nearest farmer to market in this town is 12 miles, and if the road is built and a station put in the town, as is agreed, he will not be over four miles at the fartherest. He can thus easily haul four loads a day, or in other words, can haul as much thus in one day as now in four days, and much more, for the roads from here to Beltrami generally are very bad. This time saved in plowing season is very valuable.

2. We can better afford the bonds for the N. P. Railroad, or connections, than to have the St. P. M. & M. road for nothing, as we want competition.

3. The increased value of our lands will much more than repay us for all taxes on account of bonds.

4. The taxable property the road will own in our town will more than pay any increase in taxes for the bonds, or for the increase in value of our land that may be taxed.

5. We shall have a town in our midst that in a short time will make better markets for all our products.

6. Everything we buy will be cheaper, as then, instead of small stores scattered from two to five miles apart, there will be several large stores at one place, and from all I can learn the price for wheat on the Northern Pacific at Fargo is from three to seven cents per bushel more than from points the same distance from Duluth on the St. P. M. & M. Railroad.

Now as to any serious arguments against voting the bonds, as far as we are concerned, they do not exist only in the minds of a few anxious persons in some places they fear may be injured by the road coming through here.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Messrs. Gilmour & Fisk are to erect an office here for law, loan and collection. Mr. Gilmour is to have charge of the office.

How was it that the prosecuting witness in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. W. J. Hiligoss failed to appear? The county has been put to considerable expense and no one punished.

The mills are rushed with business, and will fit up with full setts of rollers by spring. Mr. Sohler is now away looking at the different mills, so as to have nothing but the best.

Our little town is rapidly coming up to the requirements of a city. In fact, more drunken men can be seen any time on our streets than in Crookston. This is a disgrace to us all and must be stopped.

Last Saturday a free for all fight occurred on our streets, in which several took a hand. No one seriously injured, but loud threats of cutting out hearts, and shooting filled the air. Unfortunately we have no peace officer living here, and consequently the party making the disturbance went unpunished. On account of the trouble, our teacher, Mr. Reiglee, discontinued his school, as he feared his life would be taken. This is the work of whiskey and still our County fathers give license for saloons under the guise of drug stores, to run in our little country towns, where we have no benefit of police or other officers, and this, too, against the expressed will of our voters at the last election.

La Due & Co. are well stocked up with Christmas goods of all kinds, and are having good sales.

There will be a Christmas tree at the school house, and we expect to have a good time.

Quite a number of our young people have been married this fall, among the number are: Mr. Dean Richmond and Miss Ada Ellis; Mr. H. C. Taro, and Miss Viola Courtright. We wish them all the greatest happiness.

We need a tri-weekly mail, as the amount of matter going over this route is very large and constantly increasing.

Dr. F. H. Stuart comes here for one day on the 1st, 15th and last of every month. There is no better physician in the country.

Mr. Owen Nelson is running the school until a teacher can be secured.

Why is it that our young folks cannot have a dance, or good social time, without liquor?

La Due & Co. are paying market price in trade for wheat.

The Fertile House is crowded all the time. Fritz keeps a good house and deserves his patronage.

Both of our blacksmith and wagon shops are running full blast and turning out a number of good sleighs.

There will be a full line of machinery put in here next spring.

We are glad to see THE JOURNAL again doubled up, and hope the subscription list will increase in the same ratio.

"Heathen Chinee."

From the Nebraskan.

The appearance of the Presbyterian church was odd enough as hanging on the walls was the large picture of China and numerous pieces of the most beautiful and costly embroidery. Tank Kee is of English descent but was captured by Chinese Pirates when four years of age and turned loose in the streets of Canton. He was adopted into the family of a Mandarin and was given a good education; afterwards serving in the army. He came to this country as financial agent of the Chinese commission to the Centennial in 1876. His advantages in that empire befit him to give a clear, truthful history of the manners and customs of that people. He spoke of the antiquity of the Chinese civilization and how the oils used by the Egyptians in embalming were furnished by them. He also spoke of the peculiar belief of the Chinese as to the shape of the earth. The lecturer held his audience with wrapt attention during the whole evening by his fluent and pleasant delivery. Seldom have we listened to anything with which we have been more interested.

The Ladies' Temperance Column.

PLEDGE.

"Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

The Worker: A gentleman said to us: "I do not favor prohibition. It would be an injustice to the men who have put their money in the business, besides it would throw thousands out of employment." We replied: "You do not look at the issue from the right side. You take a contractor's view." Just before the war closed, a government contractor said in a car: "I do hope the war will not stop under two years. I will lose thousands of dollars, besides many men will be turned out of employment from the government works." A lady passenger, clad in weeds of mourning, rose to her feet, and with tearful voice said: Sir, I have a brave boy and a husband sleeping the sleep of death in a soldier's cemetery. I have only one boy left, and he is in front of the foe. Oh! God, I wish the cruel war would close now." He saw the point. Do you? Then stop the rum traffic.

Report of the Ohio M. E. Conference on Temperance.

Resolved, That recognizing the truth expressed in our Diciplin that the business of manufacturing and vending intoxicating drinks is against the principles of morality, political economy, and the public welfare, and holding to our long-established convictions in favor of total legal prohibition as the only remedy for the liquor traffic, we are therefore conscientiously opposed to the policy of regulation, either by any other measure that will give legal protection to this traffic, which in itself is evil, only evil, and evil continually.

The brilliant Charles Lamb wrote: "The waters have gone over me, but out of the black depths, could I be heard, I would cry out to all those who have set a foot in the perilous flood. Could the youth to whom the flavor of the first wine is as delcious as the opening scene of life, or the entering upon some newly-discovered paradise, look into my desolation, and be made to understand what a dreary thing it is when he shall feel himself gowing down a precipice with open eyes and passive will—to see all godliness emptied out of him, and yet not be able to forget the time it was otherwise—to bear about the piteous spectacle of his own ruin; could he see my feverish eye, feverish with last night's drinking, and feverish fooling for to-night's repetition of the folly; could he but feel the body of death out of which I cry hourly with feebler outcry to be delivered, it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the earth, in all the pride of its mantling temptation."

Of late the daily papers are full of murders committed by persons under the influence of liquors, and yet these papers have not a word to say about putting away the saloons, which are responsible for the deaths. These editors are to blame for not pointing out the remedy. We know that some of them are ready to excuse themselves because some of the great moral teachers of our land and of this State, advocate the licensing the cause of these deaths. These moral teachers will have to answer for this false teaching at a time when excuses will not palliate the offense, nor save them though all eternity from the society of murderers and criminals. Beware of consenting and assenting to the licensing of sin.

Bishop Feehan: Intemperance is one of the greatest evils that has cursed this world. It is worse than war, worse than plague and famine; for after war peace comes again, and the plague and famine close when they have exhausted their thirst for victims; but intemperance goes on from generation to generation, and in every class of society. Many and many a home has it made desolate, and many a man has it sent prematurely to the dishonored grave of a drunkard, leaving to those after him an inheritance of shame—or maybe of guilt. It is for this that mothers have wept tears of blood while fathers have revealed in delirium of drunkenness, and little children have asked for bread.

Christmas Charity.

"He who giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord." It has been our object for some time to contribute in a substantial manner to the poor and needy of this city, and vicinity and in doing so, have concluded to pursue the following plan: We will furnish gratis to each and every poor, or needy family, their Christmas dinner, consisting of turkeys, chickens and the substantials therewith. It is our aim to dispense this charity where it properly belongs, and in view of that fact, beg of the Clergy and others, who feel interested in our object to send such persons to us and have them receive our gifts. We shall be prepared to dispose of the above, the day preceeding Christmas, and trust that the people will have no hesitancy in coming forward, and receiving what we most heartily wish and give them. Should they have any delicacy in the matter, if our citizens will but furnish us with the names of such poor or needy people, we will deliver our charity at their door.

FARMERS FAVORED AT LAST.

There is certainly no section of the United States where farmers need reading matter, especially suited to the conditions and climate in which they live, than do our Northwestern agriculturists, stock-breeders, fruit-growers, poultry-men, dairymen, etc., etc. A journal devoted exclusively to these branches of husbandry, and one that would champion the farmers' cause as against monopolies, has long been desired by our farmers, but owing to the low price of farm products for several years past, no man or body of men could be found who dared to risk money in the establishment of a paper dependent alone upon the farmer class for its support; yet at the close of last season, and at a time, too, when wheat was lower than ever before, there came into our midst a man of energy, pluck and determination to serve the Northwestern farmer, believing them to be deserving of a high class, strong, vigorous and aggressive paper. After a thorough looking over of the situation and the conditions then existing, the intervals of its issue and price of its subscription was carefully considered and wisely decided. This paper is Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., and issued the 1st and 15th of each month, giving twenty-four papers a year for only 50 cents. Thus are our farmers favored with the best paper for their needs published. With the liberality which has characterized the management of this invaluable paper to our farmers, we are enabled to send it for one year in connection with the JOURNAL for only $1.50.

A Problem for the Farmer.

Alexandria News.

One of the most gigantic monopolies of the east is the so-called Standard Oil Company, an association aiming to control and actually controlling the petroleum market of the country. So omnipotent and arrogant has this monopoly become that a short time ago it attempted to control the retail prices of kerosene in New York City, and within the past year it has been charged with electing a United States Senator in a great State.

Here in the Northwest we have a far more dangerous, arrogant and overwhelming monopoly—the Miller's Association and Elevator Company of Minneapolis. Under the pretense of preserving and conserving the Falls of St. Anthony, an excellent water power has been developed in the centre of Minneapolis, with lavish appropriations secured from time to time, from the general government, exceeding in the aggregate $500,000. At first and years ago this power was chiefly used by a few of her leading citizens in the lumber industry. These men not only managed to have a good water power made for them at public expense, but also somehow managed to secure control of all, or nearly all, the pine in the State, and thereby controlling as they have the lumber market in the Northwest.

These men thus equipped having aquired large fortunes in their lumber and pine ventures, as the wheat product of the Northwest grew apace, turned their attention in the direction of milling and handling of this wheat and in order to get a firm a grip as possible on the wheat market as they had on the lumber market all, or nearly all, the millers in Minneapolis formed them-selves into an association for buying and handling wheat, as one single individual, and in connection with this and aid of the principal scheme a few of the nabob millers formed them-selves into an elevator company to handle and store the great bulk of the wheat crop. Thus it came to pass that at our local stations one and the same man, as agent, acts for both of these concerns and so far as the disposal of our wheat is concerned, we are practically in the hands of one monstrous and dangerous monopoly. In proof of the immensity of the monopoly witness the following facts:

Last fall the Millers' Association hired a noted railroad manager, Mr. Hiland at an annual salary of $10,000, so much had the business grown from the time Mr. Ardrews first served the Association at some $3,000 per annum. The Minneapolis Journal of the 4th of November last informs us, that the Association then actually held 10,000,000 bushels of wheat. An immense power. Here is what the Journal says:

The millers charged with a conspiracy to break down the price of wheat in Chicago, which they deny, and affirm that instead of being short they hold 10,000,000 bushels of cash wheat in the elevators in the northwest.

And in proof of the dangerous character of the monopoly, witness these facts. It is well known since Duluth became a market, it has been a small rival and something of an antidote against the grasp and greed of the Miller's Association of Minneapolis. A year ago or so the Miller's Association felt the competition of Duluth and in order to chek it and to glut the market there the Association suddenly and simultaneously from all the different elevators of its ALTER EGO—the Elevator Company—shipped large quantities of wheat to Duluth, a million bushels within a week or less, and now that navigation is closed we are informed by the Pioneer Press of Nov. 28th that the operation is to be repeated on a grander scale. Here is what the Pioneer Press says:

"The St. Paul & Duluth has during the past few days been handling a very large amount of wheat. Thursday 180 car loads were taken out of Minneapolis and yesterday 160 more. The average for the past week or ten days has been 160 cars, and the indications are that this heavy movement will continue for some time. The wheat is for storage at Duluth, and is said to be moving so freely because the Minneapolis elevator men now have on hand more than they can take care of."

If Duluth can be choked, then Minneapolis will have full swing.

Then in connection we will again refer to the boycotting at Glencoe recently attempted by the Association, and also a mild case of the same kind recently inflicted upon our neighbors at Ashby. Then too is to be noted, that while all of our farmers lost largely on last year's crop, it is said the three Pillsburys, John, Charley and George, cleared a cool million of dollars on that crop; and it is a matter of record in the probate court of La Crosse county, Wis., that the C. C. Washburn estate cleared something over a million dollars at its Minneapolis mills.

The truth is the millers were the only parties in Minneapolis who made any profit on the 1884 crop. It is now conceded by Chicago, and even admitted by New York, that the Miller's Association practicably controls the wheat market, and that by holding back, or rushing out from all its numerous local points the supply of wheat, it can manipulate the market at pleasure, and has largely done so during the last sixty days.

The Association is a far more dangerous monopoly than our railroad companies. The greed and grasp of the latter is fixed, visible and above board, while the former is fluctuating, silent and invisible. And that the former is much the more powerful of the two, was made potent last winter for while we needed as much legislative protection against the Association and Elevator Company as against the railroad companies, the legislature while it did vouchsafe us some railroad relief, gave us next to no elevator relief—none at least as far as the producer is concerned—a little for the middleman and brokers at the three terminal points. But it is said that there are some very nice and fine men in the Association and therefore there can be no great danger. Lord Byron said of the Corsair: "He was the mildest mannered man that ever scuttled ship or ever cut a throat." And yet in spite of this, piracy in the hands of even such a man was necessarily and inevitably dangerous and a pest. So it doesn't matter how much personal and individual goodness there may be among the members of the association, its necessary and inherent drift, practice and tendency as an association is that of the highest, most powerful, best systemized and exacting scheme of human greed arrogance and selfishness. Its very existance is based on the idea of its being the sole buyer and handler of wheat, and its practical life so far has been no departure from this.

We have thus briefly diagonized this great and threatening monopoly. On some future occasion the News will take the opportunity of making some suggestions as to what steps our farmers should take to emancipate themselves from this threatened danger.

THE DAKOTA VALLEY HERD.

The Northwest, so long noted for the best wheat in the world, is fast taking rank for its fine stock. We take the following account of a Dakota herd from the North Dakota Farmer, published at Jamestown, D. T. The Farmer says:

"The live stock interests of the Northwest are assuming porportions that will soon make it a leading factor in our agriculture. The nutritious grasses, everywhere abounding and to be had without money and without price, furnish the best of summer pasturage and the best of hay for winter feeding, and many of our farmers have found that there is more profit in investments in barns and cattle than in plowing and plows, and harvesters and threshers. It is apparent to anyone that the era of exclusive wheat raising is rapidly waning.

The Northwest is being peopled by the best blood of the oldest States, and these men want the best because it pays the best. It is not, therefore, surprising that we have territorial, district and county stock breeders associations, and that hundreds of the finest specimens of hogs, sheep and horses, as well as cattle, have been brought to Dakota during the past year for breeding purposes.

The herd of registered Holstein-Friesians brought in by I. C. Wade, of Jamestown, consisting of young cows, yearling heifers, heifer calves, yearling bulls and bull calves, in all sixty-five head, is among the most notable. Most of this stock was purchased from the Maplewood herd, which has long been noted for the superior excellence of its members and their general uniformity. Many of this young herd are prize winners, as well as discendants of prize winners and wonderful performers, representing the Rhoda, Jewel, Aggie and Netherland families. Among these new comers are the following:

A splendid yearling bull, "Abbekerk of Maplewood," No. 4264, H. H. B., bred by R. Saal, Abbekerk, North Holland, calved March 6, 1884, and imported in September, 1884. This fine animal was sired by Abbekerk 1st; prize winner at Amsterdam Exposition in 1884. Dam, Poeerbaat, with a record of 52 pounds per day at two years of age.

"Sir Christis Kirk," No. 4266, an animal of beautiful form and extra quality; bred by D. Schreuder, Watergang, North Holland; calved in June, 1884, and imported in September, 1884. Sired by district bull of Watergang; dam, Klara, sister of Netherland Queen.

Mr. Wade was also fortunate in securing Jewel's "Prince of Wayne," No. 32, F. H. B.; calved March 2, 1885. Sire, Prince of Wayne 2d, 780; he out of Queen of Wayne, by Burley. Queen of Wayne, has a milk record of 78¼ pounds per day, 2,115 in thirty days, and 14,517 pounds in one year. Princess of Wayne, also out of the Queen, has a butter record of 22 pounds 9 ounces in seven days, 914 pounds in thirty days; her milk record being 20,469 pounds in one year. Dam, Jewel, No. 668, H. H. B., a perfect picture of Holstein beauty; took the sweepstakes prize as the best Holstein cow, at the St. Louis Fair this fall; record, 85½ pounds per day; in thirty days, 2,243½ pounds; in sixty days, 4,276½ pounds; butter record, 19 pounds, 7 ounces in seven days. This is one of the best bred calves in America.

He also has "Duquesne," No. 3,976, H. H. B., bred by Smiths & Powell, and a grandson of the celebrated cow Aggie.

"Prince Raoul," a fine bull calf, won first premiums this year at the Ohio and Illinois State Fairs, the Tri-State Fair at Toledo, O., and the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan Fair, at South Bend, Ind., and second premium at the St. Louis Fair.

The yearling heifers, Almee and Lady Jewel, were awarded first premiums at several State fairs, as also the heifer calf Neries. In the herd are several imported two-year-old cows, with milk records of from 35 to 50 pounds a day.

This herd has been pronounced the best of young Holstein-Friesians in the country, and over two-thirds of them are members of four families, which have produced thirty cows, each with a record of over 18,000 pounds of milk a year. The stock breeders and raisers of the Upper James River Valley are to be congratulated upon the accession of this valuable herd of Holstein-Friesians.

Mr. Wade has also purchased thirty fine-grade mares for breeding purposes, to be delivered in Jamestown early next spring."

The American Agriculturist for Jan. 1886.

The American Agriculturist for January announces, that it enters upon the new year under unusually auspicious circumstances. The old editorial force, who have been connected with that periodical for periods, running up to a century, has received further accessions in Dr. F. H. Hexamer, so long the editor of the "American Garden," and Mr. Chester P. Dewey, a writer of national reputation, and Mr. Seth Green, the noted Fish Culturist. The illustrations, of which there are a very large number, represent noted horses, cattle, pigs, cows, new fruits, new potatoes, designs for new buildings, farm conveniences, household conveniences, fruits, flowers, etc., etc. The full page engravings present two beautiful and appropriate winter scenes, executed in such a manner as to greatly please the eye. There are nearly one hundred original different articles on the Milk Supply of Cities, Polled Cattle, Infectious Diseases on the Farm, Landscape Painting for Winter Effect, Wheat Experiments, The Best Lightening Rods, Clydesdales Horses, Work for the Winter Months, A New Quince, Cattle Stanchions, The Loss of our Game, etc., etc. The Household and Childrens Department abound in illustrations, while several new frauds are exposed in the Humbug Department. Price $1.50 per year, single numbers, 15 cents. Address, American Agriculturist, 751 Broadway, New York.

STOP. Before subscribing for an agricultural paper, consider where it is published and whether the teachings are adapted to the latitude in which you live. Farming in the Northwest cannot be conducted as it is East and be successful. FARM, STOCK AND HOME of Minneapolis, is edited by the farmers of the Northwest themselves and is the best, most practical and reliable paper a farmer can have. It is printed twenty-four times a year for only 50 cents, or we will send it and a copy of the JOURNAL for one year for $1.50. [illegible]

It is reported that P. C. Schmidt who went to Wisconsin for an innocent holiday visit was married last week. We wouldn't have thought that of P. C.

John T. Johnson was in from Maple Bay this week. He reports that Ole M. Johnsen, of Tilden, Ole Hanson and Mrs. Geo. Swift died recently, the former quite suddenly.

Janitor Ross was presented with a fine meerschaum pipe, as a Christmas present by the Auditor, Treasurer, Register and Clerk. It is a beauty and is very highly prized by Mr. Ross.

The blackmailing case drags its slow length along and bids fair to continue for some time yet. If the result will be to check this underhanded speculative business it will repay its cost fully.

The rink in Grand Forks was destroyed by fire early on Tuesday morning. The loss was total as there was no insuranee. The cadet band lose their instruments and uniforms, valued at about $1,000.

The St. Paul Globe's Christmas edition was a stunner. It was printed on pink, with a beautiful green cover, and was the handsomest Christmas edition we have seen. The Globe is a rattling paper for news.

Macdonell, of the New York Store, reports his holiday sales so big that he couldn't keep wrapping paper on hand to tie up the goods. Nevertheless he will get enough so that no one need keep away on that account.

A thoroughbred Polled Angus steer was slaughtered at Grand Forks last week; the first thoroughbred of any breed ever killed north of St. Paul that we know of. It will not be many years before this will be a common occurrence.

Last Saturday two of the noted and influential red men from the reservation was in our city offering for sale the numerous and various trinkets peculiar to the race, among which was a very fine moose head, which they asked $30 for, failing to meet with successful sales they departed.

On Friday morning last the morning passenger train dashed through a herd of 24 hogs belonging to the Hon. B. Sampson and killed eight, maiming four more so badly that they had to be killed. There had been some ground feed spilled on the track which enticed the hogs upon the track. They were fine shoats and will be quite a loss.

E. J. Regan the affable section boss of Kittson, gave us a pleasant call last Saturday. Mr. Regan is one of our old settlers in the valley and gives some very graphic accounts of the early pioneer days, and the rapid strides taken towards settlement; following the success of the old timers, many who today may be seen on their pleasant and comfortable farms.

The North Dakota Farmer is the name of a new agricultural paper published at Jamestown, D. T., and if the first number is any criterion to judge by, Dakota agricultural papers will have to look well to their laurels or the Farmer will take the lead. It is a neatly printed well gotten up paper, magazine form, replete with original matter pertaining to farming in the Northwest and would be a valuable paper for North Minnesota farmers to have.

Mr. Boucher, who returned from a visit in California, the 14th of last month, gave the JOURNAL a pleasant call last Saturday, giving a very pleasing account of his travels and the different scenes and climates of the various States and Territories, which he passed through, and says what he has seen of the different farming lands, he has came to the conclusion that his farm on the Red River is the place for him to earn his bread and to have it bountifully and well spread with the fresh and pure butter, of which we have abundance and above all to enjoy life and have his usual good health.

Mr. Chas. Greenhalgh has been appointed agent for that great work relating to commerce and the industrial arts entitled "The Universal Assistant and Complete Mechanic," containing 500 engravings and over 1,000,000 industrial Facts, Calculations, Receipts, Processes, Trade Secrets, Business Forms etc. from the Household to the Manufactory. This is one of the most valuable works of its kind ever published and should be in the hands of every engineer, mechanic and business man in the country. The price of this work is very low, only $3 which brings it within the reach of all. Persons living at a distance can secure the work by addressing Chas. Greenhalgh, Crookston, Minn.

F. M. Brown is enjoying the holidays with friends at home.

Mr. Wm. Kistonmacher has had quite a sick spell but is able to be about again.

Mrs. Edward Carey assisted by Mrs. D. Buchanan will receive New Year's calls at Mrs. Carey's residence on Ash Street, from 2 till 6.

Mr. Johnson, who is employed on the Argus at Fargo, gave us a pleasant call on Tuesday, enroute from a visit to his old home at Red Lake Falls.

School and trouble commences on Monday morning next at 9 a. m. If you can't come promptly bring along a reasonable excuse and stay away till you can.

Remember the ball to be given tomorrow night, New Year's Eve, and those who anticipate attending may be assured of its being the most enjoyable and first class party given this season.

The Rev. H. L. House preached a very eloquent and scholarly discourse upon the birth of our Saviour, last Sunday evening, which was listened to by a large and attentive congregation in the Baptist Church.

Last Friday night at about midnight the wind of usual docility, turned itself loose meandering around our city and surrounding coutry, shaking things up in general, but doing no material harm more than causing a few of the old ladies and children a very restless and long night.

"When the spring time comes gentle Annie"—But a few days more, gentle Annie, and where is our ice for cream and lemonade coming from for next summer time—Gentle Annie, what thinkest thou of this unpredicted weather racket—Do thou not thinkest, that it behooves those who wish to procure ice, to do so, without further delay?

John Cromb laid down the ermine (don't it?) and the new Register picked up the tripod (ain't it?) on Thursday last and still time wiggles along about as usual. They say Register Smith fits in like an old shoe. After a brief rest Mr. Cromb will return to the practice of his profession, the law, and hang out his shingle in this city.

Peter Cornelius recently took a grist to the Fertile flouring mills, and was so well pleased with results that he wishes THE JOURNAL to tell its readers that Messrs. Sohler & Kankle have an A No. 1 mill and know how to run it. He received 38½ lbs. of flour, 11½ lbs. of bran and 5½ lbs. of shorts per bushel. He claims at that rate of toll his wheat would bring him a round dollar per bushel.

The Catholic fair which is being held in the opera house, thus far is a most enjoyable and pleasing success, to the Chuch and for those who have attended; it being in charge of ladies and gentlemen, who are devoting their whole time and attention to meet with the financial success it deserves. The different amusements are of the highest order, and those who are attending give compliments to those in charge for the hearty welcome extended, and last, but not least, the tables which are bountefully and temptingly spread with eatables and also with the best of oysters.

THE JOURNAL has been favored of late with a newsy letter from some of its most valued correspondents and wishes to return its sincere thanks for the same. We trust that these few showers will not be succeeded by a DROUTH but that the good work may go on until every town in the county shall be represented. There ought to be at least one in every town to appreciate the advantage the town receives from these letters enough to make the effort to write us. The letters that are of most value are these spicy little news letters, chatty, bright and social and newsy withal—like our two last from Edna. Such letters have a vast deal of interest for the inhabitents of the town and they speak volumes to the stranger abroad into whose hands they may come. And THE JOURNAL is always glad to get them. Let us have more of them friends.

Farmers have complained very bitterly, and in many cases justly, of the undue share that elevator men have exacted for handling wheat. Some elevator men have seemed to act upon the idea that they must realize as much for handling the wheat as the farmers do for producing it, and yet the idea seems to have obtained among farmers that elevator men are not making enough out of them so that they seem willing to also contribute toward furnishing the fuel to run the elevators with. We are forced to this conclusion from the fact that most, if not all of the elevator engines at Duluth are run by the refuse straw and weed seed heads that farmers ship in their wheat and pay the freight on. It would be a matter of surprise to see the tons and tons of the stuff that the farmers kindly furnish them and pay the freight on. Is it not enough to pay the exhorbitant handling charges without adding this bonus? Some may suppose that they are allowed on all this dirt, but the idea is a false one, for the buyers are too sharp to be caught by chaff and the farmers pay the fiddler every time.

Mr. Marshall, Superintendent of the Red River Valley Elevator Co. can not see how there can be any material advance in wheat, as there is no foreign demand for it or flour.

George Tunnell, buyer for the Minneapolis & Northwestern. "I do not believe that the high prices expected by farmers will be realized. Prices will probably advance some over present quotations."

Edward Carey, buyer for Crookston Roller Mills. "At the commencement of the season I had expected high prices for this crop, but as the visible supply keeps increasing each week, and the price of flour so low, with no foreign demand for either wheat or flour, and no prospect for a demand, I can not see how prices can range much higher, but think they will reach 76 to 78c."

In order to allow all who as yet have been unable to take advantage of our premium offer we have made arrangments with Farm, Stock and Home to continue the offer until Feb. 1st. Many have accepted and we have not seen one who is disappointed. The universal verdict is that Farm, Stock and Home is the best agricultural paper in the State. At the cost no farmer can afford to keep house without it.

Chronicles of Woodside.

And it came to pass in the first year of the reign of King Cleveland, in the twelfth month and on the 1st day of the month, that there lived in the province of Woodside a man whose sir name was Smith, and it came to pass that he whose name was Smith saw a comely widow, whose name was Adelia, and whose former name was Redlon, and he was smitten of her beauty and comliness, so that sleep forsook him and visions of angels flitted across his mind. And it came to pass that after many days he reasoned thus in his mind and said: "it is not good for man to live alone." Then he got himself up and said "let us be joined together for life according to the laws of this country." And Adelia answered, "yes, verily." Now, it came to pass that there lived not far distant a lawgiver whose sir name was Bone, and to him of the law did a lad go with a letter from he who was called Smith, saying "we pray you come to us at the sixth hour of the day and make us one; even man and wife." And the lad after bowing himself thrice in the presence of the lawgiver presented the letter, and returned. Now, there was invitations sent to those who were accounted worthy to attend the marriage feast. And, on the 24th day of the month, there were great preparations at the house of David, who was the father of the comely Adelia. The bride and bridegroom were arrayed in elegant apparel, and the wedding supper was spread, and the guests were assembled, but the lawgiver came not. Yet with anxious hearts did they await, saying, "surely he will not disappoint us." But still the lawgiver came not nor sent any word. Now, it came to pass that after waiting from the sixth to the ninth hour of the day, the bride arose and said: "strangers and kinsfolks, seeing the wedding supper is spread, and all things are now ready, let us eat of the supper and then if the lawgiver come not we will seek another." And it came to pass that after the supper was eaten and there was a silence among the guests. Then one of the guests arose and said: "Seeing that the lawgiver has not come to perform the ceremony which would make this couple one flesh, let us get ourselves away to an High Priest who lives not many leagues to the north, even in the presence of Mentor, he will not surely disappoint us." And the words of the aged man who was a man of experience in such affairs, was hearkened to with gladness. And it came to pass that about the eleventh hour of the day that the bride and bridegroom, together with a party of guests, did make ready and go in a chariot to the high priest, even unto Mentor. And when they came nigh unto the place of the high priest, and alighted from the chariot, and came into the presence of him of the long robe, they stood still and said "all hail!" and the high priest beckoned to them and said: "What wouldst thou, my children?" And one of the guests whose name was Robert K. answered and said: "This couple have journeyed from afar, even from the wicked Province of Woodside, and have shaken the dust from off their feet and now beseech you that you make them man and wife after the manner of the law of your holy order and the law of the land!" and it was so. And the high priest came forward and bowed himself thrice, and said "be it as thou wilt," and the twain was made one flesh according to the law in the presence of the guests. And it came to pass that they tarried in the goodly province of Mentor for the space of one night, and on the morrow did return to the house of David and was greeted and welcomed on their return. And David said "be thou and thine happy and prosperous all the days of thy life!" and it was so. Now it came to pass that there were murmurings in the wicked province of Woodside because of the unseemingly behavior of the lawgiver of that province. And the young men and maidens lifted up their voices and were loud in condemning the lawgiver, and took council together to slay him, even as did the people of olden times. But one of their number said to them, "be of not so wicked a mood; wist ye not that the lawgiver is a young man, and not of a bad nature? He is not accustomed to weddings. Now let us be of a kindly spirit and forgive him; as we hope to be forgiven." And they answered and said "'tis good council, and as we may need his services ourselves, we will be reconciled. But what shall be the last days of that lawgiver is not written in the Book of Chronicles of Woodside.

Christmas once more, how pleasing the sound to men and children alike, the feast prepared each year brghtens the home of all, and makes sturdy manhood and strengthens the the falteringsteps of old age.

Owing to the kindness of Mr. and Mrs D. Haight the little folks made Christmas a day of enjoyment never to be forgotten by them. At one o'clock they opened their doors to the children; having prepared for them a bounteous dinner and a Christmas tree at which each child was remembered. They all went home feeling very happy.

Forty-Eighth Volume

OF THE NEW YORK

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Unprecedented Attractions for 1886.

In addition to WILKIE COLLINS' great serial (just commenced, and back numbers of which can be furnished to all new subscribers who desire it) arrangements have been made for

A New Novel by Mrs. Oliphant,

to be commenced in April, as well as

A Brilliant Romance by Wm. Black,

to follow in the month of July, together with

Another Sterling Story by Miss Braddon,

But, besides the works of these distinguished authors on the other side of the Atlantic, new stories have been secured from the following noted American writers:

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT,
FRANK R. STOCKTON,
CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK,
J. T. TROWBRIDGE,
EDWARD EVERETT HALE,
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS,
ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS,
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD,
SIDNEY LUSKA,

and others of distinguished fame, making altogether an unprecedented combination of talent unequaled by any of the leading magazines of the metropolis.

The Opening Story of the New Volume (for January 3, 1886) is entitled

MUCH ADO

BY FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,

Author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," "Through One Administration," "A Fair Barbarian," &c., &c., &c.

In presenting these superior attractions, the New York Sunday Mercury will not lose any of those varied and attractive features which, for nearly Fifty Years, have made it a welcome guest to a Hundred Thousand Families throughout the length and breadth of the land. It will continue as heretofore to make a which it will furnish more accurately than any of the so-called dramatic journals—mere trade papers, which have no influence with the theatrical profession and no circulation among the people.

ALL THE BEST HUMORISTS OF THE COUNTRY

Including Bill Nye, F. E. Huddle, Opie P. Read, Elie Adams, Alex. E. Sweet, are regular contributors to the New York Sunday Mercury, which far surpasses in merit and variety any humorous paper in the world.

The same attention will be paid as heretofore to all the LIVE SENSATIONS OF THE WEEK, and in fact those who subscribe for the New York Sunday Mercury will have a combination of first-class reading matter such as no other paper in the country can present. In fact the New York Sunday Mercury offers all the literary features of a first class Magazine, the News Features of a Leading Daily, and the Combined Attractions of a Family Newspaper.

The New York Sunday Mercury for 1886 will be mailed, postage free, to subscribers in any part of the United States for $2.00 per annum or $1.00 for six months. Sample copies sent free to any address. WM. CAULDWELL, Proprietor, No. 8 Park Row, New York. [illegible]

Know Ye! Know Ye All! Men, women and children—that the great staff of editors, who headed by Dr. George Thurber, have kept the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST AT THE FRONT for twenty-five years, are now re-enforced by Chester P. Dewey and Seth Green, the Fish Culturist. We propose to add to the hundreds of thousands of homes in which the

is read, and revered from the Atlantic to the Pacific an old time friend and counselor. We are accordingly enlarging the

HEARTH, HOUSEHOLD AND JUVENILE DEPARTMENTS,

and adding other features, so that it is to be, from this time onward, essentially a HOME PERIODICAL, as well as being devoted to Agriculture and Horticulture. Every person who IMMEDIATELY sends $1.50, THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, and 15 Cents for posting books, making $1 65 in all, will receive the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST for 1886, and the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST LAW BOOK, just published—a compendium of every-day Law for Farmers, Mechanics, Business Men, Manufacturers, etc., enabling every one to be his own lawyer. It is a large volume, weighing one pound and a half, and elegantly bound in Cloth and Gold. The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST to yield bigger returns by increasing its great army of readers. We distributed 60,000 Presents to those who aided in the work last year, and we are planning to give 100,000 Presents to workers this year. Send for Confidential Terms for workers, when you forward your subscription. Subscription price, $1.50 a year; single numbers 15 cents.

WANTS THE EARTH,

A farmer from Angus dropped in to see us on Thursday and to thank us for the interest the JOURNAL has shown in the Holstein cattle. He says that the course the JOURNAL has pursued in calling the attention of farmers to this excellent all purpose animal will be worth thousands of dollars to the country, if it will be the means of introducing these famous cattle. He told us that he had been acquainted with the Holstein—Friesians from boyhood up, as he is a native of Holland, (where they originated) and he knows that there is not a better breed of cattle for the Northwestern farms in existence. They will make from two to three pounds of butter per day while in milk, will raise a fine thrifty calf and will weigh as much as any beef in existance when wanted for beef. Said he "I want to tell you that the JOURNAL is doing a valuable work for farmers in advocating the Holstein cattle, a work which although at present it may be hard for them to understand and appreciate, yet is worth thousands of dollars to Polk County. You have not said one word too much in praise of this noble breed and you can not; they will amply justify all you can say for them. I see that you have succeeded in getting a few men to buy and bring in a few thoroughbreds, which will not only be a good thing for those who have done so, but will prove a lasting benefit to the stock interests of the county. They are the coming cow for the Northwest and the time is not far distant, when they will be as common here as the native now is. It does not cost any more to keep them than it does a native and they will best the native four to one. I hope the JOURNAL will keep on in the good work, until we see nothing else but the Holstein—Friesians in every pasture in Polk County." We can hardly agree with our friend that the Holstein—Friesians will drive out every other breed for there are many excellent breeds of cattle in the world and while we honestly believe that the Holstein—Friesians come the nearest to a general all purpose cow that is possible to get, all do not so agree, and the result is that Guernseys, Ayrshires, Jerseys, Alderneys, and Red Polls have their strong friends, as milkers, and others prefer the beef breeds, such as Herefords, Shorthorns, Polled Angus and the like, and the result is that all of the breeds will obtain a following. The Holstein—Friesians will not suffer by comparison and a sharp competition will only serve to bring out their good points more prominently. As to the good work the JOURNAL has done by introducing them, we will say that we appreciate our friend's honest opinions of it and would say that it was the result of an opinion formed some years since that the full success of the country would not be obtained until there were more good cows here. We then began to study the relative merits of the different breeds and after a long and careful consideration of the subject decided in favor of the Holstein—Friesians. We then purchased a few for trial, and the result of that trial but strengthens us in the opinions we had formed and we are confident that all who try and use them will never be sorry for it. This is the universal verdict of all who have given them a fair trial so far as we have heard.

I feed nothing but good hay and water. They are very quiet in the summer time and are content with a much smaller range than are native cattle, and do well on much poorer pasture. Frank Siddalls, the greatest Philadelphia advertiser, is reported to have lately remarked, as a fact worthy of comment, that he had never had a personal application for patronage from the Newspaper Advertising Bureau of Geo. P. Rowell & Co. of New York. The reason for this may be found, not in the fact that Messrs. Rowell & Co. do not want business, or are unwilling to drum for it, but that they find a cheaper and more efficacious way of securing patronage is to keep their names before the public by using the advertising columns of the newspapers. Doing this they attract those advertisers who want their services, and avoid annoying or wasting the time of those who have not yet arrived at that conclusion. The newspaper is the most [illegible] and at the same time the best mannered of all advertising canvassers.

The Future of Wheat.

Northwestern Farmer.

A great deal has been written upon the future of wheat growing in America and in this connection an array of figures have frequently been produced to show that India wheat is gradually absorbing the foreign demand for the American staple. "Figures don't lie" is what they say, and the they go about to construe the result of their calculations to their own style of reasoning.

The fact that wheat has been a poor paying crop throughout the United States during the past two years, is not denied, but that it stands in any immediate or remote danger of suffering a permanent decline on account of India wheat, or that of any other foreign country, is against all reason and should not be entertained for a moment.

Last year America produced an enormous crop of the leading cereal, and the markets of the world were glutted, the visible supply still operates to keep prices lower, while any one of many causes might exhaust this supply which gives the bears the excuse they are so eager to magnify, and one which they know well how to handle.

There is every reason to expect a revival of wheat culture in this country, and the farmers of the great Northwest, of Dakota and Minnesota, will reap the largest share of the profit from such a revival, because now here on this continent can wheat be raised as cheaply as in this section and the quality of our wheat will always command a higher price in any market over the inferior article grown east and south.

The talk of India competition is simply nonsense. The first cost of India wheat is trifling because labor there is of little worth, but the cost of transporting it, and its poor quality makes it a very poor competitor of No. 1 hard wheat, such as is raised in this country. Rice to the native Hindoo is what wheat and flour is to the American; it is their staple. What the development of wheat raising will do in that country is simply speculation, but if wheat still continues to be raised there, it is not at all probable that it will take the place of their time honored rice diet, and then what will become of their wheat crop, among their millions of people? We confidently look for better prices for the great staple of the Northwest and that the decreasing of the wheat acreage in this country because prices are not low will prove to be a very great mistake.

FARM NOTES.

Farmers' Tribune.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Wheat farming, under certain circumstances, has paid a very handsome profit, but an exclusive wheat crop soon exhausts the fertility of the soil, the yield per acre gradully decreases, and it soon becomes an unprofitable business.

Another objection to all wheat farming is that it does not give the farmer continuous employment, but condenses the labor of the entire year into less than three months' time. Our ideal farm should be something more than a business; it should be a home. Our model farmer should be one whose first aim should be to make the farm and home better each year. In deciding what crops to grow he should estimate, not alone the dollars and cents it will bring in the market, but the labor necessary to produce it, the drain on the fertility of his soil, the risk of damage from drouth, frost and storms, and the fluctuation of the markets. A given crop may bring a good price per acre and yet be unprofitable for the farmer on account of the labor required to produce it, or because it robs the land of more than it is worth. There is more or less of vegetable and mineral matter in all soil that is in proper condition to produce grain or vegetables. This is the farmer's active capital, which he should seek to use to the best possible advantage, and he should seek to increase his capital by increasing the amount of vegetable and mineral matter in his soil that will be in condition to be used as a plant food. If he does this judiciously the yield of grain and vegetables will increase. If however he should follow a system of farming that decreases the fertility of the soil, he is encroaching on his capital, and is on the direct road to bankruptcy. This is exactly what an all wheat crop will do, it robs the land, and in a very few years the farmes who sells nothing but wheat finds he has sold his farm. Intelligent, systematic experiments have shown that with a judicious rotation of crops in connection with a proper amount of stock, the fertility of a farm may be increased. To do this most profitably sell from the farm those products which take from it the least valuable matter in proportion to dollars and cents returned. The persons engaged in every other kind of business bring to their aid all the appliances of modern science. If the farmer neglects to do the same he is at a disadvantage, as compared with men engaged in other occupations. It is a common thing to sneer at book farming, yet this same book-farming has developed many valuable truths. Day by day brain is gaining the ascendency over muscle. Some men are so lacking in energy, sense and tact that > "All the learning of all the schools

> Could not redeem them from a race of fools."

It is reasonable to suppose that a man who is a fairly successful farmer without an education, would be a farmer if educated for his business, and it is not likely that an educated farmer would advocate or practice all wheat farming

The recent decision of Judge Koen, holding the law against the manufacture of butterine to be unconstitutional, is being freely critisised by the agricultural press, and was a prominent subject of discussion at the State convention of dairymen at Red Wing. It is not at all probable that those who make good dairy butter will be injured by the manufacture or sale of imitation butter. Butter that is well made and properly handled finds a ready market at a good price, has always been in demand and always will be. The maker of poor butter and the dealer who sells it will be compelled to compete with butterine. Restaurants, hotels and boarding houses that now use the grade of butter that is shipped in from country merchants in barrels and boxes will give their victims butterine.

The new compound will be the less odorous, and in that respect will be an improvement on 6,000,000 pounds of Minnesota butter that has been sold the past season for an average price of six cents a pound, and which cost the producer more than the best grades which have averaged 25 cents. The remedy for this lies, not in the laws that will drive out competition with the unprofitable, bad-smelling product, but in such an improvement of the quality of the product as shall raise it above competition. No sympathy should be wasted on those who make or sell a compound of grease and poor butter as an article of food, nor with the butter-maker who makes such poor butter that it goes begging for a market at 8 cents, while with the same kind of cows and feed his neighbor makes an article that finds a ready market at 25 cents. Destroy the market for butterine by making nothing but good butter.

Polk County Journal.

CROOKSTON, MINN., DEC. 31.

FERTILE ITEMS.

FERTILE, Dec. 30, 1885.

Bonds carried by large majority. We have no doubt of a fine, thrifty town here if managed rightly, but we don't want any boom.

Mr. and Mrs. Kankle gave a party last night at the christening of their little daughter.

Ole Rice is very sick; cannot recover.

We had the heaviest wind storm between 4 and 5 a. m. to-day, that I ever saw here. A board was blown through La Due & Co's store front. L.

WOODSIDE WARBLINGS.

It has been some time since your correspondent has written for THE JOURNAL. Owing to my being now a hopeless cripple, confined most of the time to the house, I have but little of interest to write.

We are now much interested in listening to railroad whistles on that old ignesfatuus, (Delusive light.)

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Knowles lost their only child last Wednesday, the 16th inst.

Mr. M. E. Bartlet is now in the neighborhood, the guest of Mr. Charles Churchill.

We understand that Dr. A. A. Just has disposed of his farm in the town of Knute, Wm. Anderson being the purchaser.

Mr. O. Smith is in our neighborhood to stay for the winter.

We are informed that Daniel Cameron will start up his saw-mill in the town of Garden, on the south side of Union lake, after the holidays.

The firm of Goodrich & Rome are making extensive preparations for sawing this winter. They now have about 1,000 logs skidded up ready for their mill yard, and as there are as many more in the neighborhood, we expect to see one million feet of logs in the yard in the course of the winter. As both members of this firm are widely known as good sawyers and honest, pleasant gentlemen, they will no doubt have as large a trade as they had last season, and that would imply selling at a fair profit all the lumber they can cut.

Our school is now being taught by Miss Helen Stoddard, and is well attended.

Mr. Samuel Dunfee killed two fine deer lately.

Mr. Works has built a new house in the town of Woodside, 18x20, with a kitchen 18x15.

T. J. West has built a new house, 20x26 two stories high, with an ell 14x15; also has a new cellar 12x20, seven feet deep, perfectly dry and frost proof.

Charles and George West completed a new bridge on the county road Nov. 29th, twenty-four feet span and double planked, which is pronounced by all a good job.

Mr. Charles Easley, a brother of Mrs. C. Snyder, left last Monday, the 15th, for the home of his father and mother in Indiana to spend the winter.
